MOTHER'S TEARS HOLD UP DECISION ON BOY'S CUSTODY

Judge Cancels Ruling Giving Child to Frank H. Bascom and Takes Case Under Advisement.

TESTIMONY ABOUT GIN AND CARD GAMES

Tale of "Oriental" Dancing Also Figures in Case Over Alexander Selkirk Bascom, 6 Years Old.

Tales of gin, whisky, card games and Oriental dancing were climaxed by 10 minutes of tears at a hearing in Circuit Court at Clayton yesterday to determine whether Alexander Selkirk Bascom, 6 years old, is to live with his father or his mother.

The tears prevailed over the rest, and after Judge Wurdeman had awarded the child to Frank H. Bascom, Mrs. Edward D. Meier, Bascom's divorced wife, went into hysterics and the Judge canceled his decision and took the case under advisement. The boy was not in court.

As on previous days of testimony, the courtroom was crowded, each side having its own partisans. Bascom is general manager of the J. Selkirk & Sons Auction Co., and two of his business partners, W. J. Selkirk Jr. and Alexander Selkirk, yesterday testified for or against Mrs. Meier, formerly Miss Virginia Selkirk, their sister.

Married in 1918.

Bascom testified they were married June 26, 1918, and their honeymoon was a trip with the St. Louis Browns around the American League circuit, both being ardent baseball fans and friends of Leslie Tesmaker, then catcher for the Browns. The first 18 months of married life were happy, but were followed by slight spats, then serious quarrels, and then very strained relations, Bascom continued. In June, 1921, he said, his wife told him she did not love him and wanted to get out of his life and be "a free woman."

On the following July 3, they attended a house party on a friend's estate near Sappington. It was here, he testified, that his wife became very intoxicated" and started an immoral dance. Bascom said he was so disgusted that he went away on a fishing trip for 11 days. He returned, and his wife went away for five weeks. Since then he has not talked to her, he said.

Under cross-examination by her attorney, Bascom admitted he had quantities of gin on hand now and had, but denied he bootlegged. He called obtaining five-gallons of gin for some friends at the Normandie Golf Club on one occasion.

Testimony About Card Games.

Not only did his wife not object to his card games, he continued, but she insisted he play so he would have winnings to share with her. She once told him, he said, that he should make money at cards, if not at business.

The testimony of Ben J. Selkirk kept the courtroom in good humor. He said he and Bascom played cards on Saturday nights and "Frank's playing was never reprehensible and he always made a generous division with his wife." He said his sister had a "most unfortunate" disposition and vented her temper on Bascom and nagged him. His sister associated with her present husband before divorcing Bascom, and introduced him to "Ed Martin," the witness recalled.

Cross-examined, the witness declared Bascom ever was drunk, but admitted he was "tight" now and then. For himself, he said he drank freely" prior to last Nov. 1, when he has not "touched a drop."

Gin in Water Bottles.

He denied that Bascom engaged in the "gin and bootleg business on a big scale," but said it was "perfectly true" that Bascom had gin delivered in large "crystal water bottles" at the Selkirk company's office. This was not sold, but was given to customers.

"I helped buy it with Frank, and we shared it," he testified. "It was used for business purposes, and sometimes proved effective in promoting business."

Asked if he knew whether his sister's disposition had changed for the better lately, he replied: "I guess so, but I don't know."

Alexander L. Selkirk, the other brother, testified his sister once drank whisky and became intoxicated at Hotel Statler, made remarks to her neighbors and could not get up in her chair." He said he paid a head waiter $5 to help assist her from the dining

Minds of Students Alert After Nonsleep Test

Blood Pressure Decreased With Lack of Rest and Caffeine Proved Disappointment as a Stimulant.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—George Washington University professors have concluded their nonsleep test and found that the "students' mental alertness was just as keen at the end of the tests as at the start." Now, a social test, to appraise a student's ability to mix with people, or handle them, is to be made.

Nine persons were used in sleep test. Six of these, three men and three women, went without sleep for 60 consecutive hours, while two other men remained awake 80 hours. The ninth person, Dr. William Midleton, used as control subject, slept after 42 hours.

The University Hatchet, the organ of the school, reported: "Among the more important results of the test was the discovery that blood pressure decreased with lack of sleep. Likewise, it was found that red corpuscles decreased in number, while the white corpuscles became more numerous as the period of wakefulness was extended.

"One of the most startling revelations was the discovery that mental alertness was not impaired during the long period of insomnia. If anything, the students were more alert mentally at the end of 60 hours than they were at the beginning.

"Ability of the subjects to drive a car decreased markedly after 45 hours had passed," it was asserted. "In fact, it was almost impossible to keep them awake while driving between the forty-fifth and fiftieth hours. But after 55 hours had passed the students tended to shake off this drowsiness and felt more able to drive on the third night than they had on the second.

"Caffeine proved a disappointment as a stimulant throughout the tests. It had been given to four of the students to check its stimulative powers while the other four had abstained from its use. Those taking the drug fared no better than those who did not. However, when two of the students who had never used it before were given caffeine on the third night, it acted as a stimulant."

BOY HOLDS JOB AS OFFICIAL FIBBER FOR WORLD SERIES

Keeps All Ticket Seekers Except Congressmen Away From Washington Club Officials.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Perched on a stool at a telephone in the office of the Washington baseball club is a soprano-voiced boy about 14, fearing a weighty responsibility. He is the official fibber for the world series.

To the barrage of demands for conversation with officials who might produce tickets, he replies that they are all out unless the inquirer be a Congressman. But he makes sure of that and at the end of each little fib he asks naively: "Is this a Congressman?" If it be, the rest is easy; if it be not, they are still out.

Congressmen have risen in this world's series to a new dignity and prerogative for, indeed, they are about the only officials among the great and small who inhabit Washington who have the open sesame to getting tickets for the big series whether they have made reservations or not.

Scalpers lining the curbs on Pennsylvania avenue for two blocks and crowding lobbies of hotels and public buildings have pockets full of tickets which they will part with at prices averaging around $125 per set of two for the three games to be played here.

Box seats are being held at much higher prices and special premiums are asked on seats known to be near where President Coolidge and his party will sit.

EAST SIDE LIQUOR RUNNER OUT ON BOND

Agent Says Ray Stevenson and Gang Made $1,500,000 on Shipments From Gulf.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 3.—Ray E. Stevenson of East St. Louis, ex-convict, robber, gambler, bootlegger and associate of gangsters, who was arrested Friday in New Orleans by Federal prohibition agents as one of a whisky ring that has shipped liquor by the carload from gulf ports to St. Louis and vicinity, was released on bond today. He was charged with conspiring against the Federal Government, for which the bond was fixed at $7500, and possession of liquor, for which $1,000 was added to insure his appearance for trial.

In the arrest of Stevenson Federal Prohibition Director O. D. Jackson of New Orleans believes he has captured the ringleader of the whisky syndicate that Jackson announced had shipped 50 or more carloads of liquors from gulf ports to St. Louis and northern points, on which they made a profit of $1,500,000 in the last few years. Jackson hinted there would be other arrests to be made within the next few days.

Used Assumed Name.

Stevenson was registered at Hotel Monteleone as W. Garland. Director Jackson said, but was traced from East St. Louis to New Orleans recently and identified by Federal agents as the notorious East St. Louis gangster.

A carload of whisky, believed to have been shipped by Stevenson from a Mississippi coast point, is staid to be in transit for St. Louis at this time and J. B. Matthews, assistant to Jackson, is riding the car.

It will be recalled that Matthews about a year ago rode a carload of whisky from Louisiana to Chaminade siding, St. Louis County, but was thwarted in the capture of the bootleggers expected to claim it by a premature raid made by local Department of Justice agents and St. Louis County officials. Another carload of whisky was traced to East St. Louis by Matthews and seized in the terminal yards over there and destroyed.

Saloon Frequently Raided.

Stevenson in recent years conducted a gambling house and bootlegging joint at 103 North Third street, East St. Louis, that frequently has been raided by East St. Louis police. He has been fined in Belleville following these raids.

In 1912 he married Mrs. Claude Philpot, a widow of Nashville, Tenn., who formerly was Miss Nellie Sweeney of Carondelet. A few days later she had him arrested, charging that he had drugged her to induce her to go through the ceremony and compelled her to sign over $8500 to him and give him her jewels, valued at $5000. Stevenson was indicted. The case was dismissed when his wife refused to prosecute.

Later the same year he was sentenced to seven years in the Missouri State Penitentiary for driving an automobile for three robbers who slugged and robbed a St. Louis saloonkeeper of $3000. This was the first case of record in St. Louis of robbers using an automobile to escape.

After serving three years and six months in the penitentiary, during which time he was a chauffeur for the warden, Stevenson was paroled by former Gov. Major.

THOMPSON QUITS SHIP BOARD TO FIGHT TO SAVE IT

Alabaman Writes Coolidge Plan to End Regional Representation Threatens South and Southwest.

WOULD TAKE AWAY GULF STATES' VOICE

Wilson Appointee Will Join Foes of Proposal to Abolish Board as an Independent Office.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—In protest against proposals to abolish the shipping board, which he feels would destroy regional representation in the operation of the Government's merchant marine, Frederick I. Thompson of Mobile, Ala., the commissioner representing the Gulf States has tendered his resignation to President Pafiner to become effective Nov. 1 and it has been accepted.

Thompson, a newspaper publisher serving a five-year term which would not expire until 1929, was first appointed by President Wilson and re-appointed by Presidents Harding and Coolidge.

In his letter of resignation Thompson frankly stated to the President that he wished to retire so that he might be free to join with others in opposing the proposed change in the board's management and thus be relieved of any implication that he was prompted by self interest in wishing to retain his office.

Thompson, in his letter, touched only by inference on the recent clashes between the board and the President by saying that delegation of wider powers to the fleet corporation which was done at the President's wish and later revoked by the board, itself, had "destroyed regional voice and authority," adversely affected American flagship operation and weakened the country's influence in world trade.

Pointing out that the official statistics of the Department of Commerce show that 38 per cent of the exports last year originated in Southern and Southwestern States naturally tributary to Southern ports, Commissioner Thompson reiterated that if regional representation in the management of the Government's shipping were abandoned in the plans to abolish the Shipping Board as an independent administrative office of the Government similar to the Interstate Commerce Commission and join it to some executive branch of the Government, his section of the country and its people would be deprived of a voice in a subject vital to them.

The White House announcement said merely that the resignation had been tendered and accepted.

Commissioner Thompson's letter of resignation, dated today, was as follows:

"My Dear President:

"In November I shall have served five years as the commissioner of the United States Shipping Board from the Gulf States under the appointments of President Wilson, President Harding and yourself.

"It now appears certain that effort will be made to change the present shipping law, abolish the regional representation provided therein, and make it an executive branch instead of, as now, an independent administrative office of Government similar to the Interstate Commerce Commission. I wish to retire to be free to join with others in opposing such change without having it construed that such opposition was prompted by self-interest in wishing to retain the office. This would neutralize whatever influence may be possessed by myself or the newspapers published by me.

Takes Away Benefits.

"The experience gained by my five years of service has convinced me that those who are to administer the Government's agency of shipping should be appointed from the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf seaboards, the Great Lakes and the interior and that this is a wise and necessary provision of the present law. General administration of the duties imposed on the Board by the Congress is strengthened through administration by members possessing intimate knowledge of the needs and interest of their sections. Specific cases clearly evidence that control of ship operation by one man from one section, however appealing in principle, does not preserve equitable ocean transportation benefits or protection to the products of manufacturing or agricultural interests of all sections. ## FAIRMOUNT BARS WEEKE FOR RUNNING HANDBOOK

Officials Find St. Louis Politician Had Been Competing With Mutuals for Week.

Henry L. Weeke, more widely known as "Hank," St. Louis Republican politician and gambler, was ordered away from the Fairmount race track near Collinsville, Ill., yesterday, when it was discovered by officials of the enterprise that he was operating a handbook in competition with the betting system of the track.

According to members of the Fairmount Jockey Club, Weeke had been operating at the track since its opening last Saturday, taking and paying off bets at the regular race track figures while his operating expense was only $2.20 a day, the price of admission to the track.

Weeke, as is known, has been a power in local Republican politics for 20 years and was active as a member of the Republican City Central Committee until a few years ago when it was discovered that he was not legally a citizen of this country. His first attempt to obtain naturalization papers met with failure when the late Federal Judge Dyer refused his application on the ground that he was not of good moral character. Later, he was admitted to citizenship by Federal Judge Davis.

PROMOTER OF 'JOB WITH EVERY LOT' SALE ARRESTED

John M. Skala, Indicted for Operating Confidence Game, Posts Bond After Being Held Here.

CARRIED BADGE AS COUNTY DEPUTY

Held for St. Clair County (Ill.) Authorities, Promoter May Fight Extradition—Partner Named.

Two city detectives flashed their nickel-plated badges when John M. Skala, head of the United States Realty and Security Co., 712 Buder Building, walked into his office yesterday. They informed Skala he was under arrest on indictments charging him with "working a confidence game" in promoting an East St. Louis subdivision on a slogan of a-job-with-every-lot, most of the jobs to be in "Henry Ford's $28,000,000 glass factory," which does not exist.

Then Skala showed his badge. It was more brilliant than theirs—a gold-plated one that read: "Deputy Sheriff, St. Louis County." To prove he was a real deputy, Skala also produced a revolver. By permission of the detectives he locked badge and revolver in his office safe before accompany them to Central Police Station.

There hew as booked for the authorities of St. Clair County, two indictments having been returned at Belleville against him, and his partner, Mrs. Barbara Matta, who has not been found. Skala asked to see his lawyers and indicated he would not cross the river voluntarily.

May Fight Extradition.

"I represent Finis P. Ernst and the Southern Illinois Trust Co. of East St. Louis in promoting Alta Sita and other subdivisions around East St. Louis and Belleville. Me and they are 100 per cent honest, and I think the grand jury must have returned the indictments without investigating the complaints. I have 160 satisfied customers."

Skala gave his age as 37 and his address as 7917 Kingsbury avenue, University City. He came from Pittsburg about 1 7months ago. Asked if he was ever known as "Novak," he laughed and said he once gave that alias when arrested for disorderly conduct in Omaha.

He was released on $2000 bond signed by W. A. Morant, negro professional bondsman, and approved by Provisional Judge Grodzki of the Court of Criminal Correction, in whose division the bond is returnable here Saturday.

Sheriff Wilmas of St. Louis County told a Post-Dispatch reporter he appointed Skala a special deputy last April 6 on recommendation of "some of the most prominent men in Clayton." It is customary, he said, to make special deputies of men of good character who carry money or live in dark places, and who wish to be armed. Wilmas said he would investigate Skala's record and dismiss him, if the facts warranted such action.

Bank Acted as Trustee.

An official of the Southern Illinois Trust Co. said little was known there of Skala's methods, as the bank acted only as trustee for Alta Sita, executing the deeds after the property is sold and money paid.

The indictments against Skala and Mrs. Matta follow complaints to the St. Louis Better Business Bureau that misrepresentations were used to sell lots in Alta Sita. Lots were sold mostly to foreigners and miners from such places as Edwardsville, Staunton, Mt. Olive, Pana, Nokomis, Benld, Livingston and Willsonville, Ill., and Bonne Terre, Crystal City and Desloge, Mo.

A former saleswoman for the company made affidavit that Skala instructed her to tell prospects that Ford was going to build the glass factory in 138 acres in Alta Sita. On representations that the Ford factory and five other major industries would be close at hand to provide plenty of jobs for homebuilders, the company was able to sell for $25 a foot lots which had been purchased from Ernst for as low as $8 a foot, according to the affidavit.

A blueprint of the subdivision, which is in the southeast portion of East St. Louis, pictures six plants on Bond avenue, across the street from the home sites. The saleswoman said one plant was pointed out to prospects as Ford's factory and another as the Cahokia power plant which actually is on the river front.

The bureau also was informed that the man with whom they did

NURSE FOUND CHOKED TO DEATH NEAR HOME

Resident of Southern Suburb of Chicago Also Victim of Criminal Attack.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—The body of Miss Emma Bacon, a nurse employed at the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, was found near her home in Dolton, Ill., this morning. She had been attacked and strangled. One glance at the dead body and its surroundings indicated that she had fought desperately. Her clothing had been torn into shreds. Finger marks were visible on her throat.

The village of Dolton is just south of Chicago.

The last her friends know about Miss Bacon is that she was aboard an Illinois Central train which arrived at Riverdale about 9 o'clock Friday night. Assuming she alighted there she would have had a walk of a mile to her home.

Miss Bacon's father, Elijam Bacon, and her brothers live in Murrayville, Ill. She had been employed at the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, 360 N. Michigan avenue, as a community nurse.

Dr. Joseph B. Springer, coroner's physician, said the girl had been attacked and that death was due to strangulation.

Bloodhouds were brought in from Indiana Harbor.

27 TRAINS OF PILGRIMS

60,000 Visit Lourdes on Day of Virgin's Nativity.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Twenty-seven special trains were required recently to carry the pilgrims of one day to Lourdes, the "Miracle town" of France, where the Virgin Mary is said to have appeared as a child in 1858 and where a magnificent church now stands on the supposed site of that apparition. Pilgrims flock thither, hoping for miraculous cures through the intercession of the Virgin.

The day was that of the nativity of the Virgin, and the nnmber of visitors was estimated at 60,000. The largest group was one of 6000 from Cambrai; and others were 3500 from Rouen, 2500 from Coutances, which has a population of only 7000, and 1100 from Grenoble. From abroad some 120 pilgrims from England, including 15 cripples, several of these being Protestants; 1200 pilgrims from Italy, including 400 sick, and 600 from Portugal, 30 of whom were seeking cures. Each of the French parties brought groups of lame and sick varying from 400 to 40.

KEOKUK DAM MERGED WITH THE UNION ELECTRIC CO.

Consolidation Means Creation of the Largest Power System in the Middle West.

FIELD OF ST. LOUIS FIRM BROADENED

Operation in Conjunction With Cahokia Plant Also Means Greater Output, It Is Stated.

Creation of the largest power system in the Middle West was accomplished yesterday when negotiations were completed which will deliver control and operation of the hydro-electric dam at Keokuk, Ia., to Union Electric Light and Power Co.

It was announced in New York that North American Co., which owns Union Electric, had acquired a majority of the common stock of the Mississippi River Power Co., which owns the dam. Stone and Webster now operate the dam.

Frank L. Dame, president of North American Co., noted that the deal would unite Cahokia, the new 300,000 kilowatt steam plant of Union Electric, with Keokuk, the largest hydro-electric development in the Mississippi Valley under ideal conditions for a larger system.

Union's Field Extended.

Union Electric's field of service now is extended to include Keokuk and a group of Illinois and Iowa cities on the north, to the lead belt of Missouri on the south, a distance of about 250 miles.

The terms, it was announced, called for exchange of 1 2-3 shares of the common stock of North American for 1 share of Mississippi River Power. The alternative of $100 cash or par is offered to the power company stockholders.

Physical valuation of the Keokuk dam is in excess of $20,000,000. It has about 120,000 of installed horsepower and delivers at this time about half its output to Union Electric. The remainder is distributed to the cities of Keokuk, Hannibal, Quincy, Burlington, Fort Madison and a number of towns served by the Central Illinois Public Service Co. The power company does not operate the utilities in these cities, but acts as a wholesaler of power to local companies.

Means Increased Output.

Dame pointed out that the tying together of a large steam plant with a large waterpower plant would enable the Keokuk plant to use more fully the flow of the Mississippi River. Thus, the output of Keokuk can be materially increased. The arrangement virtually means that when there is plenty of water in the river, Keokuk will carry the load, it being cheaper of operation. In times of low water, Cahokia becomes a standby to assume the burden of production.

EAST ST. LOUIS WOMAN AT 45, MARRIED 14 TIMES

Another Page in Matrimonial Record Revealed When She Has a Former Husband Arrested.

Mrs. Alexander Yates of East St. Louis, who at last accounts had been married 13 times, has boosted her record another notch. It became known last night with the arrest of her thirteenth husband on a peace disturbance charge that she had divorced him and married No. 14, who also was No. 12.

No. 13 was Henry Lafarge, 52 years old, a laborer. He was arrested at an East St. Louis dance hall on an assault and battery warrant sworn out by his former wife, who declares he struck her when they met at the home of a mutual friend Friday. After Lafarge had been arrested he revealed that his former wife had been married April 21 last to Alexander Yates. Yates was her twelfth husband but was divorced before she married Lafarge.

According to best statistics, Mrs. Yates has had only 11 husbands, one having made three attempts at matrimony with her and another, Yates, two. She has secured nine divorces for cruelty, two for infidelity. One marriage was annulled. In one case she was divorced by her husband because she refused to live with him after he had got out of jail. She lives at 101 North Sixth street, East St. Louis. She is 45 years old.

NAVY LAUNCHES BIGGEST SHIP EVER BUILT IN AMERICA

Airplane Carrier Lexington, Longest War Vessel in World, Is Fourth U. S. Vessel So Christened.

PROOF OF PROGRESS, WILBUR DECLARES

Moffett Joins Chief in Reply to Recent Criticism of the Navy's Air Policy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

QUINCY, Mass., Oct. 3.—The new airplane carrier U. S. S. Lexington, the longest war vessel in the world and the biggest ship ever constructed in this country, was launched at the Fore River yards of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation here today. Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was sponsor for the new vessel. Secretary Wilbur, Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts, Mayor Curley of Boston, Senators Butler and Gillett and Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation were among the large crowd which witnessed the ceremony.

Wilbur Stresses Air Defense.

Dedicating the aircraft carrier "as an implement for the maintenance of free government," Secretary Wilbur declared it was "a witness bearing silent testimony to the belief of the men and officers of the American Navy in the use of aircraft for national defense."

"It is the witness bearing testimony," the Secretary said, "that Congress believes in the development of aircraft as a means of national defense. The liberal appropriations for the construction of the Lexington and Saratoga, with their equipment, passing Congress by unanimous consent, are irrefutable proof that every member in the legislative halls of Congress believes that the Navy needs aircraft in the performance of its functions.

"Every blow of the hammer used in her constructio. gives vocal protest to the unthinking declaration that the American Navy is hidebound with conservatism and immovably anchored by barnacle-encrusted chains to the things of the past.

Lansdowne's Last Words.

"With all the changes from wood to iron, from wind power to steam, and to electricity, from cast iron smooth bore cannon to the modern high-power guns there is a thread which binds us irrevocably to the past, and God grant that it may never be severed.

"It is the thread which we call the spirit of the American Navy. You may find that spirit exemplified and vocalized throughout the history of the American Navy. It manifested itself in the quiet words of Lansdowne when he was fighting his battle in the clouds, 'We will go through together.' It is this spirit of courage, of subordination, of resourcefulness, of daring, of initiative, of advance, that we invoke today as we stand here dedicating a new ship to the cause of liberty and the preservation of American rights and privileges."

Moffett Replies to Critics.

Rear Admiral Moffett, replying to recent criticism of the Navy's air policy, said he wished that the critics could have seen the launching of the Lexington.

"I think it would make those who know very little about the Navy realize just what the Navy is going for aviation. We have operating over 140 airplanes actually at sea. The yrepresent the defensive branch of our service. The Lexington will represent the offensive branch of activity."

The airplane carried Lexington measures 888 feet from bow to stern and has a breadth of 106 feet. The craft will be able to plow through the waves at a rate of 33 knots or almost 39 miles an hour. She is electrically driven, the power being furnished from the eight motors by four turbine generators totaling 180,000 horsepower. The steam for these turbines will be supplied by 16 oil-burning boilers. Completed, she will weigh 33,000 tons. The Lexington is being built for the U. S. Navy by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

Her most novel feature is the arrangement of her deck. All the superstructure—the eight 8-inch guns in twin mounts, the twelve 5-inch antiaircraft guns, the smokestack, the navigation bridge, the wireless mast—is on the starboard side of the deck, giving a broad, unobstructed surface from which the planes can take off and on which they can alight. The Lexington and her sister ship, the Saratoga, launched at Camden last April, differ from the Langley, the experimental airplane carrier, in this respect; the Langley having a deck superimposed on her superstructure.

The Navy building program provides for the construction of five carriers, but under the Washington Conference agreements of 1922 the three yet to be built cannot exceed 22,000 tons. The Lexington and the Saratoga were originally intended as battle cruisers when the 1916 program was adopted, but after their keels had been laid they were changed to airplane carriers.

Problems Yet to Be Solved.

As a result of continued experimentation with the Langley, the Navy officials feel that the Lexington and the Saratoga are as efficient and serviceable as could be desired. The great problem, the answer to which will be determined only in trials, is whether planes will be able to alight on and take off from the ship in rough weather. The Langley, being smaller and more susceptible to the rolling of the waves, proved to be a stable enough vessel in calm seas only. But it is believed that the tremendous size of these new vessels will enable them to provide a landing place for the planes in all kinds of weather. This is a very important consideration, for if the contrary should prove true, the airplane carriers could be used to fight only in fair weather and would be totally useless in engagements which take place under conditions similar to those of the Battle of Jutland.

Another problem which required study was the wing spread of the planes that these ships are to carry. The amount of storage room aboard these ships limits the size and body construction of the planes.

The name which the new airplane carrier will bear is a historic one in the American Navy, and about the ships which have carried it there are many stories. Three other ships, serving in three wars, have perpetuated the name of that Massachusetts town where was "fired the shot heard round the world."

room, after which he took her home in a taxicab. He also testified she associated, prior to divorcing Bascom, with "Ed Martin" and "Mr. McCausland." He thought the latter was married, but Mrs. Meier corrected him, saying: "He's not a married man—he's a divorced man."

Pastor Testifies.

The Rev. Father John Collins, pastor of Visitation Church, testified he had known the Bascom family for 35 years and he felt sure they would assist Frank H. Bascom in taking good care aof his son.

In announcing his decision to award the child to Bascom, Judge Wurdeman observed that Mrs. Meier was apparently very unsettled as to residence, having lived recently in California, St. Louis, New York and Florida. If the child went to her, Meier would be its foster-father, and Judge Wurdeman could not see why Meier should wish to be that, as he was not awarded custody of his own child when divorced.

"Mrs. Meier apparently has recovered her mother's love for the child which, I think, she lost at one time, especially so when she did not ask for custody at the time of divorce," Judge Wurdeman declared.

"In all my experience on the bench, I have not seen a mother come into my court who did not desire the custody of her child, if of tender age, even though it might prevent her getting a divorce. Even a scrubwoman making $15 a week wants the custody of her child.

"I have no fault to find with Mrs. Meier's character. In this day and age, men gamble and mothers drink and smoke, and all are accepted and their reputations are not affected."

Then Mrs. Meier began weeping. She was assisted from the room by a sister, Miss Catherine Selkirk, and was later joined by her husband, Meier. When 10 minutes elapsed, and Mrs. Meier was still sobbing hysterically, Judge Wurdeman withdrew his order, and will hand down a decision later.

APPEAL FOR REIGN OF PEACE ADOPTED BY CONFERENCE

General Codification of International Laws Urged by the Inter-Parliamentary Union.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The twenty-third conference of the Interparliamentary Union, in a resolution adopted tonight, indorsed the efforts of the League of Nations and the Pan-American Union to codify international laws, and called for a general and constructive plan for codification based on progress made in recent years.

The conference also adopted a resolution providing for "a declaration of rights and duties of nations," and another directing a study to prevent wars of aggression.

The resolutions were adopted after three days of full discussion of the subjects and cleared the way for the conference to consider at its next session, Monday, the quetsion of reduction of armaments.

Commends Work of League.

The resolution on codification of international laws was drafted by Elihu Root, whose paper on the subject had been read early in the day by Representative Theodore Burton of Ohio. It expressed appreciation for the work of the League of Nations and Pan-American Union on codification, and urged a "general and constructive plan for such codification, based on the progress made during recent years, with a view to defining the fundamental conditions of the regime of peace to be instituted between the nations." It also would provide a plan for the judicial settlement of disputes "which constitute a threat to that regime and to the application, if necessary, of methods of execution and of sanction."

Rights and Duties of Nations.

The second resolution, reported by Senator H. Lafontaine of the Belgian group, provided for "a declaration of rights and duties of nations" which would "prove a powerful factor in promoting amongst them the sense of order of international justice and of responsibility."

It requested the committee for study of juridical questions to "prepare a draft declaration which could be submitted to an ensuing conference of nations, and which would take into account "economic conditions guaranteeing the rights of nations existence."

V. V. Pella of the Rumanian group introduced the third resolution which would create a permanent committee of the committee on juridical questions, "to undertake the study of all the social, political, economic and moral causes of wars of aggression and to find practical solutions for the prevention of that crime," and to "draw up a parliamentary draft of an international legal code."

Irish Republican Pickets Driven From Capitol Grounds by Police.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

While delegates to the Inter-Parliamentary Union today talked of peace between and among nations, strife raged within the place of meeting.

Congressman Burton of Ohio, in sonorous tone, inside the Capitol, read the paper written by Elihu Root on the codification of international law. Outside, Irish Republicans, with banners and lacards, picketed the Nation's Capitol, and hurled verbal attack at Gen. Richard Mulcahy, chief of the military forces of the Irish Free State, until they were driven by police from the Capitol grounds.

The sore spot within the British Empire had been exposed. Mulcahy, the sharp-faced Irish Free State military chieftain, who figured in a free-for-all fight in Philadelphia previous to his arrival in Washington, sat in his seat, seemingly impervious to the storm his presence here had awakened.

The storm without over the differences between the Irish Free State, represented by Mulcahy, and the Irish Republic which does not exist but which still owes allegiance to De Valera, in its virulence, represented the rift in the British harmony apparent on the floor of the chamber.

Amendment by Free State.

Thomas Johnson, representing the Irish Free State, offered an amendment to the pending resolution calling for a new agency to codify international law, providing in effect, that in event of a war in which Britain might engage, its colonies, dominions, etc., might elect to remain neutral.

The Germans, the French, the Japanese and the Volatile delegates from Latin-America all stood startled when this proposal was made.

Sir Richard Thorne of the British delegation, solid, extremely British, polished in manner and suave in address, arose to answer.

"This would be an excellent thing for the British Empire," he told the delegates to the world parliament, "it would mean just that much less territory to defend. But I want to assure the delegates that Great Britain is not asking this. It would be as if, in a child's game, we crossed our fingers and said 'we are out of bounds.' I know of no other part of the British Empire asking for this elymosynary treatment."

Disputes Despite Disagreements.

Gen. Mulcahy listened to this address with sharp features intently directed to the speaker, while Thomas Johnson glared at the rostrum and wanted to know if the subject was to be open to debate.

It was a concrete illustration of the statement made on the address by Elihu Root that disputes among nations would arise, despite agreements not to permit them. This particular dispute is within a single nation, but the application was the same.

Great Britain was not the only Government which exhibited a sore thumb. That the United States has its own similar problem was demonstrated, when Senator Sergio Osmena of the Philippine Islands arose and spoke "for the inherent right of all peoples to be free."

THOMPSON QUITS SHIP BOARD TO FIGHT TO SAVE IT

chant marine act 1920 was conceived and enacted to serve such interests.

"The previous delegation of wide Powers to the fleet corporation, a policy of administration recently revoked by the board under its responsibility to the Congress, destroyed regional voice and authority. It neutralized the intent of the Congress, as defined in the law, and adversely affected American flagship operation. It caused withdrawal of ships from essential trade routes, resulted in a reduced volume of commerce in American flagships, again to our ocean competitors, and weakened the country influence in world trade.

Voice Vital to South.

"The able and poised American, Senator Underwood, visioned the principle of territorial equality before the American Bankers' Association last Thursday. Referring to the Interstate Commerce Commission, Senator Underwood said fair and just representation must be given on the Interstate Commerce Commission to that territory that stands unrepresented today,' pointing out that the South and the West from the standpoint of territory, population and production, have been deprived of equal and just representation. A member of the board from the Gulf States as well as the other sections of the country, is necessary unless the ports of the Gulf and the vast interior section of the United States using these ports as their nearest ocean outlet for their expert and surplus products are to be denied voice in ship operation. I beg to believe, Mr. President, that such voice is very vital to my section and our people, for figures prepared by the Department of Commerce show that 38 per cent of the exports of the United States last year originated in Southern and Southwestern States, naturally tributary to Southern ports.

"For the reasons outlined I respectfully ask that you accept this as my resignation as of Nov. 1, for the term expiring June, 1924.

"With great respect, Mr. President, I am

"Very sincerely yours,

"FREDERIC I. THOMPSON."

Another means of impressing customers, it was said, was for this man to hold pretended telephone conversations with "Judge Smiley," keeping the hook down all the while. Richard S. Smiley is a Judge of the St. Louis County Court.

The Ford Motor Co., when queried, replied: "There is no truth in the information that is being circulated by a concern in East St. Louis that this company is intending to build a glass factory in that location."

CONFLICTING STORIES ABOUT MISSING FARM LABORER

Whether Joseph McMann, a farm laborer working near Alton, was drowned in the Mississippi River there Friday is a matter of conjecture to the Alton authorities.

Mexican section hands working near Alton, who were bathing in the river Friday, told the police that McMann, fully clothed, walked into the river and was swept into the current and drowned. Other witnesses say that McMann did wade into the river but was rescued by a man after being swept into deep water. Police have been unable to locate McMann.

BAR ASSOCIATION HEAD WOULD TEACH EVOLUTION

Former U. S. Senator Chester I. Long Condemns Tennessee Law Under Which Scopes Was Convicted as Assaulting Liberty to Learn.

The Tennessee anti-evolution statute, under which John T. Scopes was convicted and fined, was condemned as an interference with liberty, in the address of Chester I. Long of Wichita, former Senator from Kansas, and now president of the American Bar Association, before the Missouri Bar Association at Hotel Statler yesterday.

Speaking on the theme, "Liberty of Opinion," he said it was essential that liberty should apply to the acquisition of knowledge.

"The individual has some liberties under our form of government," Senator Long said. "Things that he does may be regulated by governmental agencies, but his opinions should be his own. There is a liberty in this country that is recognized by the Constitution. The fifth amendment says that Congress shall not deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law. Under the fourteenth a state cannot deprive a person of life, liberty or property without due process of law. We have had a great many decisions on what Congress or a state cannot do in regard to life and property, but few in regard to liberty. That question is looming up now.

"What is liberty? What can neither a State nor the national Government take from him? Is there anything left to him at all? From morning until night his actions are regulated. Is there anything left to him that is his alone and cannot be taken from him? What is liberty? The Supreme Court has recently defined it.

Freedom of Learning in Peril.

"For several years in the states and in Congress efforts have been made to restrict and control learning. The freedom of learning is in peril in this country. What was done? In Nebraska and Iowa laws were passed that no one should teach any language but English in the schools except above the eighth grade. In Ohio no teacher could teach German in any school below the eighth grade. That English must be taught in the schools is admitted everywhere.

"The Supreme Court of the United States said that these states deprived a teacher of his liberty. The Court then defined liberty as follows:

Liberty denotes not merely freedom from body restraints, but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations of life, to acquire useful knowledge, to marry, to establish a home and bring up children, to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized at common law as essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men.

"Oregon passed a law that destroyed all private schools between certain grades. Education was to be controlled by the State. Nothing but public schools between certain grades were permitted. The State was to control the situation. The State was to determine what should be taught to the children of the State. The Supreme Court of the United States held that the Oregon law was unconstitutional.

"In Tennessee the State says you cannot teach any subject in the public schools that differs from the story of the origin of man as told in the Bible. That account must be taken literally. There are many persons who reconcile evolution and the story of creation as set out in the Bible. The Tennessee law assumes there is a conflict between the story of man's origin and evolution. A case tried under that law is on its way to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Are States Within Rights?

"We are not interested as lawyers in the great debate between the modernists and fundamentalists. Our question is, can the Government go into the domain of opinion and control it? Shall freedom of learning be restricted? Can the State say, study this and do not study that; acquire knowledge along this line, but not along that line? Can the State say this theory is official; that is not, and you must teach only the official theory?

"The Tennessee statute attempts to control and regulate opinion in that State. It seeks to control opinion by interfering with the freedom of learning. It permits pupils in the public schools of that State to learn but one theory of the origin of man. There are two. The pupils in other states may study both. In Tennessee they have but one. It interferes with liberty in the acquisition of knowledge.

"A State can say what studies shall be taught and what shall not be taught in its schools, but in all things it must be reasonable. It cannot be arbitrary. There must be a good reason for all that it says may be done and for what it says may not be done. Where is the harm to anyone that will come from getting all the light possible on where man came from and where he is going?

Need for All Theories.

"In what way is a student in Tennessee harmed, or the public welfare endangered, by permitting him to study both the Bible story of the origin of man and the scientific theory? Can this knowledge be injurious to him or the public in any way? Will society be injured by the study of evolution? Is it inimical to the public welfare? The State can do many things in the control of education, but it cannot destroy a teacher's vocation. A person who has qualified himself to teach biology should know all theories about it, not one only. Is it reasonable for the State to limit him to one? Is it reasonable or is it arbitrary to say to a teacher of biology, 'You have prepared yourself to teach the science of life, but we have the Bible story of man's origin and we do not want the scientific theory taught.' The Supreme Court of Ohio could not say to a teacher of German, 'You have prepared yourself to teach German as your occupation but you cannot teach German to pupils in the grades in this State.' What is the difference between the right to teach German in Ohio and the right prepared to teach [illegible] Tennessee.

"The Nebraska, Iowa and [illegible] laws were held unconstitutional because they interfered with the liberty of teachers, who had prepared themselves to teach modern languages and their vocations affected by the restrictions imposed by the laws.

"The Oregon school law was held unconstitutional because it interfered with the liberty of parents and guardians to direct the upbringing and education of children under their control.

"If Ohio cannot restrict the teaching of German in that State from following his vocation, can the State prohibit a teacher of biology from following his vocation in that State? If the Oregon law interferes with the liberty of parents and guardians in the education of children under their control, does not the Tennessee law create a like interference with the liberty of parents and guardians in that State? Is not an effort by the State of Tennessee to control opinion by legislation and thus hamper the freedom of learning in that State?"

The speaker gave the history of the 19 years' conflict in Virginia which led to the adoption of a statute for religious freedom in 1786. He quoted William Jennings Bryan's tribute to Thomas Jefferson and the religious freedom which he cited the address of Secretary of State Elihu Root, predecessor as president of the American Bar Association, at the association's convention in Boston. This speech, he said, should be in the lawyers' textbook.

"The battle against [illegible] is on," he concluded. "Let us do our part in the great cause of freedom of learning in the public schools, we of the American Bar Association that it is preserved in its purity for our children."

TIME TO BEGIN WORK ON WORLD LAW, SAYS ROOT

Former Secretary's Address on League and Court Read to Inter-Parliamentary Union.

"AGREEMENTS ALONE CAN'T PREVENT WAR"

League, World Court and Hague Arbitration Body Changing Way in Which Men Think.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Inter-parliamentary Union representatives of 41 nations, assembled here in the meeting of the Interparliamentary Union at the Capitol listened today to a brilliant exposition of the functions of the League of Nations, the World Court and the Hague Court of Arbitration by Elihu Root, former Secretary of State, and one of the internationally famous jurists who drew up the plan for the World Court.

Root's address, in the form of a report to the conference, was read by Representative Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, one of the American delegates.

Root's main thesis was that the time had come for a serious beginning to be made on the work of codifying international law. The work would ultimately have to be accomplished by official representatives of the nations, he said, but the initial work would have to be done by individuals and unofficial organizations.

Speaking for himself after he had read Root's speech, Burton seconded Root's proposal of preliminary meetings of Jurists and experts to make an elaborate study of the problems of codification.

Codification Important.

"Codification of international law," said Root, "has a special importance at this time, because it is necessary in order to enlarge the service rendered by the Permanent Court of International Justice (the World Court) as one of a group of related institutions, which, taken together, promise to facilitate the preservation of peace to a degree never before attained."

He described these institutions as follows: First, an automatic system providing for immediate general conference whenever serious irritation arises among nations; second, an established system for decisions, and third, a system to facilitate and regulate arbitration.

The first of these, he continued, was supplied "within the limits of membership," by the League of Nations; the second was supplied for the benefit of the whole world," by the permanent court of international justice, and the third was supplied for the whole world by The Hague Court of Arbitration.

Function of League.

"It will be observed," he said, that the first of these institutions (the league) affords opportunity for conciliation, for the friendly suggestion of outside opinion, for the cooling effects of deliberation, for a realization of other points of view, and for reflection upon the results of braving the public opinion of the world."

Root declared that the existence of the League of Nations, with its ready machinery for conference was a distinct advantage to its members as well as members.

Quarrels Certain.

Asserting that "war results from state of mind," Root said the world had been reached where war could not be successfully prosecuted, "unless it gratifies the feelings of the great body of the people of the country."

How did he think that agreements among nations to use combination to prevent war were much better. If carried out, these agreements themselves would be war.

"The world has learned," he continued, "that in modern war the victors suffer about as much as the vanquished, and few nations can be depended upon to subject themselves voluntarily to the disaster of going to war, because of a mere general agreement for the purpose of preventing some other country from going to war with somebody else."

In settling international quarrels that continued, the great difficulty in the past had been the fact that the only alternative was war or humiliating surrender. This difficulty was increased by the tendency of the people of each country to assume that their own side was absolutely right and to regard any decision by their Government as disloyal.

"The conclusion," he proceeded, "is that the most effective method of dealing with the state of mind which leads to war is not by a mere negative, but by a counter positive, consisting of a substitute for decision by war in the form of a decision by proof and reason.

"The three institutions above mentioned afford this substitute, and they afford it in such varied form as to be adaptable to every possible situation."

Root asserted that extensive and beneficent use had been made of the three institutions during the last five troubled years in Europe.

"It is apparent," he said, "that they are an evolution from the practical necessities of international life, worked out by the continuous effort of many most competent and experienced men, approaching the subject from the points of view of all nations and finally coming to agreement upon what is at once practicable and useful for the prevention of war."

In discussing the work of the World Court, Root said it was important to remember that the value of a court is not to be measured wholly by the number of cases it decides, but by the "vastly greater number of cases which are settled because the court is there to decide."

He asked that the essential distinction between the work of a conference and that of a court be held in mind.

Old Customers Dine at "Caesar's" for Last Time

LOUIS CAESAR.
By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

Proprietor of Historic Downtown Cafe Tearful as Friends Read Appreciative Resolution Before He Closes Doors.

The last meal at Caesar's! It was an occasion for profound sentiment.

Laugh not, oh cafeteria generation. Those gallant trenchermen who came to Caesar's yesterday noon did not laugh. They filed in by twos and threes and foursoms to dine for the last time at the snowy tables set at Caesar's.

For the last time they were to ply knife and fork under the dark timbering and brown-painted ceiling and American eagles, likewise painted, which have sheltered many a goodly dinner. Caesar's closed forever at 3 p. m. yesterday.

Oh, the pathos of the signs displayed everywhere:

"This place closes for good at 3 p. m., Oct. 3. Good-bye and good luck."

Even the waitresses were not themselves. Before the noon rush started they called Caesar into the dining room—white-haired, sedate old Louis Caesar wearing a red necktie—and presented him with a solid silver breadbasket. Then a few of the waitresses started to cry and had to depart on hasty and imagined errands to the kitchen. Others found comfort in blowing up balloons with which to decorate the tables. Most of the balloons popped dolefully and the decorators lost spirit.

"Corned beef hash and coffee, and cauliflower if its not au gratin, Madge."

Sadness Reigned.

In trooped the various diners along toward noon. Henry S. Caulfield entered and sat at the round table in the corner. Presently Attorney Lon O. Hocker joined him. They produced a paper which looked like a farewell speech and began to read it. Other old-time customers of Caesar's were noted in the gathering crowd—J. B. Sheridan, Herman Stifel, James C. Harvey, Frank A. Nagel, Robert Lee Hedges, Joseph Maserang Jr., T. J. Hirsch, Louis Barklage—bon vivants all. But not bon vivantish yesterday. They were attending the late rites for Caesar's.

No one discussed the cause of death. But several weeks before when Caesar announced his intention of leaving the cafe business after 45 years of catering to the public palate he had said that the Volstead act killed his business by tightening the purse strings of his patrons. The fading out of lower downtown night life, and the close of the Planters' Hotel and other downtown gathering places he gave as contributory causes.

"A sirloin medium and French fried."

How sad to diners of sentiment those last orders sounded. The waitresses accepted them as farewell messages to Caesar's kitchen. For some the incense of the rose but for Caesar's customers the blissful aroma of roast beef rare. For some the memory of music, but for the men of Caesar the dear recollection of rightly cooked chicken. On nearly every diner's face was a devout expression, which between gulps took on a tender sadness as if he felt that food like Caesar's would not be tasted again.

Bartender Idle.

"Some Dutch apple pie, Grace, and melt the cheese."

During the lunch hour Caesar stood disconsolate in the barroom. He had refused suggestions of friends that he stock his bar just once and have a rousing farewell party. No, he would obey the law on the last day as he had since prohibition. Individuals who finished early and had to rush back to offices paused long enough to shake his hand.

"Good-by, Caesar. Take care of yourself."

The bartender, grayed in Caesar's service, presided behind an empty rail. If the glory of Caesar's restaurant was passing, the bar of Caesar long since has been a mockery of the times that were.

"A high one, Joe, and not too much soda!"

Nobody said that yesterday.

The last rites were soon over. When Caesar's pie had been eaten or his melon scooped up, his friends could not linger. Alas, it is a scurrying noon hour downtown these days. But a great many waited while J. B. Sheridan read to Caesar a resolution signed by his friends. It was a profoundly sentimental resolution as befits the passing of an honored institution.

"Among the First.."

It closed with the words:

"We go forth from here with regret—we have formed a deep and lasting affection for you. Your friends are legion and loyal. We wish for your years to be long and happy and content. Among the catering places of St. Louis like the old Southern, Planters, Faust's, Nagel's, McTague's, the name of Caesar's has the distinction of standing among the first."

Caesar told a Post-Dispatch reporter afterward that he would keep this resolution for his descendants. He said it with tears in his eyes, for Caesar as well as his guests was sad.

In twos and threes and foursomes the diners filed out.

"Good-by, Caesar. Good luck," they said.

And Caesar stood behind his swinging doors for the last time and watched the linen being stripped from the tables.

The sound of feasting which had charmed his ears for two decades died away. Caesar's closed.

IDENTIFIES SON IN GRAVE

Following an investigation carried on by Charles Kurrus, an undertaker of East St. Louis, identification was made yesterday by William H. House, Evansville, Ind., of the body of his son, Collie N. House, who was killed Aug. 30 by a Terminal Railroad engine at the East approach of Eads Bridge.

The father came to East St. Louis, where he found that "Frank" House had been buried at Mount Hope Cemetery, Sept. 5. He ordered the body exhumed and recognized it as that of his son.

BREWERS WANT U. S. REFUND

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 3.—Antone Krins, former secretary of the Illinois Liquor Dealers' Association, on his return today from a meeting in Chicago, announced that former manufacturers of malt and spirituous liquors will petition Congress for reimbursement for brewery and distillery properties closed by the Eighteenth Amendment.

JOHN T. BARKER IS NEW PRESIDENT OF BAR ASSOCIATION

Kansas City Man Elected After His "Direct Campaigning" Upsets Time-Honored Precedents.

RECEIVED 14 OF THE 25 VOTES CAST

James E. King of St. Louis Chosen Treasurer, Former U. S. Senator Wilfley on Executive Committee.

Modern political campaigning methods were given a try-out at the Missouri Bar Association election at Hotel Statler yesterday. Though learned judges frowned in dignified amazement and shuddered at the shattering of precedent, the modern method won. As a result John T. Barker of Kansas City, former Attorney General of Missouri, was elected to the presidency of the Association.

Bar Association elections through many years have been as surrounded by safeguarding precedents as criminal indictments and court procedure. When it came time to elect a president the 38 members of the Council of the Association met in dignified seclusion and solemnly made the selection.

For any member of the association to campaign for the presidency, write letters to the members of the Council, suggest reasons why he should be chosen, or do aught to influence the Council was undreamed of in the old days. It just wasn't done. Nobody seemingly ever had thought of doing it.

Never Followed Precedent.

But that was before Barker decided he wanted to be president. Well grounded in the fundamentals of campaigning, Barker couldn't see why the principles he had used in his successful campaigns for Speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives and for Attorney General, and in his equally vigorous though much less successful campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor, would not work in the Bar Association.

He never had been a follower of precedent, any way. No lawyer, in so far as the record in Missouri shows, had ever walked into a Federal Court and accused the Judge thereof of ignoring the law to favor the railroads. But just because it never had been done seemed no reason to Barker why he shouldn't do it, so he did in Kansas City in 1914 when presenting a case for recovery of overcharges in Missouri railroad rates.

Wrote Letters to Council.

When he started out for the Bar Association presidency, Barker addressed letters to members of the Council. He knew several reasons why he should be chosen and he told the Council members several of the things he knew about himself.

The violation of precedent astonished some of the members, and didn't astonish others. The older, more dignified, more technical lawyers protested it never would do to permit Barker's election. It was true that under the rules Kansas City was entitled to the presidency this year, but it must be somebody besides Barker. Cyrus Crane, dignified and entirely acceptable to the shocked lawyers, was chosen as the man to accomplish the defeat of the "up-start," as some of them chose to refer to Barker.

Other Officers Elected.

They thought they had Barker beaten, but when the votes of the Council were counted Barker had 14, and as there were only 25 present, Barker was elected.

Other officers chosen were E. L. Alford of Perry, first vice president; Charles Liles of Dexter, second vice president; Cyrus Crane, Kansas City, third vice president; Assistant Attorney-General James A. Potter of Aurora, secretary, and James E. King of St. Louis, treasurer.

Former United States Senator X. P. Wilfley of St. Louis, retiring president of the association, was elected to membership on the Executive Committee.

PEACE MEETING OPENS TOMORROW IN SWITZERLAND

Security Conference at Locarno Regarded as Most Important Since Versailles Peace Congress.

By the Associated Press.

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 3.—With delegations en route from the various capitals for the security conference, which opens here Monday, agitation already is in evidence regarding Germany's quest for the return of one or more of the colonies lost to her through the World War.

The question has been actively discussed in the various chancelleries of Europe. Germany wants overseas territory which she can draw upon for the raw material needed by her industrials, and she takes the position that a vital element in bringing about real security is to assure the welfare of her economic life by this means.

All the former German colonies are under mandate to the allies, and if the German hope should be realized it would presumably mean that England or France would be called upon to turn back to the Reich some of the territory they now govern.

England, it is pointed out, is less free in the matter than France, as the Union of South Africa, New Zealand and Australia have independent mandate rights over former German districts, and the mother country is hardly in a position to command their surrender of these rights.

Locarno is teeming with activity in preparation for the security meeting, which is regarded as perhaps the most important gathering of European statesmen since the Versailles peace congress.

Franco-German Amity Possible, Says Painleve.

NIMES, France, Oct. 3.—Dealing with the possibility of Franco-German reconciliation, Premier Painleve, in an address here today, termed such reconciliation "the cornerstone of European civilization."

"In spite of a century-old rancor and in spite of wrongs that still cry out, such reconciliation is possible," he said, "if the two peoples can rid themselves of their tenacious distrust and believe in each other's sincerity.

"Such is the spirit in which the French governmental interpreter, in the person of our eminent Foreign Minister (Aristide Briand) is approaching at Locarno, the boldest attempt that has been dared since the armistice to establish a real peace."

ROMANTIC HEROES OF AGES TO PARADE TUESDAY WITH VEILED PROPHET

Floats Will Carry Colorful Figures of Past; "Ocular Opera" at Coliseum Ball Wednesday.

St. Louis will make merry this week, as it has done annually since 1878—save for the years 1917 18—with the annual visit of the Veiled Prophet. The Prophet's parade, oldest and biggest of American civic autumn pageants, will take place Tuesday night, if the fair weather customary at this season prevails.

Rain on Tuesday night would mean postponement of the parade to Thursday night, for on Wednesday night the Prophet and his attendants will be busy at the ball in the Coliseum.

Every year the Prophet's parade is different. New floats, new theme, new treatment, new costumes, new jests exchanged between the maskers on the floats and the throng at the curb.

Same Yoo-Hooing.

And every year the Prophet's parade is the same. The same sputtering trolley wires furnishing light, the same crowds of children and adults spilling into the street, the same yoo-hooing from downtown windows, the same out-of-town crowds here for the evening.

This year, the subject of the floats is "Decorations of Honor." If this sounds like a soberer theme than one taken from Mother Goose or fairy lore, it is likely to be just as brilliant, interesting and even amusing, for the spirit of the actors is what counts, and the Prophet's train sets out to entertain.

The parade will traverse its route, between Vandeventer avenue and Fourth street, Market street and Lucas avenue, between 7:15 and 10:30 p. m., the floats being in the following order:

1. The Veiled Prophet.

2. Title Float, symbolizing the spirit in which decorations of honor are designed and awarded.

3. Order of the Thistle, Scotland. King James V. knighting a Scottish warrior.

Danish Warriors in Boat.

4. Order of the Elephant, Denmark. Danish warriors in a boat, bringing home a pair of elephant tusks from the crusades.

5. Victory Medal, awarded by the United States for extraordinary valor in the World War. Float represents the American Army and Navy.

6. Order of the Double Dragon, China. A picturesque pagoda scene, with English and French officers being decorated by the Chinese emperor.

7. Order of the Legion of Honor, France. Founding of the order by Napoleon.

8. Order of the Garter and St. George, Great Britain. St. George and the Dragon, and the King picking up the garter of the Countess of Salisbury, the incident which caused the founding of the famous order.

9. Order of the Star of India. Prince of Wales and Hindu potentates appear.

10. Order of the Holy Sepulchre, Papal. Replica of the shrine of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, with the Pope and knights.

Shah and His Statesmen.

11. Order of Leopold, Belgium. A scene in the defense of Belgium against the German invasion.

12. Order of the Morning, or Rising Sun of Japan. The Mikado and ancient Samurai in Japanese scenic setting.

13. American Order of Isabella, Spain. A scene in the Conquest of Mexico.

14. Order of St. Patrick, Ireland. St. Patrick, preceded by a drummer, preaching to his followers, with Celtic crosses and castle in the scene.

15. Order of the Sun and Lion, Persia. The Shah, his statesmen and soldiers, and the domes and minarets of a Persian city.

16. Order of St. Hubert, Bavaria. A hunting scene, from legend of St. Hubert and the stag.

17. Victoria Cross, Great Britain. Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava.

17. Order of the Medjidie, Turkey. The Sultan and his officers.

19. Order of the Golden Fleece, Spain. Philip the Good of Burgundy, in medieval military setting.

Sacred White Elephant.

20. Order of the White Elephant, Siam. The sacred white elephant carrying the King, period 1850-60.

For the Prophet's ball, Wednesday night, an entertainment of music and ballet has been prepared, to precede the selection and coronation of the queen. An "ocular opera," entitled "The Fisherman's Undersea Romance," will be performed by a ballet headed by Mlle. Buena Vista, Art Fix, her partner in the presentation of the ballet, will be the only other solo dancer. An ensemble of 20 dancers will represent the fish-court of the Starfish Queen.

Queen to Take Throne.

The ballet romance is based upon an old folk tale that somewhere under the sea is a Queen fish in the form of a beautiful woman, who some day will be caught by a lone fisherman. In the ballet, this Queen Fish is caught and dies in the arms of her fisherman. The performance is set to special music written for it by F. Tours, French composer. Mlle. Buena Vista was formerly with the Music Box Revue, but for the last year has appeared only at the head of her own ballet.

The Veiled Prophet and his retinue will arrive garbed as on the previous night in the parade, and a concert will be given by a symphony orchestra of 60 men, under the direction of Gene Rodemich. The members of the Court of Honor will enter the ballroom on the arms of members of the Reception and Floor Committees at the completion of this concert. As soon as they are seated the reigning queen, Miss Mary Virginia Collins, will arrive and will occupy the throne until the Veiled Prophet comes. Then she will step down to make way for her successor.

Amplifiers for Herald.

The four special maids of honor and the new Queen will enter in a new manner. Instead of coming into the ballroom direct, as in previous years, they will be admitted one at a time at the north end of the floor, through a rich tapestry curtain, to a small platform. There they will be met by their respective escorts and conducted to the throne. As they approach the throne, a herald will announce the name of each, and an amplifier and horns will carry his voice to the farthest corners of the building.

All the bouquets carried by the leading figures in the coronation ceremonies this year will be presented by the director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, Dr. George Moore. The new Queen's bouquet will be composed of 25 of the rarest and most beautiful orchids, and the bouquets of each of the four maids, as well as the out-going Queen, will be roses of exquisite new and rare shades, chosen to match their gowns. The plants on which these flowers have been grown have been under special care ever since their selection, so that all the blossoms might be as near perfection as possible. Among the roses to be carried will be a new copper yellow, never before shown in St. Louis.

Following the coronation, the ball will be formally opened, and two dance orchestras playing alternately will provide music as long as the guests desire to dance.

'SAVE LINDELL WEST OF SARAH,' IS NEW DECISION

Invasion of Boulevard by Stores Prompts Committee to Abandon Movement East of That Street.

The forces working to "save" Lindell boulevard from the invasion of commercial establishments have retreated to the west side of Sarah street and are firmly entrenched with the Zoning Commission in an effort to preserve its character as a boulevard from that point to its terminus at Skinker road.

Efforts of the Zoning Commission include a surrender of the west corners of Lindell boulevard at Sarah street for commercial use, which means that stores with not more than five employes may operate there.

The commission, meeting Friday night at the Melbourne Hotel, unanimously voted to recommend to the Board of Aldermen that the proposed zoning ordinance include in the commercial district, Lindell boulevard from Grand boulevard to Sarah street.

E. J. Russell, chairman, said the committee had concluded the invasion of the boulevard by stores, automobile shops, oil stations and the like, since the Supreme Court held the zoning law invalid, had made restoration of the former character of the boulevard impossible, and the forces favoring it had decided to concentrate on the boulevard west of Sarah instead of its entirety.

20,000 Signed Petition.

Recommendation was also made by the commission to the Board of Aldermen for the inclusion in the commercial zone of Washington boulevard from Grand boulevard to Kingshighway, and West Pine boulevard from Grand boulevard to Sarah street, including east corners only.

The recommendation of the commission to the Board of Aldermen relative to Lindell boulevard came after the Lindell Boulevard Protective Association had obtained petitions, containing 20,000 names, expressing a sentiment for the preservation of the boulevard as a thoroughfare flanked by stately buildings and attractive residences.

STATE OFFICIALS BEGIN ANTI-TRUST PLUMBING INQUIRY

Assistant Attorney-General Crowder and Aids Collecting Preliminary Data for Use in Suit.

Assistant Attorney-General George W. Crowder, who has been assigned by Attorney-General Otto to make an anti-trust inquiry into operations in St. Louis of the master plumbers and steamfitters' association and the plumbers and steamfitters' unions, made a preliminary inquiry here Friday in which he obtained considerable information that he believes would be valuable in an ouster suit against these organizations, such as Attorney-General Otto announced exclusively in the Post-Dispatch Wednesday would be shortly undertaken by his office.

Such a suit would be under the anti-trust laws of Missouri and would charge a combination in restraint of trade and free competition.

Sattements Taken.

Crowder was accompanied to St. Louis by another Assistant Attorney General, W. F. Frank, and a stenographer who took statements from informants who appeared before Crowder at Hotel Jefferson.

Among those interviewed was I. R. Goldberg, president-treasurer of the Independent Plumbing & Heating Supply Co., of 1119 Chestnut street, who told Crowder the masters' organizations and the unions were in league with certain supply houses in restraint of trade and free competition. Goldberg offered considerable correspondence he has had with these supply houses and manufacturers of plumbing and steamfitting supplies, in which it was shown that pressure was brought to bear on jobbers and manufacturers not to sell supplies to jobbers independent of what Goldberg termed the "trust."

Crowder said the preliminary investigation might require several weeks before the case can be prepared for hearings upon which an anti-trust proceeding could be based.

Provisions of the Law.

The sections of the law under which an anti-trust proceeding in Missouri would be prosecuted are 9655 to 9657, inclusive, revised statutes of 1919. The texts of these statutes follow:

"Sec. 9655. Combinations in restraint of trade declared a conspiracy. Any person who shall create, enter into, become a member of or participate in any pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation or understanding with any person or persons in restraint of trade or competition in the importation, transportation, manufacture, purchase or sale of any product or commodity in this state, or any article or thing bought or sold whatsoever, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and shall be punished as provided in this article.

Section 9656. Pool and trust agreements defined. Any person who shall create, enter into, become a member of or participate in any pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, or understanding with any other person or persons to regulate, control or fix the price of any article of manufacture, mechanism, merchandise, commodity, convenience or repair, or any product of mining, or any article or thing whatsoever, of any class or kind bought and sold, or the price or premium to be paid for insuring property against loss or damage by fire, lightning or storm, or to maintain said price when so regulated or fixed, or shall enter into, become a member of or participate in any pool, trust, agreement, contract, combination, confederation or understanding, to fix or limit the amount or quantity of any article of manufacture, mechanism, merchandise, commodity, convenience, repair, any product of mining, or any article or thing whatsoever of any class or kind bought and sold, or the price or premium to be paid for insuring property against loss or damage by fire, lightning or storm, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and be punished as provided for in this article.

Boycott Provision.

Sec. 9657. Combinations to boycott or threaten to boycott made a conspiracy—Any two or more persons engaged in buying or selling any article of commerce, manufacture, mechanism, commodity, convenience, repair, any product of mining, or any article or thing of any class or kind whatsoever, who shall create, enter into, become members of or participate in any pool, trust, agreement, combinations, confederation, association or understanding to control or limit the trade in any such article or thing, or to limit competition in such trade by refusing to buy from or to sell to any other person any such article or thing aforesaid, for the reason that such other person is not a member of or a party to such pool, trust, combinations, confederation, association or understanding, or shall boycott or threaten any person from buying or selling to any other person who is not a member of or a party to such pool, trust, agreement, combination, confederation, association or understanding in such article or thing aforesaid, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a conspiracy in restraint of trade and punished as provided for in this article.

Sec. 9658. Combinations to increase prices, declared conspiracy. All arrangements, contracts, agreements, combinations or understandings made or entered into between any two or more persons, designed or made with a view to lessen, or which tend to lessen, lawful trade, or full and free competition in the importation, transportation, manufacture or sale in this State of any product, commodity or article, or thing bought and sold, of any class or kind whatsoever, including the price or premium to be paid for insuring property against loss or damage by fire, lightning or storm, and all arrangements, contracts, agreements, combinations or understandings made or entered into between any two or more persons which are designed or made with a view to increase, or which tend to increase, the market price of any product, commodity or article or thing, of any class or kind whatsoever bought and sold, including the price or premium to be paid for insuring property against loss or damage by fire, lightning or storm, are hereby declared to be against public policy, unlawful and void; and any person or persons creating, entering into, becoming a member of or participating in such arrangements, contracts, agreements, combinations or understandings shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and punished as provided for in this article.

JUDGE DENOUNCES TATE AND HIS WIFE

"Worst Murder I Ever Heard Of," Court Says in Passing Sentence in Poison Case.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Oct. 3.—After advising Robert Tate and his wife how lucky they were to escape with penitentiary sentences of 20 and 20 years for the murder by poison of Jodie Herrington, Mrs. Tate's first husband, Judge Hartwell pronounced sentence shortly after noon today.

Neither defendant flinched as Judge Hartwell told them: "If you did commit this crime, and the jury has said you did, it is the most low down, sneaking, vilest, worst murder I ever heard of and you are extremely lucky. The jury has extended mercy to you, if you did it, when you extended none."

"Those children," he told Mrs. Tate, "are his children as well as yours, and then you remarried, but you are not to be permitted to live together. I think you got off miraculously. I think that the evidence showed you to be far more guilty than he."

"If you had lived under the British flag," Tate was told, "you would have been hung for the crime long before this. You didn't fight like a man. You weren't willing to shoot it out, but sneaked upon a defenseless man."

Judge Hartwell complimented the defense attorneys for their work, stating that he never saw paid counsel work any harder than did the defense attorneys appointed by the Court and who had to serve without pay. They made no motion for a new trial although Judge Hartwell said that if a motion had been made that he would have overruled it.

Learn how quality is attained with modern production methods! This week we are making a special photographic exhibit illustrating the precision methods by which quality is achieved in the manufacture of the modern motor car.

Showing the Reason for Quality at Low Cost

The exhibit consists of 40 remarkable photographs of the most interesting processes in modern automobile manufacture. It will provide the same interesting knowledge that you would get by taking a trip through the plants where Chevrolet cars are built. Each picture is accompanied by a full description of the operation it illustrates. It is an exhibit of unusual interest and value. Bring the children.

WORLD COURT PROPOSAL DECRIED BY SENATOR REED

He Also Attacks the Allied Governments as "Repudiators," Particularly That of France.

ADDRESSES MISSOURI BAR ASSOCIATION

Touches on Favorite Theme of "Too Much Law" and Takes Fling at Vice President Dawes.

The Allied Governments, particularly the French Government, were attacked as repudiationists, and the proposal of association with them in the World Court was decried, by United States Senator James A. Reed, in his address at the dinner which closed the two days' meeting of the Missouri Bar Association, at Hotel Statler, last night.

Senator Reed followed his newly appointed colleague, Senator George H. Williams, who read a carefully prepared address on "Sovereignty," largely abstract in character, setting forth that sovereignty resides in the people, not in their government, and that this sovereignty is the basis and the condition of individual rights.

Reed praised Williams' address and said that, if the new Senator stuck to his thesis, he would vote with Reed on most questions.

Cloture Rule Ridiculed.

Before discussing international matters, Senator Reed touched on his favorite theme of "too much law," and ridiculed Vice President Dawes, whose name he did not mention, for trying to make more legislation by the Senate possible. "This blatherskite," Reed commented, "runs up and down the country saying the Senate ought to quit talking and vote, when the country would be better off if Congress talked all the time and never voted on anything. If he were in the Senate he would not want cloture, but everybody else would."

In attacking the World Court, Senator Reed condemned the position of Presidents Harding and Coolidge in withholding from the League of Nations, but proposing membership in the Court. He assailed the Harding suggestion of a self-perpetuating Court. He declared that the element of disinterested impartiality, essential to any court, could not be attained in a World Court, on any important international question. An American member of the Court who would decide a vital question against this nation, he said, would thenceforth be a man without a country, and the same would be true of the judges from other nations.

Creates General Laughter.

He brought the most general laughter of the evening by reading, with no attempt at accurate pronunciation, the names of the present judges of the World Court, including Antonio Sanchez de Bustamente y Sirven of Cuba, Dionisio Anzilotti of Italy, Viscount Finlay of Great Britain, Yorozu Oda of Japan, Charles Andre Weiss of France, Didrik Galtrup Gjedde Nyholm of Denmark, Max Huber of Switzerland and Ruy Barbosa of Brazil. "Would you submit the life of one of your friends to the judgment of this jury?" Read asked. "Will you submit the life of Uncle Sam to it?"

As issues which this nation, and other nations, could not afford to submit to a World Court, he spoke of the Panama Canal tolls issue, which he said will one day be revived, the Monroe Doctrine, Japan's desire for a naval base in Mexico, and matters affecting the controll of the Dardanelles or the Suez Canal.

He pictured the allied Governments begging for financial aid from the United States Treasury, and signing agreements to repay with 5 per cent interest. Great Britain, he said, has been "the honestest of the lot," yet he estimated that the settlement with that country cost the United States $69,000,000 a year, by comparison with the interest which this Government must pay on its bonds.

Compares France With Russia.

He compared the attitude of France with that of Russia, saying that revolutionary Russia had been blamed for repudiating the debts of the Czar's government, but that France sought to repudiate without having changed its form of government. "We haven't heard from Italy or Poland," he added, "and Belgium says that, because Woodrow Wilson said she ought to be let off easy, therefore we should let her off altogether."

Combining the British settlement, and what he termed the "weak" proposal made to France by the American negotiators, and not accepted by France, he figured that this country would lose $1,447,272,810 by the two settlements. "And yet," he exclaimed, "we talk of tying up our interests with these repudiationists—who, after all, are the best of the lot." The latter remark appeared to refer to the general constituency of the World Court, which the Senator had previously described as representing "every kind of rapscallion people that God had made."

Two Major Advantages
Studebaker Alone Offers

1—One-Profit Value 2—Unit-Built Construction

THERE are (as you probably know) only two manufacturers who actually build their cars complete—make all their own bodies, engines, clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, axles, gray iron castings and drop forgings.

One of these is Ford—in the low priced field. The other is Studebaker in the fine car field.

Because we eliminate the extra profits and overhead that many other manufacturers have to pay to outside parts and body makers—we are able to use finer materials and workmanship—yet charge no more than competing cars.

But there is another side to One-Profit manufacture—a feature that no careful buyer can afford to overlook.

Under this One-Profit policy the entire car is designed, engineered and manufactured as a complete, coordinate harmonious unit in Studebaker plants. Being Unit-Built it functions as a unit. And this adds years to its life—gives you scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation—greater riding comfort—minimum repair costs—and, finally, higher resale value.

Examine the Standard Six Coach closely—make detailed comparisons with other cars—and you will understand the full meaning of One-Profit value.

A coach of quality

It is called a coach only because it is the lowest priced closed car ever sold by Studebaker. But it is a quality car through and through.

Do not buy this coach with the expectation that you'll have to trade it in at the end of a year or so. It's not a one-year car.

Instead, it has been honestly built to give you scores of thousands of miles of dependable service.

Notice the durable wool upholstery. See the heavy ornamental hardware; the plate glass windows and windshield; the fine trim to hide all tacks; the clock and gasoline gauge on dash; automatic windshield cleaner; stop light; locks on ignition, steering gear, door and spare-tire carrier—all operated by a single key.

These are all features that you can easily see. But down underneath that glistening coat of metallic enamel you'll find the same quality of materials and workmanship that are out in the open.

The sturdy frame for the body is built from the fine northern ash and hard maple. Slam the door and the sound says quality. Underneath the upholstery you'll find two layers of washed, quilted cotton, one layer of genuine curled hair and extra long springs closely held together by small coil springs. This is the identical cushion and seat construction used in the highest priced cars.

Long resilient springs made of special chrome Vanadium steel give greater buoyancy and protection from road shocks.

The crankshaft is completely machined on all surfaces to eliminate vibration. And the motor is the most powerful in any car of this size and weight, according to the rating of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. It is a motor built for smooth, trouble-free service at 5 to 55 miles an hour—not for excessive speed or spectacular stunts.

The body is smart in appearance—yet provides ample room to seat five passengers in real comfort. Ample room to enter or leave without disturbing occupant of folding seat.

Make comparisons before you buy

These are advantages made possible by One-Profit manufacture. Check them off point by point—in comparison with other coaches.

Only after you have seen this One-Profit Studebaker with its Unit-Built construction, will you realize why it offers a value that cannot be obtained in any other car. It is the automobile equivalent of Pullman transportation.

The Studebaker policy of "no yearly models" is a further protection to owners. Under this policy Studebaker cars are always up to date — we add improvements from time to time and do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete.

Any of the Studebaker dealers listed below will gladly demonstrate the Standard Six Coach without obligation on your part.

Chaliapin Idolized in Germany.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—Feodor Chaliapin, the great basso, caused remarkably keen competition among Berlin's Russian cafe owners during his visit last week to Berlin. All the cafe owners hailing from his native land were extremely anxious to have the distinguished singer patronize their establishments. Whenever this tall Russian showed himself on the streets his countrymen cheered and toasted him and carried him on their shoulders. At the Prussian State opera, where Chaliapin gave a concert, a large part of the audience consisted of Russian refugees.

ASIATIC BEAR AMONG SPECIES SLAIN BY ROOSEVELT PARTY

Expedition at Kashgar Reports Bagging Hundreds of Birds and Mammals in Mountains.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—A cablegram received here today from Kashgar, the crossroads of Central Asia, reported that the James Simpson-Roosevelt expedition for the Field Museum had bagged in the glacier-capped Tian Shan mountains hundreds of birds and mammals which undoubtedly include new species.

In addition to the species believed to be new, the party had slain such rare big game as the Asiatic bear, bigger than the grizzly, giant of all Ibexes with curling 56-inch horns and the goitered gazelle.

After trying their marksmanship on the Pamir the Roosevelts plan to go to India by the Hnuza Pass, by courtesy of Sir John Wood and the Viceroy of India.

Meanwhile, Cherrier, the scientist of the expedition, has left to convey the collections already made through Russia along the Caspian Sea route, making further collections there.

ENDS LIFE BY STABBING SELF AND INHALING GAS

Belleville Coal Miner Leaves Note to Wife Saying "My Life Is Like Near Beer—Without a Kick."

Jacob Waldhauser, 41 years old, a coal miner residing at 325 West Washington street, Belleville, was found dead in the kitchen of his home at 8 o'clock last night by his wife, Mrs. Lena Waldhauser, upon her return after an all-day absence. He had been stabbed in the heart with a butcher knife, which lay on the floor beside him, and over his head was a paper carton into which gas flowed through a rubber hose connected with an open jet on a gas range.

A note was found on the floor near his body. It read: "My life is like near beer—without a kick." Mrs. Waldhauser told the authorities that her husband had often threatened to end his life, but gave no reason for his despondency.

Dealey to Speak at Columbia.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 3.—President Brooks of the University of Missouri announces that George B. Dealey, president and general manager of the Dallas News and vice president of the Associated Press, has accepted an invitation to represent the newspaper profession of the United States here on Nov. 10 when Sir Esme Howard British Ambassador to the United States, will present to the University a stone recently sent to the institution from St. Paul's Cathedral, London. Mr. Dealey was born in Manchester, England, and began his newspaper career as an office boy on the Galveston News.

Alton Man Dies of Paralysis.

John W. Neely, 54, died suddenly Thursday night from paralysis of the heart at the family home in Alton. Neely served as a police officer under Mayor Crawford. Neely worked all day Thursday. About 8 o'clock he retired and died a few minutes afterwards.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

MRS. E. F. F.—We should think that the husband would have a perfect right to invite guests into his own home, even though his wife has not as yet met his friends.

BILL—Early in the spring of 1878, a number of congenial citizens met and agreed that an association fashioned on the order of the Southern Mystic Societies would flourish in St. Louis, and since the fall of that year, the Veiled Prophet has made his annual appearance in the City of St. Louis. The history of this transplanted southern flower of fancy, and its steady growth is given below: The Veiled Prophet and his faithful followers have always appeared on the streets of St. Louis in a pageant of magnificence and splendor "casting sunshine and flowers" to the multitude. There has always been a ball given after the parade but at the present time the parade occurs the evening prior to the ball, a departure from the old custom. The people whom the Veiled Prophet and his retinue particularly wish to please are loyal and true and appreciate this consideration on their pleasure. For them the pageant is given and no expense is spared in their preparation. The object of the promoters is only to please, without hope of reward or pay, except to feel that men are made happier by this expenditure of time and money. From year to year, for nearly a half century the Veiled Prophet has given the Nocturnal Illuminated Pageant on the first Tuesday of the first week in October of each year since 1878. The invitations to the ball, and the programs, always tasteful and appropriate, are very much sought after each year. Specimens of them are deposited in the Missouri Histor- parade.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

FEB.—The city will not fumigate the premises unless you can show them that the previous occupants had some contagious disease. Fumigation will kill vermin.
W. W.—If the parents consented to the marriage of the couple both of whom were under age, then they cannot restrain them from leaving their home and living by themselves elsewhere when they see fit.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

KIRKWOOD — Enuresis (bed wetting) may be caused by some abnormal condition present, if so it should be corrected. This includes the presence of pin worms in the bowels. A highly acid urine calls for alkaline drinks and free drinking of water. A child should get a simple, natural life, preferably in the country. No overtaxing of the nervous system, at home or in school. Excitement should be avoided. Early hours and plenty of sleep. No coffee, tea or beer. Avoid sweets and highly seasoned food. The best diet is milk, vegetables, fruits, meats and cereals. Never punish a child for this trouble, rewards for avoidance are much better. Appeal to the child's pride. If wetting occurs at night encourage the child to retain the water as long as possible during the day and discourage drinking fluids in the late afternoon and evening. Give one after W. See that no condition of ill health and no local irritation such as adenoids are overlooked. Of drugs atropine is best, one grain to two ounces of water, of which one drop represents 1-1000 of a grain. One drop sent is given for each year of the child's age. For night wetting at first give the dose at 4 and 10 p. m. After a few days give at 4, and 7 and at 10 p. m. This may be very gradually increased until double the quantity is given. It is not advisable to go above these doses, but if larger doses are given the increase must be more gradual. The physiological effect of atropine is first dryness of the nose, mouth and throat; beyond this it is useless to go, besides not being safe, for atropine is a potent, dangerous drug in every way and care in dosage is essential. When the condition is under control, or a cure seems to have been attained, the same dose should be continued for some time and then reduced, the drug being given for at least two months in gradually diminishing doses. This is most important if a permanent cure is to be obtained as there is always a strong tendency to relapse. Strychnine may be added when atropine alone fails, especially in day wetting. Begin with a dose of 1-1000 grain for a child of five years, given twice daily, very gradually increasing to double the dose, three times a day. Do not push it further. Careful, intelligent systematic training of the child, is a valuable adjunct to the form of treatment.

BAKER GUEST OF DR. ENLOE AT "SLEEPY EYE" LODGE

Governor and Chief Lieutenants Among Those at Gathering of State Office Holders.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 3.—One of the informal week-end gatherings of the Baker administration, somewhat akin to the famous Coolidge breakfasts for politicians with pressing problems, was held this afternoon and tonight at "Sleepy Eye" Lodge, country place of Dr. Cortez F. Enloe, Director of Penal Institutions, former member of the State Board of Health, close friend of the Governor, and major domo behind the scenes of administration activities. The gathering was attended, it was learned, by a few of those close to the Governor.

The lodge nestles on a bluff overlooking the Moreau River, several miles southeast of the Capital, and is an ideal place for a quiet political conference.

Among those attending, it was said, were Enloe, Gov. Baker, Thomas J. Brown, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, for whom a gubernatorial boom is under way; Attorney-General Otto, Dr. W. A. Clark of Jefferson City, recently named by Baker as president of the State Board of Health, and others.

Clark was appointed in the reorganization of the State Board of Health by Baker, after the Governor had refused demands by Dr. Emmett P. North, former president, and Dr. James Stewart, secretary, that Enloe be removed from his then membership on the board. Baker later asked the resignations of all board members, reorganized the board, and in the circuitous manner, Dr. Enloe was quietly restored.

A FLAW-PROOF RAID AT LAST—MAYBE

Sergt. Coakley Does Some Prolonged Thinking Before Entering Saloon.

The police and the Prosecuting Attorney's office, who have worked in liquor cases with much the same harmony as a brindle bull battling a calico cat, were in perfect accord on this one. They pulled together like a pair of Percherons.

The police have been nearly tragic to comprehend what the Prosecutor has meant by legal evidence and the Prosecutor has said the police have been about as methodical as a bunch of fireworks in making a case.

So, when Sergt. John Coakley of the rum squad was "tipped" that there was liquor being dispensed in a saloon at 509 North Vandeventer avenue, did he rush in, as per custom? He did not. He sat down, put his head between his hands and began to think. He didn't risk a move until the next day.

Another Day of Thought.

Then on last Wednesday, he obtained the services of a probationary patrolman, gave him money and sent him into the saloon. The probationary reported back that he had been able to buy two pints of beer with the money.

Now, the usual procedure for Sergt. Coakley would have been to swoop down on the place, tear it up for hiding places and when he had confiscated a few barrels of mixed liquors to have reported to the Prosecutor and be turned down coldly in his application for a warrant.

This time, Sergt. Coakley was making haste slowly. He let another day of thinking elapse. He was going to make this case to meet the minutest exaction of the Prosecutor.

On the following day, he ventured to approach the Prosecutor. He recited his procedure. Assistant Prosecutor Fania immediately issued a search warrant.

Success at Last.

Even that success couldn't stampede the sergeant. He waited another day. Then he served his search warrant. He found no liquor, but the probationary identified Charles Tedoni, bartender, as the man who had sold him beer. Tedoni was arrested.

Once more the sergeant returned to the prosecutor. He submitted no further facts and promptly got a warrant charging not only Tedoni with violation of the liquor law but the saloon proprietor, Caesar Venegual, 35, of 7414 Gayola avenue, St. Louis County.

The police rejoice—a flaw-proof raid.

PRESIDENT WILL BE HERE AN HOUR TOMORROW AFTERNOON

Is to Speak Before American Legion in Omaha Tuesday Morning.

President Coolidge will pay St. Louis a brief visit tomorrow afternoon en route to Omaha, Neb., where he is scheduled to deliver an address before the American Legion convention and review a parade of ex-service men Tuesday morning. His special train, which consists of three sleepers, dining car and club car, will arrive at Union Station about 5 p. m. but will stop only about an hour to permit a change of engine and dining car. The train will leave Washington late today and the route to St. Louis will be by way of Cincinnati.

It is expected that the President also will pass through St. Louis on his return to Washington later in the week, but will stop for only a few minutes during the trip except that before the convention Tuesday.

MAN FOUND BADLY HURT IN REAR OF AUTO TIRE SHOP

Samuel Seltzer Says He Was Attacked by Group of Men in Argument.

Cut and beaten, Samuel Seltzer, 49 years old, residing at 1381 Montrose avenue, was discovered behind a partition in the Brasher Auto Supply Company's tire shop at 1901 North Grand boulevard by neighbors his cries attracted yesterday morning.

City Hospital physicians said he probably had a fracture of the skull and a broken left leg. Seltzer could give no account of his injuries other than that he had been set upon by a group of men who came into the shop to buy three tires and with whom he had an argument about the price. He was beaten, it is believed, with a tire tool.

Neighbors saw two men run from the shop, just before they heard the cries of the injured man. Police could not discover that anything was stolen.

CITY EMPLOYE, 69, FOUND DEAD APPARENTLY FROM POISONING

Body of Samuel Milford in Bed With Glass Smelling of Cyanide Nearby.

Samuel Milford, 69 years old, an employe of the City Water Department, was found dead in bed at 9:30 a. m. yesterday with a glass smelling of poison at his bedside.

SALESMAN ENDED LIFE WITH POISON, CORONER'S VERDICT

Walter H. Hastings, 51, Found Dead on Bench in Forest Park by a Patrolman.

That Walter H. Hastings, 51 years old, of 4318 Olive street, an advertising salesman, took his own life by drinking poison in Forest Park Friday afternoon was the Coroner's verdict in the case returned yesterday. Hastings was found dead on a bench near the Lindell pavilion by a patrolman about 5:45 p. m. An empty bottle which had contained hydrocyanic acid lay near the body.

In Hastings' pocket were three letters addressed to his former wife, Mrs. Flora G. Hastings of the Usona Hotel, his son, Robert and his present wife, Mrs. Ethel Hastings of 4318 Olive street. The son said that in his letter his father declared he was not committing suicide "through cowardice, but in the belief that it is best for the family."

Some months ago Hastings suffered a fractured skull when struck by a golf ball on the links in Forest Park. Relatives believe the accident unbalanced his mind.

OPEN SAFETY PIN REMOVED FROM STOMACH OF BABY

Medicinal Means Used in Treatment of Boy, Thus Avoiding Abdominal Operation.

An open safety pin was removed from the stomach of 9-months-old Robert Kershner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Kershner, 1448A Chambers street, at City Hospital last week following four days' treatment.

The child was taken to the institution last Tuesday, X-ray disclosing the pin its stomach. Physicians took steps to remove the pin by medicinal means, desiring to avoid an abdominal operation. The treatment was declared successful Friday and Robert was returned to his home yesterday, none the worse for his experience.

REV. FRED LOHMANN DECLARED TRINITY TABERNACLE PASTOR

The Rev. Fred Lohmann was declared to be pastor of the Trinity Tabernacle, Marcus avenue and Page boulevard, where there was a row in the congregation last spring, by a recent decision of the General Presbytery of the General Council of the Assemblies of God, meeting at Eureka Springs, Ark. The tabernacle and pastor were restored to fellowship in the general body.

This reversed a decision last April of the Executive Presbytery and District Council. The Rev. Mr. Lohmann accepted the reversal as a vindication of his stand. The congregation had been divided and a portion of the members chose the Rev. J. Henry Capps as their pastor. A police riot call was sent in during one discussion in the church.

He hid his identity but was thrown into prison. He escaped by a leap from one building to another and another leap to a tree.

TWO MINERS MISSING IN BLAST

They are supposed to be in the south section of the mine about a mile and a quarter back, where the explosion occurred. All other men who were in the mines at work in the east section and were brought to the surface shortly after the explosion. None was injured. ## Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The stock market today was very uneven. At the outset it was decidedly strong, especially in some of the oil shares and in various specialties. In the second and last hour realizing sales increased in volume and the early gains were reduced and some instances canceled altogether. This was true of U. S. Steel and other important stocks like American Locomotive.

Today went down in Wall street history as one of the most active Saturdays in record on the stock exchange. Trading was exceptionally heavy, with the volume of sales the largest for a two-hour session since Aug. 11, 1906.

The Bond Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The breakdown of the war debt negotiations continued to have a depressing effect upon the market for French government and municipal issues in the closing session of the week in the bond market.

The selling, though not particularly heavy, was sufficient to carry prices down fractionally from the closing level of Friday. French government 7½s at 99¾ compared with the previous close of 99⅞ and the decline in the 8s was a fraction larger. The average loss in French municipal issues amounted to 1½ points.

The market for oil securities moved higher in sympathy with the turn for the better in the oil stocks on the stock exchange. Sinclair Consolidated Oil 6's were a feature, advancing almost a point to 106¾. Youngstown Sheet and Tube stood out strongly among industrial issues which otherwise were subjected to some selling pressure.

The market for railway securities was heavy, with Baltimore & Ohio 6s, St. Louis San Francisco incomes offered rather freely.

Weekly Metal Review

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The steel market has been somewhat irregular, but on the whole gave a good account of itself and a slight gain in unfilled orders is expected in the statement of the Steel Corporation. Trades action in fabric structural steel during September were estimated as high as 225,000 tons, with further large projects opening in the New York district. September railroad orders also took 100,000 tons, while a large export tin plate business was reported.

Pig iron was quiet as recent advances in some districts have made consumers cautious.

In copper, some further price shading was reported early in the week, but the tone improved later, owing to rallies in London, a little export inquiry and some buying for domestic consumption, mainly for November delivery. This demand proved sufficient to absorb small lots pressing for sale and little if any copper was reported available below the 14½ cent level at the end of the week. It is reported that orders for finished products were in satisfactory volume during September and that deliveries of unwrought copper into domestic consumption last month were probably in excess of the August figures.

Tin rose sharply through buying by dealers and shorts due to the fact that the visible is the smallest since the war. Lead acted steady with a good demand largely from cable interests. The large movement into consumption precludes prospects of accumulation. Spot metal is scarce.

Zinc was stronger and equal to the highest level of the year. A much better inquiry is reported from both domestic and export sources.

Antimony continued firm in sympathy with strength in China. However only a limited inquiry was reported.

J. J. RICKS MADE PRESIDENT OF UNION CARBIDE AND CARBON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Changes in the official personnel of the Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation were made today at the meeting of the Board of Directors. Myron T. Herrick, who has been chairman of the board since Nov. 8, 1917, was elected honorary chairman. George O. Knapp, former president of the corporation, was elected chairman of the board, and Jesse J. Ricks, former vice president, was elected president. M. J. Carney and G. W. Lattig continue as vice presidents, while Benjamin Sheng and W. G. Krauss were elected additional vice presidents. George O. Knapp will remain active in the corporation affairs as chairman of the board, in accepting the resignation of E. F. Price as vice president, the board adopted resolutions bearing a high tribute to his 30 years of active management of the Union Carbide Co. and many of its subsidiaries. Although retiring as an active officer, Mr. Price will continue in a consulting and advisory capacity, although he expects to devote his time to his own business interests and recreation.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—The wool market closed the week strong with dealers today firm in their demands. Their attitude was strengthened by news of the volume in which offerings were being taken in the London market. Some medium grades showed slight advances over quotations current earlier in the week with Ohio quarterbreds at 62c a pound and half-blood at 58c. Fine staple territory clean Boston ranged from $1.27 to $1.30.

New York Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows a deficit in reserve of $21,523,990. This is a decrease in reserve of $40,761,730 compared with last week, when excess reserve of $19,-228,740 was reported.

The organization also will seek to establish a seminary to train ministers of the orthodox Greek church, who will undertake the translation and revision of the Old Ritual to conform to the modern demands for an American-speaking church among the younger generations of Hellenic extraction. Next year's convention will be held in Philadelphia.

CUT IN BANK RATE DUE TO TRADE STAGNATION

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today, says:

"Developments this week having a bearing on the financial situation in this country must be regarded as favorable, including as they do a reduction in the bank rate, a defeat for the communists in the labor conference at Liverpool, and a consequent rise of securities in investment and speculative markets.

"To appreciate the exact position of financial affairs here it is necessary to have an explanation of our monetary situation. The real cause of the further reduction of the bank rate, of course, was trade stagnation, rendering an effective 4½ per cent rate impracticable because of the ease and abundance of idle money. In other words, although our economic position is unfavorable, our gold position is sufficiently strong to warrant the risk of losing considerable gold through withdrawal of foreign accounts here, which a cut in the bank rate naturally entails. While the lower rate emphasizes for the moment the monetary ease and the firmness of securities, there is a paradoxical situation of the possibility of a rise later to 5 per cent being strengthened.

"An advance in the bank rate might be made necessary by one of two factors, for instance, cheap money might stimulate speculative activity and stir trade to an extent that would absorb all available funds; or the lower rate might bring about large gold withdrawals, necessitating a higher bank rate as a defensive measure.

Prepared to Let Gold Go.

"Obviously, however the Bank of England has not decided at this time to lower its discount rate to 4 per cent unless it was prepared to lose a substantial amount of gold before being forced again to advance the rate to protect its position.

"Although we have lost since the rate was cut from 5 to 4½ per cent early in August, about £3,500,000 in gold, we still are headed on balance by more than £5,000,000 above the total on hand at the time the gold standard was adopted late in April.

"The fall in the bank rate naturally brought about increased possibilities of further conversion operations this year. Many feel the Government will take advantage of the cheap money to rearrange its finances, although this talk seems now to be a bit premature.

"Sooner or later our monetary conditions almost inevitably must be determined by developments in your market, and there is a growing divergency of opinion here concerning your conditions. Some assert your situation contains slight elements of danger, one being over speculation in stocks and another being a setback in trade owing to Europe's strain involved in meeting war debts.

Debt Meeting Failure Effect.

"There is some risk that the temporary and apparent defeat of the communists may act as a soporific to capitalists and industrialists, who really need an awakening to urgency of changed methods if foreign competition is to be dealt with effectually.

"Collapse of the French debt negotiations came as something of a surprise to and brings an element of uncertainty into the whole European financial situation.

"What will develop now in the Anglo-French negotiations remains to be seen, but it appears likely the temporary agreement may receive a setback. French economic recovery very probably will be slow.

"Nor has Great Britain yet emerged from the ill effects of Government extravagance and the present position of the natural accounts is depressing to taxpayers. It undoubtedly weakens the Government's authority and power to check extravagance on the part of local authorities. There is no sign yet of preparations for removal of the embargo on foreign loans. ## COTTON SHOWS RENEWED WEAKNESS AS WEEK CLOSES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The cotton market showed renewed weakness today, prices making new low ground for the movement under reports of increased hedge selling and rumors of an easier basis in the South. December contracts broke to 22.90c, a net decline of 22 points and a drop of 132 points from the high level of last month. The market closed easy at the lowest price of the day, showing net declines of 16 to 22 points.

The opening was easy at an advance of 1 point on October but generally 2 to 6 points lower in keeping with the easier Liverpool cables. Trade buying and covering around the 23-cent level for December appeared to be very readily supplied and the market worked almost steadily lower, reaching the low points of the day on a movement in late trading. October sold off to 22.75c and January to 22.40c.

Southern selling was a prominent feature of the trading, suggesting an increased volume of hedging, in addition to which there was local and Wall street selling, probably influenced by the reports of an easier spot basis in the South. December was relatively easy, as if traders were apprehensive that some of the lower grades of shorter tenderable staples might be shipped here for delivery. There was considerable switching of long accounts from December to late deliveries. At the close December was 76 points over January, compared with a difference of 80 points yesterday.

Nothing very definite developed with reference to the reported easing of the Southwestern basis beyond the appearance of increased Southern selling here, and October contracts sold within 5 points of December, compared with a discount of 11 points at the close on Friday.

Another private crop report, pointing to a yield of 14,900,000 bales, emphasized the trend toward increased estimates, although it was not mentioned prominently as a market factor.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 102,000 bales, against 84,000 last year.

RENEWED LIFE IN OIL GROUP FEATURES CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Dealings on the New York Curb Exchange in today's short session indicated decidedly the resumption of the broad and vigorous operations that had been increasing in scope in the past few years. There was persistent buying in numerous issues around the newly established high quotations.

United Light was prominent in that group, selling to a new high at 160⅛ which compares with its low last spring at 44. During that period valuable rights were allotted to stockholders. Continental Baking "B" stock was an active feature, moving up about 2 points.

Oil shares made further progress in the upward movement, lifting quotations in some stocks to the year's high levels. After being inactive for a long time, the oil stocks as a group came into the greatest prominence during the past week and these issues became the strongest features of the market. The greatest gain in the leading stocks was made in Vacuum Oil, which rose from 87 to 99. Humble made a gain of 7 points to above 66 and a wide movement on smaller trading was made in Magnolia, which rose over 14 points to above 150.

Many industrial issues also developed strength during the week. Remington Noiseless Typewriter moved up 10 points to 56 and Miller Rubber after selling at 215, moved up to 235. Gillette Safety Razor rose over four points to 106¾ and Atlas Portland Cement made a new high record on 60 advance of six points to 68.

There was a group of weak issues. Land Co. of Florida, fell from 77 to 60 and then rallied and Engineer's Gold yielded from 23¾ to 16¼, rallying from its low level. The Southern Dairies issues also sustained severe losses, the "A" stock falling from 40 to 30 and the "B" from 30 to 19.

St. Louis Spot Cotton.

Spot cotton declined 25 points in St. Louis. Quotations: Good ordinary, 14.75c; low middling, 20.75c; middling, 22.75c; good middling, 24c; middling fair, 25.25c.

The sluggishness of railroad shares in the recent active sessions on the Stock Exchange, in the face of exceptionally good August earnings, is a topic of Wall street discussion. ## Foreign Exchange Market

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted Foreign Exchange Review, says:

"The greater part of banking interest during the week was concentrated in the transactions in sterling exchange, chiefly because of the wide difference in money conditions in New York and London. Inability to employ funds profitably in London has been reflected in a general withdrawal of the credits transferred from this country to London in the first half of the year. It is not an extravagant estimate to place the amount of these credits at above $400,000,000, and in the last few weeks there has been a steady return of these funds, arranged to the greatest extent by the purchases of dollars in London. How great the extent of this transfer has been is known only to those behind the counters of the institutions on which the dollar drafts were drawn, but payments on those drafts reached extremely large amounts, and the understanding prevails now in financial circles that the transfer of funds subject to influence from money rates have now been completed. In connection with this movement, sterling continued its decline, selling below $4.84 for cables and bringing the rate to below the gold shipping point, which those concerned in high financial affairs place at $4.8431. After sterling yielded to $4.84 yesterday, there was demand both for immediate delivery and October contracts for large blocks, some of the bids being for lots of £1,000,000 and it is to be assumed that this heavy buying will prove an effectual check to any further decline. This buying could easily be balanced by a gold import movement if desired, but it is insisted that bankers are averse to any such movement and that a gold flow to this country will not take place.

"French exchange after a show of strength in the first half of the week, when the negotiations for debt settlement were in progress, had a violent break in the last few days from 4.75 to 4.61¼. The failure of the efforts to reach an arrangement for settling the French debt to this country, Belgian exchange was one of the strong features the greater part of the week, moving from 4.36 to 4.55. It broke yesterday.

"Italian exchange also was unsettled by the break in French exchange, lira checks falling from 4.06¼ to 4.01¼. Brazilian exchange was again extremely strong, ranging during the week from 13.85 to 14.31, making its greatest gain yesterday."

INDIVIDUAL STOCK MOVEMENTS MARK WEEK ON 'CHANGE

Group Swings That Were Prominent Recently Absent—Sharp Ranges in High-Priced Shares.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Oct. 3.—It was the individual stock rather than the group that stood out prominently in the trading on the local market during the past week. The total volume of business, too, did not come up to that of the previous week or of some recent periods. Skouras with a turnover of more than 2400 shares and Ely-Walker common which was traded in to the extent of 1500 shares, led in activity.

The widest price ranges in one of two instances took place in securities in which actual transactions were not large. Southern Acid common advanced 5 points to 205 on sales of less than 100 shares while Rice-Stix common gained ten points to 225 on sales of only 23 shares. At the final session of the week this stock was bid up to 275 with some offered at 280 at close. The street heard rumors of recapitalization. Laclede Steel sold at 147 compared with last sale back in August at 121.

Bruce common and Hussmann were features in which there fair transactions. The former sold as high as 63. The listing of an additional $50,000 worth of the preferred stock of this company was made during the week. The refrigerating issue had a sharp run up to 50 following the announcement that a favorable decision had been rendered in the Federal Court in a patent suit.

Another Federal Court decision having bearing on a number of listed National bank stocks was that in which it was held that the State could not tax both the stock of a National bank and the earnings on that stock, as income.

Wagner Electric common showed a slight net recession after an irregular course. Best-Clymer at 72 was up 3 points on the week.

Trading will begin Monday in the newly listed shares of the Sieloff Packing Company.

HOG RUN INCREASES AND PRICES DECLINE

Higher Trend to Lambs.

Lamb prices were on the upward trend throughout the entire week and advances scored, placing the market on a considerably higher than the previous Saturday. Light receipts were a feature of this market, most of the lambs being on the heavy order. Offerings were the smallest available brought in this year. The bulk of the figures paid, however, were for lambs that sold at $14.25@14.50. Choice lambs sold largely at $14.50, with a few at $14.75. Considering the light supply of lambs at times a fairly active trade was in evidence. Strengthening prices on lambs failed to affect sheep, the aged classes remaining unchanged from day to day. Quality during the week continued up to the best of the season, with the bulk of the offerings figuring in fact, catching the bulk of this quality. Due to lateness of the season and the breeding ewe division the near break in prices on aged sheep was not as severe as on lambs, but the top end of sales remained unchanged at $7@8.50. Choppers, however, although there were a few sales figured around $7 to $8.50. Culls and common sheep were a stronger tendency to move in this department. Good to choice handyweight ewes sold at $5.25@6.25, medium to good at $4@5.25, and common at $3@4. Buck lambs sold at $13.25@13.50, and common at $12@13.25. Spring lambs sold at $15.25@15.50, and common at $13@15. Feeding lambs sold at $13.25@13.50, and common at $12@13.25. Stock sheep sold at $7@8.50, and common at $5@7. Feeding ewes sold at $6@7.50, and common at $5@6. Feeding bucks sold at $4 to $6, and common at $3@4. Stock lambs sold at $12@13.50, and thin and common stock at $11 to $12.

Hog Prices Break.

Due to sharply increased receipts at all markets the past week, buyers succeeded in breaking the hog market sharply, offering prices by a basis $1 or more under the previous week's high finish. This increase has carried the number of hogs considerably above figures for the same period last year, indicating around 73,000 more hogs. The increase in weights has resulted in the situation and resulted in a sharp increase in the number of light hogs coming to market, many of them of poor finish and a considerable sprinkling of new corn grades at every opportunity. The abnormal increase in weights has been sold. This class has practically been sold. This class has practically been sold. This class has practically

FRENCH WOMAN PUT IN ASYLUM SOLELY ON SECRET EVIDENCE

Lawyer Obtained Release After Three Months—Action Followed Affair with French Officer.

(Copyright, 1925.)

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Many persons in France are disturbed to discover just as in olden times before the revolution, when the king or any one else in power could send persons to the bastille without either trial or explanation that it is still possible to get rid of a bothersome individual by having him of her put into an insane aslum without evidence other than secret documents which neither the victim nor the latter's lawyer are allowed to see.

"L' Oeuvre" reveals the story of Mlle Tarcher, who was only released from an asylum after three months detention. She had had a love affair with an officer who eventually tired of her and refused her pleadings for a final meeting. One day she received a summons to go to a district magistrate's office in Paris. There she was told that the Prefecture wished to see her.

Taken to police headquarters the girl was immediately thrown into a cell and later taken to a provincial asylum after being confronted with the officer Mlle. Larcher's lawyer, one of the most eminent members of the Paris bar, declares that she never annoyed or threatened the officer and never showed the least indication of insanity. Experts reported her a dangerous madwoman on the strength of the secret police report which the prefect refuses to show to the magistrate or her lawyer.

C. & O. TUNNEL CAVEIN MAY HAVE COST EIGHT LIVES

Fireman of Work Train Caught in Fall Is Dead—Engineer and Six Men Missing.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 3.—All but five of the more than 40 men caught in a cave-in in the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad tunnel at Church Hill here yesterday were accounted for in a check-up today.

Benjamin F. Mosby, locomotive fireman, died today of injuries suffered in the cave-in. His is the first known death.

Tom Mason, engineer of the work train which was just leaving the tunnel when the earth slide occurred, is believed to have met death when his engine wab buried in the avalanche.

The 4000-foot tunnel runs directly through the heart of the hill and under Jefferson Park.

While railway rescue crews and firemen and police squads were making efforts to reach the entrapped men at the end of the tunnel where the slide occurred, most of the survivors, having crawled through the mass of fallen dirt and masonry, were straggling out at the other end. They had made their way, a number of them with broken arms and other injuries, through the inky blackness of more than 3500 feet, not knowing when another collapse might occur above their heads.

Russian Booth Center of Interest and Muscovite Field Is Coming U. S. Rival.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., Oct. 3.—Kentucky day, city club day and natural gas day were the feature events of the third day of the third annual International Petroleum Exposition being held here. After the first two days had been marred by rain and muddy grounds, today was an ideal autumn one and more than 25,000 people passed through the gates.

Special interest at the exposition today centered about the Russian booth. The exhibit which was delayed in shipment from Russia, arrived here this morning. Oils and all types produced from the fields of Russia were transported to Tulsa and the oil poured into bottles for display.

Spokesmen for the delegation declared Russia is rapidly coming to the front as an oil nation and that shortly she will be producing the second largest quantity of oil of any nation.

WASHINGTON LOSES TO DRAKE ELEVEN, 6-0

Thrilling Finishes Mark Fairmount Races, Run in Rain and Mud

COLEN RIDES SETH'S ALIBI TO VICTORY

Crowd of 6000 Braves Inclement Weather at East Side Track—Jockey Hebert Rides 3 Winners.

By Dent McSkimming.

Rain, wind, mud and good racing kept a crowd of 6000 persons at Fairmount track yesterday divided between a state of wild enthusiasm and gloomy pessimism, as in turn they directed their attention to the thrilling finishes of seven races and then to the question of "how ever will we get home out of this?"

But the thrilling finishes must have scored a victory, for in spite of much unfavorable weather, the crowd was gay and generous in its cheering.

Not always in the first week of racing at a new track has the program been so well balanced. The fifth race, selected by the officials as the "feature" event, the Jefferson Hotel Handicap, actually developed the best racing of the day and was in every sense the "feature."

Seth's Alibi Wins.

Seth's Alibi, guided over the mile and a sixteenth course by Jockey Colen's skillful hands, found very severe competition in Firetoma, ridden by Mack Garner, and The World, with F. Baker up, but in a head-and-head finish. Seth's Alibi had more in reserve than the others and won with a head to spare.

The start of this race, in front of the grandstand, was in itself a thriller, with Seth's Alibi in No. 1 position and Firetoma, No. 3, racing ahead and cutting in for the rail. Seth's Alibi got up first and as they rounded the first turn Seth's Alibi had earned an advantage which he never lost and this early spurt really won the race.

$1 Ticket on Kia Pays $19.40.

Among the better races of the day was the third, in which the supposed outsider, Kia, beat the "good thing," Lester Doctor, and paid $19.40 for a $2 ticket, and $9.40 for a $2 second, in which Fast Time, selected in the early betting, outpaced Alpine and The Muscovite. A $2 ticket on this 2-year-old son of High Times paid $15.20.

The bettors had a fair share of prizes for the day.

Sidney Hebert, the boy had from Louisiana, who had a good day a week ago on inaugural day, rode three winners for the day, bringing home Fast Time in the second. Ocean Current in the fourth and Gayly in the fifth.

Colen, who has been having hard luck recently, rode only one winner, Stonewall Jackson, in the sixth.

Thrills From the Start.

In the first race, Mrs. T. J. Smith's Aladdin had to give all he had to win in a great stretch drive with Rocking. My Biddy was in front in the early part of the race but weakened badly in the sixteenth and was nosed out of the money by Scottish Chief. The spindle-legged Fast Time, looked all impressive as the horses paraded past the grandstand before the second race, ran a beautiful race in overtaking Alpine, which was off to a good start. In the run down the stretch, The Muscovite weakened and then it was Fast Time showed his mettle. Alpine was not far behind and third place.

Chemiserie Causes Excitement.

In the fourth, the big excitement was furnished by Chemiserie's rush down the stretch in the same from nowhere to the wire and had she been given a little more room to bear down sooner, she would have won. Ocean Current, who also played, was the winner.

The well-known mudder, Stonewall Jackson, responded wonderfully to heavy going and win the fifth.

Southwest Teachers Hold Billikéns to Scoreless Tie

Fumbles Are Frequent and Spoil Scoring Chances for Both Elevens—Visitors Drop Ball After Carrying It Over St. Louis Goal Line.

St. Louis University was forced to be content with a scoreless tie yesterday in its opening game with Southwest Teachers' College of Springfield, Mo., in a contest played in the rain on a muddy field. The slippery gridiron kept the fast Billiken backs from getting started and a soggy ball made accurate punting impossible.

In the second quarter the visitors succeeded in crossing the St. Louis goal line only to have Davis drop the ball with the touchdown within his grasp. Rippstein recovered for St. Louis and the ball was put in play on the 20-yard line.

SECOND QUARTER.

Beginning the second quarter, Springfield in a succession of line bucks drove the ball to the St. Louis five-yard line. On the final plunge, however, Quarterback Davis of Springfield dropped the ball after he had crossed the St. Louis line. Halfback Rippstein of the Billikens recovered the ball five yards behind his own goal line, and it was put in play again on the 20-yard line.

In the ensuing punting duel Ramacciotti began to straighten them out and the half ended with the ball in midfield in the Billikens' possession. Score: Springfield 0; St. Louis 0.

THIRD QUARTER.

St. Louis showed an improvement in ground-gaining ability at the opening of the third quarter. O'Reilly ran back the kickoff 10 yards and followed with a 13-yard drive off tackle. Ramacciotti contributed two five-yard shots for another first down. Here St. Louis elected to try the punting game again and the contest relapsed into a dreary exchange of kicks. The period closed with the ball in the Billikens' possession, on their own 40-yard line. Score: Springfield 0, St. Louis 0.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Opening the fourth quarter, Capt. Ramacciotti of the locals got away for a 30-yard run, but fumbles at critical times prevented the Billikens from scoring.

NOTRE DAME COACH USES 60 PLAYERS IN BEATING LOMBARD, 69-0

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 3.—Sixty different Notre Dame football players had a part in the 69 to 0 defeat of Lombard College here today.

Coach Knute Rockne made changes so rapidly that the fans were groggy and it was only in the third and fourth periods that his team played in satisfactory form. Despite frequency of fumbles and other misplays in the first 40 minutes, Lombard did not have a chance.

Dahman, Flannigan, O'Boyle, Prelli, Cody and Roach circles the ends and swept through opposing tackles and guards almost at will.

Hearndon, Notre Dame right halfback, suffered a badly cut face. The game was rough, made an impressive showing, making eight touchdowns. The visitors completed only three first downs, two on short forward passes and the other on a Yale penalty. The Yale backs showed skill in passing, open field running and line plunging.

THREE TEAMS TIED FOR LAST POSITION IN NATIONAL LEAGUE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Last place became sixth place in the National League club standings today with the Brooklyn, Chicago and Philadelphia teams in a triple tie. Each club has won 68 games and lost 85.

As the season closes tomorrow and each team has one more game to play, a tie for one position is inevitable. The Braves clinched the fifth rung by beating the Robins.

Browns to Close Campaign Today

Double-Header Scheduled With Detroit Tigers—First Game at 1:45 O'Clock.

The 1925 baseball season in St. Louis will come to a close this afternoon with the Browns meeting the Detroit Tigers in a double-header, starting at 1:45 o'clock.

The contests mean little to the Browns, as they already have third place in the American League pennant race clinched.

Aerial Attack Enables Tigers To Tie Against Tulane Eleven

Overanxiousness of Missourians Gives Southerners Touchdown in 6 to 6 Game—Swofford of Valley Champions Injured in Final Period of Battle.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 3.—Under a blazing sun, for which time was taken out only once, Missouri and Tulane fought out a 6-to-6 football struggle here today. The forward pass was an important factor in the contest. A 30-yard aerial effort placed Missouri inside Tulane's five-yard line in the first period and the touchdown was then a matter of seconds.

Over-zealousness on the part of the Missouri Valley champions gave the Greenbacks an opportunity to tie the score in the second period. A Missouri back interfered with a Tulane end, as he reached for a pass on the two-yard line. This interference gave the ball to Tulane as an intercepted pass, and a touchdown followed on the next play. The goal kick, a point that would have given victory for either team after its touchdown, was not forthcoming.

Captain Whiteman's place kick passed under the bar, on the Missouri try for point after touchdown, and Brown's drop kick effort, as he sought to place Tulane ahead, was blocked by O'Sullivan and caught by Lindenmeyer, charged through and met the ball before it was well on its way.

The Missourians scored before the game was many minutes old. After two kicks had been exchanged, Missouri started a drive that was ended for the moment when Brown intercepted a pass. Tulane was forced to kick and Missouri took the ball on Tulane's 42-yard line. Thomas made 8 yards in two tries and Whiteman passed to Coglizer for a gain of 30 yards.

Jackson went over for the touchdown just before the close of the first period. Studebaker kicked out of bounds on his own 25-yard line. Lautenschlaeger made five yards as the period ended.

Morgan failed and Lautenschlaeger got but a yard. Lautenschlaeger was away to a gain on the next play, but Tulane was offside and the ball was brought back. Lautenschlaeger then shot a pass to Wilson.

Interference was detected on the two-yard line and Tulane took the ball with goal to make. Flournoy scored the touchdown on the next play. Flournoy's kicking was the feature of Tulane's play. The big back got off only one poor punt and an intercepted pass saved the Greenies then when the visitors seemed about to score.

Swofford, a Missouri back was carried from the field with a severely injured leg just before the close of the game.

PITTSBURG 6 TO 5 FAVORITE TO WIN WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Expert circles tonight apparently had established the Pirates as favorites to take baseball's premier crown from Bucky Harris and his veteran Washington crew. The margin conceded to the National Leaguers is slight, but fairly well reflected in several wagers made at odds of 6 to 5 in Wall street.

At least part of this switch in opinion undoubtedly is due to the somewhat alarming reports of the last few days concerning the condition of several of Washington's stars.

CHICK EVANS WINS KANSAS CITY "OPEN"

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 3.—Charles (Chick) Evans of Chicago won the Kansas City open golf tournament here today by a margin of four points over Al Espinosa, also of Chicago. Evans shot 283 for the 72 holes of the two days of play and Espinosa, who led until this afternoon shot 287.

BULLDOGS SCORE ONLY TOUCHDOWN OF CONTEST IN THE FINAL QUARTER

Fry, Sutherland and Cronkhite Star for Des Moines Team—Pikers Hold on One-Yard Line in Second Quarter.

By J. Walter Goldstein

Drake University's football team kept faith with its name yesterday afternoon and took to water like ducks. That in some measure explains why the Washington University revamped eleven opened its 1925 season with a 6 to 0 defeat on a water-logged Francis Field.

This does not mean that with a less moist background, the Pikeway players would have won. Figures show that the Iowans had an unquestionably stronger eleven and were masters of the situation throughout the game. However, water, and plenty of it, dissipated any offensive plans that the local collegians may have had and converted their efforts into a defensive stand.

For three quarters of the game this defense was worthy enough to hold the Bulldogs at bay. Twice they came treacherously close to scoring, but frenzied rallies staved them off and allowed Washington to kick the ball out of danger. The fabled charm of the third thrust worked early in the fourth quarter, however, and the decisive touchdown was scored.

The One Touchdown.

Washington had received a punt just a few minutes before and Harding by some lively stepping had returned the ball from his own 30-yard line to midfield. Here was one of the few occasions that the 4500 dripping football fans had to cheer and they were taking full advantage of the opportunity. Here was a sparkling dash that might put new life into the Pikers and serve to turn the tide in favor of the Green eleven.

The cheers had not completely died down when there was a scrambling melee out of which emerged a blue player holding the ball. Another fumble; but this was the vital one, for Drake lost no time in showing that it meant business this time. Six smashes, most of them between tackles and ends, or outside of the ends, carried the dripping ball 40 yards down the field for three first downs. A chap named Fry, substituting at quarterback, did most of the advancing two of his runs netting half of the distance.

Mr. Fry Goes Over.

It was first down on Washington's 12-yard line. Reserves went in to bolster the faltering defense. There was a Piker conference on field; there was much back-slapping among the dogged defenders and yellow-slickered undergrads sent our their pleadings—but no avail. Mr. Fry grabbed the ball on the next play and shot through the left side of the Washington wall for the 12 intervening yards. Drake went through the motions of trying to boot the goal after touchdown, but the loggy ball merely plunked to the ground and played dead. The score was 6 to 0 and there it stayed for the rest of the murky afternoon.

There were a few more thrills, however. Washington didn't give up by any manner or means and immediately started trying to pull the game out of the fire. The forward pass was brought out for a belated last minute stand. But depending on an aerial attack with that sloppy pigskin was more a matter of vain hope than strategy. The first flip went far of its mark and the succeeding one fell into the arms of Sutherland, a Drake man, who waddled 20 yards with it to his 30-yard mark. From here, the nimble Fry carried the attack down to the Piker 15-yard mark, where the rally was stopped. Fry came back again after a punting exchange with several more fancy runs, but a Drake fumble nullified his efforts.

The Star of the Day.

Gail Fry, indeed, was the outstanding star of the day. He is a 142-pound junior who struggled on the Bulldog squad last year; but wasn't good enough to make his letter. He wasn't good enough to start yesterday's game either and was only put in at quarter when Everette, the highly-touted Drake backfield punch, left the field with a minor injury. Then Fry started. Evidently he was out to prove by induction that he had been wrongly despised, and he succeeded. Although it adorned the smallest man on the field, the big "4" on his back was the omnipresent mark of all Pikeway eyes. He made six runs, from 12 to 20 yards. He smashed into Piker stalwarts with an abandon and slithered out of their clutches. Most of Fry's fine work was done in the second half, after he had suffered a broken thumb in the opening half. A tape bandage during the intermission put Fry in shape to do his sparkling stuff when play was resumed. There isn't much doubt that the good people of Kalona, Ia., will have much to discuss at their communal gatherings this season. Gail is going to put Kalona on the map.

Not a Bad Start.

Despite the dull skies and the blue jerseys of the conquerors, the Washington reaction to the defeat cannot be considered as pure indigo. Truly, Washington's showing was the most auspicious one that a Pikeway team has made in many a day. It was the debut of Higgins football on the hilltop and followers of the local team were delighted—that is, as delighted as followers can be in defeat.

The team was called upon for a crucial contest only two weeks after being turned over to a new coach. There was just a fortnight to learn his methods and his style of play, which is radically different than the playing scheme they followed last season. In Drake they met a team that carried about a 16 pound-to-the-man weight advantage, with most of the heft coming between the two tackles. If mid-line weight ever counts for a great deal, it is on a wet field.

Despite these handicaps, Washington kept the battle in doubt for three-fourths of the play. They battled to the last ditch, and this has not always been a Pikeway gridiron characteristic. They tackled more cleanly, formed interference and ran their plays in a more business-like fashion than

Cubs Bat Recruit in Two Frames; Blake Allows Only Six Hits

Freigau Shines With a Home Run Over Left Field Fence — Paulson Pitches Two Scoreless Innings.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Chicago drew even on the series by defeating the Cardinals today, 7 to 3.

The pitching of "Sheriff" Blake was too much for the visitors, the big right hander letting down Hornsby's heavy-hitting crew with six hits. There wouldn't have been that many had Blake's support been up to normal, but his mates turned three errors. Gonzales was responsible for the last two runs of the Cardinals when he dropped the third strike on Hafey and then threw wild to first permitting the batter to take second.

Manager Hornsby ushered two of his rookies to the slab in Eddie Clough and Glimer Paulson. Paulson escaped without being scored on but Clough didn't have much luck with his left handed slants.

Clough Has Two Bad Innings.

Clough was savagely attacked in the first and sixth innings. In the initial round, with two gone, a single and two triples were good for two runs. He went along in peace and comfort for the next three innings, but a little wildness and some foxy base running by Maranville gave the Cubs another run in the fifth.

Then came the blow-off in the sixth, when every man in the Bruins lineup went to bat.

Among the things to happen were four runs, starting off with a home run over the left field wall by Freigau. It was the first time that the pill had gone over the barrier since the offending bleachers were removed.

That saw Clough's finish and another Fort Smith recruit, Paulson, went in. He held the Cubs safe for the balance of the game.

Cards Baffled by Blake.

The Cards didn't look very robust in front of Blake's hurling. Trouble started in the second, when Hafey beat out a bunt towards third. Warwick inserted a convenient two-bagger back of the scratch single and Hafey got home.

The final uprising came in the eighth. Toporcer singled to left, stole second and went to third when, after Bottomley had fanned, Gonzales dropped the third strike on Hafey and made a wild heave to first in addition. Bell furnished a long fly and Warwick supplied a single and Hafey scored.

Despite victory, the Cubs found themselves tied for last place with the Phillies, as the latter whipped the Giants in a double-header.

Orioles Pound Two Hurlers to Beat Louisville

Earnshaw Strikes Out 10 Batters, Gaining First Victory for I. L. Champions.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 3.—Baltimore clubbed Louisville into submission in the third game of the championship series here today, winning 11 to 6. The American Association pennant winner had four men in its parade of pitchers, while Earnshaw went all the way for the International League champions.

The standing:
Louisville won 2, lost 1.
Baltimore won 1, lost 2.

Holley's speed looked good to the Orioles. Archdeacon, the first Bird to face him, slammed out a two-base hit. It was his first hit of the series. A sacrifice, a base on balls, an out and a hit gave the visitors two runs in the first inning. Baltimore scored four runs in the second on three hits, a base on balls, a sacrifice and an error. Porter hit to left deep field and circled the bases when Meyer left the plate to field Anderson's throw-in. The official scorer gave him a triple and Anderson an error. Wilkinson relieved Holley and retired the side.

Wilkinson Is Routed.

Baltimore got the remainder of its runs in the fifth. After Walker had struck out, Brainard, Boley, Sheedy, McKee, Earnshaw and Archdeacon finished Wilkinson with successive singles. These hits and a sacrifice counted for five runs. Dawson and Koob finished the game.

The Colonels touched Earnshaw for as many hits as Baltimore got, but there was nothing doing at the plate in the way of groups of runs. He fanned 10 batsmen and passed four.

Drake Defeats Pikers, 6-0, In Inaugural Valley Game

has been their wont. Even "Ossie" Solem, Drake coach, said after the game: "It was obvious that Washington labored under the difficulty of a newness of association. I think they have prospects to accomplish some mighty fine things this season."

The Pikers' Handicap.

To understand the style of offensive of the two teams is to realize why Washington was more handicapped by the over abundance of moisture than its rivals. Drake employs the Minnesota shift, with the guards dropping back and shifting to the line as the ball is snapped. This requires perfect timing for effectiveness and the newly sodded Francis Field provided firm enough footing to allow the scheme of play. Washington's attack is based upon split plays with multiple handling of the ball. With a sloppy, mud-covered oval, this was impossible. Three times early in the play, it was tried and three times did it result in fumbles. Hence, it was decided to give up the artifice and depend upon straight football and offense by defense.

Time and again Levy, the big fullback, punted on the third down and sometimes on the second. He showed early in the game that he was in fine kicking fettle, despite the heavy ball; and it was hoped that a downfield error on the part of some Drake safety man might pave the way for a Washington opening. The judgment was sound enough, because almost half of the visitors' fumbles were on punts, but generally they were recovered. Levy's punting average was 37½ yards for his 11 boots, truly a remarkable average. The Drake kicker also handled his job ably with a 32-yard average on 10 kicks. The performance of this chap, Left End Sample, was noteworthy because it was the first game in which he had ever punted.

Piker Ends Weak.

On the Washington eleven, the backfield showed better by far than the line. Mahan on several occasions rambled through the Bulldog line in impressive fashion and also showed a foot-wisdom in his punt returns, that must have made Solem wince. It will be remembered, that Mahan was a former Drake freshman and got his first college football training with the players he faced yesterday. Floun, as usual, was a tower on the secondary defense, stopping rushes that had succeeded in puncturing the line.

Washington will need strengthening on its ends. Hennessy made a number of brilliant tackles, but he and the other wingmen allowed the plays to get on his outside time and again. The ends were not swatting the interferers, allowing the ball carrier to swing around with at least a one-man vanguard.

One First Down For Pikers.

The figures on the game show that Drake dominated the situation far more than the score indicates. Only once did the Pikers score a first down, while 13 times the linemen advanced with the Drake attack. Almost six times as much yardage by rushing is accredited to the Iowa backs as the locals. Only in punting and in returning kicks did the Higgins men show superiority. Piker safety zone sentries returned the ball 96 yards to 28 for Drake.

One outstanding feature, and a notable one, was the fine condition of the players. Very seldom was time taken out for injuries, an uncommon condition for opening games. Ingamells, the big Washington tackle, had to be carried from the field but was in good shape after the game and will be ready for practice Monday.

DENVER WINS FIRST GAME UNDER DAWSON

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 3.—Fred Dawson, former Princeton football star, and erstwhile University of Nebraska coach, made a successful debut in Rocky Mountain football as mentor of Denver University, which defeated Colorado Teachers' College, 13 to 0, here today.

Both of Denver University's scores were made in the second period, little plunges being used effectively by the Methodists.

Mrs. Fraser and Miss Collett To Play U. S. Title Final Today

Morning Round Scheduled for 10 O'Clock and Final 18 Holes at 2:15—Heavy Rain Yesterday Necessitated Calling Off Championship Contest at Country Club.

By John H. Alexander.

The 36-hole match between Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa, Ont., and Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I., to decide the National Women's Golf Championship, postponed yesterday, because of flooded greens, will get under way at 10 o'clock at the St. Louis Country Club this morning. At 2:15 the afternoon round will start. Tickets purchased for yesterday will be honored today.

A steady downpour of rain, which began about 8 o'clock yesterday and continued in varying intensity up to starting time, filling the course with casual water, caused U. S. G. A. officials to postpone play for the morning in the hope of getting started in the afternoon and finishing the match this morning. Some held, however, that such an arrangement would not be a continuous match and hence not a real test of the contestants' skill, the element of physical endurance being missing.

The weather solved the difficulty by contributing further water after a short lull and the whole match was definitely put over.

Miss Collett Favored.

Miss Collett is a slight favorite to win in the small betting being transacted around the clubhouse, the odds being 4 to 3 on the Rhode Island girl. Other small wagers have been laid at even money. The odds favor the youngster chiefly because her opponent has not fully recovered her top weight since an operation last year, and hence will be severely tried in a 36-hole match, especially since the going is apt to be heavy.

It is conceded that Mrs. Fraser perhaps excels Miss Collett in her variety of shots, but even in the 18-hole matches it was notable that the woman from Canada played more brilliantly on the first nine holes than after the turn and, particularly in her semifinal match with Miss Fordyce, nearly lost out on the second nine.

Miss Collett, on the other hand, plays better as she progresses. Her great finish in defeating Ada Mackenzie, Canadian champion, after being two down after the thirteenth hole, was the greatest comeback exhibition of the tournament. She won three holes in a row in a blinding rainstorm and halved 17 and 18 to win, 1 up. Then, too, she has had the best medal average of the tournament, making 78 twice, an 82 the day of the storm and tied the low medal score of the qualifying round with a 77.

1500 Gallery Looked For.

Had the match been played over two days, the odds would have favored Mrs. Fraser. Both finalists are popular with the galleries and drew equally well in their early matches. If the weather is anything like favorable today, the spectators should run between 1500 and 2000. Only a downpour will halt the match.

It was stated by veteran followers of the game, following the postponement by the Executive Committee, that the action was without a precedent in the history of important tournaments in the United States. The finals of a British tournament have been postponed only once, it was said. Both players were willing to start and Miss Collett was already on the tee at starting time, surrounded by press and movie photographers.

Mrs. Fraser, who as Alexa Stirling of Atlanta won the title in 1914, 1919 and 1920, was runner-up to Miss Marion Hollins in 1921 and to Miss Edith Cummings in 1922. Miss Collett has competed in the national championship since 1920, winning the title in 1922. She is present holder of the women's championship of France.

Ruth Ends Season With 25 Homers

Yankees Win Final Game from Athletics, 9-8, When Combs Steals Home.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Yankees won their last game of the year in a nine-inning finish today, downing the Athletics when Combs stole home with the winning run after driving in Paschal, who had doubled. The Athletics made two runs in the ninth also. The score was 9 to 8.

Ruth hit his twenty-fifth home run of the year and Bob Meusel his thirty-third.

The Athletics outhit the Yanks, but could not make their blows count.

Third place went to George Winnings, the East Side star, totaling 596, his individual games being 173, 225 and 198.

A two-man sweepstakes will be held at the Washington alleys tonight, first squad starting at 7:30 o'clock. This event is open to any doubles team in the city.

Lyons Wins His 21st Game for White Sox, 9-2

Chicago Team Still Has Chance to Gain a Tie for Fourth Place.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Ted Lyons won his twenty-first game of the season today when the Sox beat Indiana, 9 to 2. Lyons was effective all the way except in the fifth, when the Sox got off to a good start when Hooper hit a home run over the right-field bleachers. They scored after Leveen in the fifth was relieved and he retired in favor of Hasty. Several thousand boys were admitted to the game as guests of the management, and the Old Timers' baseball team was out in full force.

In the Realm Of Bird Dogs

Greymist, Winner of America Derby Went to the Prairies Unnamed.

By A. F. Hockwalt

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

GREYMIST is not the name of an English fog, a Scottish tie or an American watering inn, but that of a dog—a pointer which has come very much into the limelight of field trials recently.

She is a white and lemon pointer hailing from Canada, where she was bred and born, and she is now the property of Glenn Ireland of Birmingham.

Greymist has an unusual history. Her mother was the well-known Burger's Johanna, which at one time was quite prominent on the field trial circuit, but it is as a producer of winners that she has gained her real fame.

Johanna was also the mother of White Cloth, the pointer which won the American Field Derby at Vinita, Ok., last autumn. Greymist is in many respects a better performer than White Cloth.

She was reared in the home of C. E. Griffith at Big Cabin, Ia., and the one responsible for bringing her to maturity was Mrs. Griffith. Mrs. Griffith decides Frantz, who had charge of the puppies at the Griffith home at that time.

Went to Prairies Unnamed.

This puppy, known by the kennel name of Peggy, gave indications of speed and intelligence, and when she went to the prairies in charge of Trainer Mack Pritchett, in the summer, she was still without an official name.

It was just before the opening of the Manitoba bird-dog trials at Gainsborough, Saskatchewan, that Mrs. Frantz sent word that the puppy should be named Greymist. She had read the novel recently published, which bears that name. This novel is perhaps the only one ever written that has a fox-hunting plot and a field trial atmosphere.

Thus it came about that the white and lemon pointer bitch, known as Peggy, bore the name of Greymist when the list of entries in the Manitoba Derby was announced. The puppy also attracted the attention of H. Gleed Ireland before the Manitoba Derby was run, however, and he bought her, as she ran in his name.

Greymist won second in the Manitoba Derby. The dog that won over her was the setter, Mrs. Eugene's Ghost, owned by Mrs. King of Memphis, Tenn.

Victor in All-American.

The following week the America Derby was run on the grounds just about 20 miles from the Manitoba course. Both Greymist and Mr. Eugene's Ghost were in competition.

In many respects the All-America was a higher class event than the Manitoba. Certainly it was. Greymist ran the second heat of the trials. At the end of the first series she was easily the top dog in the stake. Her victory over the game was fully equal to the win of an all-age dog.

Mr. Eugene's Ghost and Greymist were put down in the first series in direct competition. The latter beat was a short one, but she had evidently been satisfied in the preliminaries and when the finals was awarded first and Mrs. Eugene's Ghost second, the latter met with popular approval.

Since the two trials in the little Oklahoma puppy has been officially registered as Greymist.

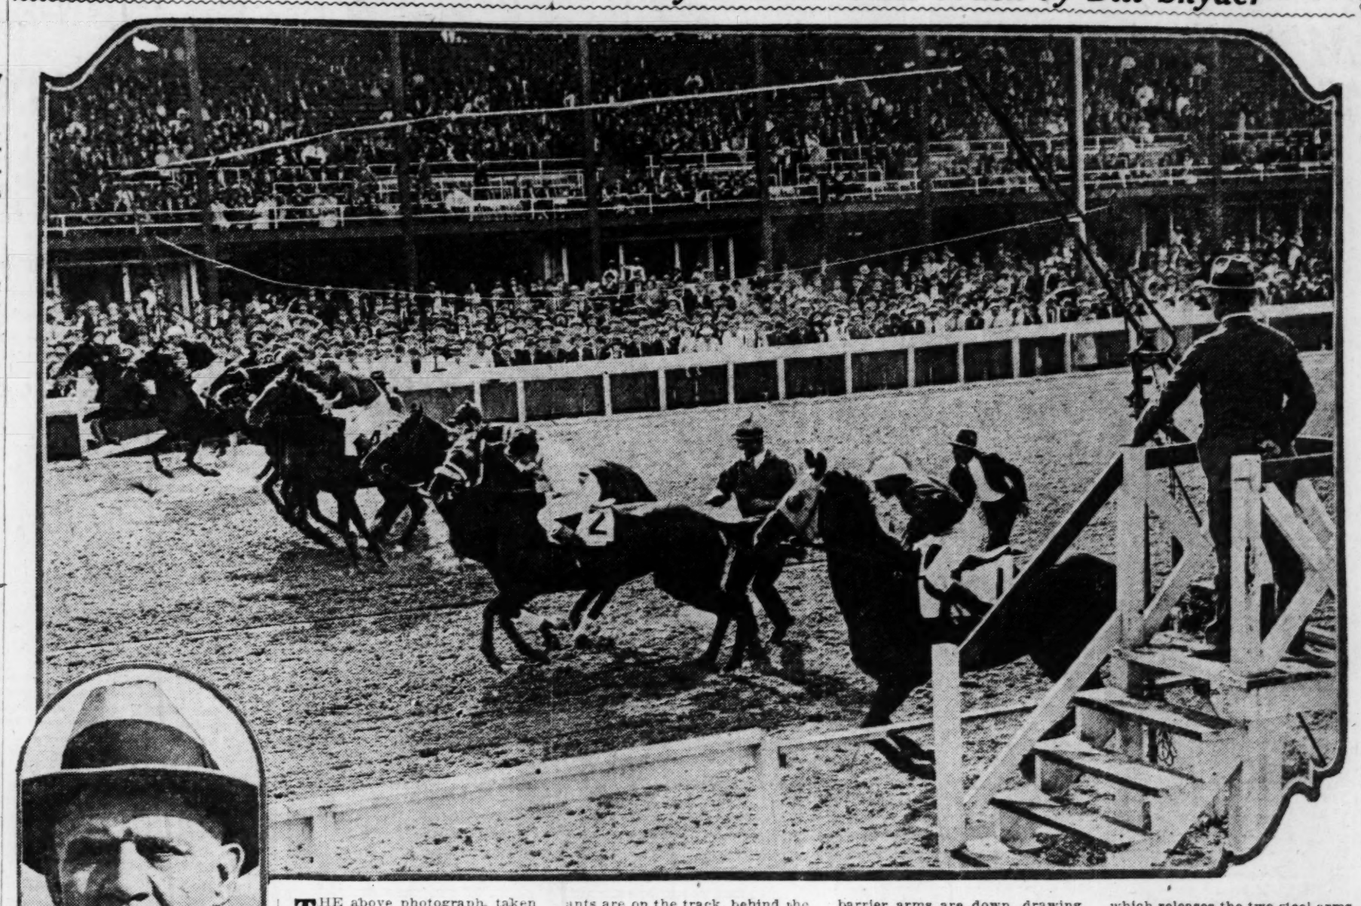
An Almost Perfect Start Sent Away at Fairmount Track by Bill Snyder



STARTER WILLIAM SNYDER.

THE above photograph, taken at the new Fairmount race track, shows a large field getting away from the starting point as the barrier snaps into the air.

Starter Bill Snyder is shown in the starter's box and his assistants are on the track, behind the horses. Snyder has his right hand doubled up behind his back and in his hand is the electric button which he presses to release the arms of the "gate" or barrier. As the horses are lined up preparatory to the start, the barrier arms are down, drawing a tape across the track. The tape strikes the horses about breast high. When Snyder is satisfied that the horses are in as true alignment as possible, assuring a fair start to all entries, he presses the button which releases the two steel arms simultaneously. The tape is whipped into the air, out and away from the horses, and over their heads. This type of "arm" barrier is known as the MacGinnis gate and is recognized as the best yet devised.

By Hisself, Pacemaker, Tires Badly

Result Is a Surprise as Winner Suffered Recent Defeats Under Two Pounds Less Weight.

By G. F. T. Ryall.

Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Belair stud's Aga Khan, which has figured in several form reversals this season turned another form flip-flop in the running of the Continental Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward at one mile and a furlong at the Jamaica Track here, this afternoon.

Following the pace of By Hisself, the favorite, for five furlongs he went to the front leaving the backstretch and won by a length and a half in a driving finish from the Green Tree Stable's Dazzler, while Gifford Cochran's Dangerous, an added starter closed fast on the rail to beat By Hisself, a length for the shortest end of the purse.

In his last two starts Aga Khan, under imposts of around 120 pounds incurred by his good performances at Belmont Park, has been flirting with the sixteenth pole, but today he picked up 122 pounds and just stepped to town. Five went to the post for the Continental, Blind Play and Cherry Pie having been withdrawn over night.

By Hisself Sets Pace.

By Hisself went right to the front at the break and reeled off the quarter in :23 4-5 and the half in :48 with Aga Khan little more than a length back of the pace. Dangerous got away slowly while Dazzler and Sunsini followed a couple of lengths back.

In his winning races By Hisself has come from behind but today, after stepping six furlongs in 1:12 on the heavy going, he began to tire. Rounding the turn into the stretch it looked as though Dazzler would come on and win going away, but Aga Khan was too much game for him and, after swinging wide for the better going, drew out to win going away.

Aga Khan likes this track for it was here he ran a mile and a quarter in 2:01 4-5 last fall. He had had enough to run the mile in 1:38 2-5 and then finish out the five furlongs in 1:52 4-5 this afternoon. Sunsini, which is on occasion a top notch muddler, played no part in the running of the race.

The Continental handicap was worth $5050 to the winner.

Starmaticus Off to Bad Start.

Hayal, thanks to a running start, won the Baldwin Handicap, for 2-year-olds, at five and a half furlongs, the secondary feature of the day while Sarmaticus, which was handicapped at a disadvantage at the break, finished third. Only half a dozen 2-year-olds went to the post and, contrary to the custom, Cassidy got the field away to a walkup start.

Hayal, on the rail, was in motion as the barrier went up, while Sarmaticus, the 1 to 2 favorite in spite of his imposit of an 130 pounds was ready and then was caught in turn and pinched back as the break broke.

Hayal went to the front and was given a drive from the first furlong to the finish to beat Gavotte Ethereal and at the end won only the margin of a head from Sarmaticus, which is as fast for five furlongs as Aga Khan is for a mile and a half furlongs was Hayal, stepping the first time in :23 1-5 and the half in :47 4-5, which is going some in that kind of going. The race, which had added value of $2500, was worth $2575 to the winner.

Track Very Heavy.

The track was deep in mud from rain of the night before and ran considerably in favor of the long-legged a horse as the Delaware. That gelding went to the front in the first quarter of the five furlongs event for platers and opened the card and won, going five lengths. Johnny Todd, a castoff of the Ranson stable, galloped to a cheap victory for horses in the second event over a mile and 70 yards. Revelation, the place, with Hot Dog third.

PREVENTS PLAY IN SCHOOL LEAGUES

Yesterday caused postponement of all city, county and preparatory league football games. Normandy was to meet Roosevelt on the school's campus, while Soldan was to play Christian Brothers' College on the Brothers' field. Ritenour vs. Kirkwood and Maplewood-Alumni contest were called off. The games of the Preparatory League, which was between Western Military Academy and Chaminade at Normandy, was also canceled.

Hester, Clayton and C. B. C. will play the postponed game, Western and Chaminade will play their scheduled. Both games will start at 2:30 p. m. It is said that Maplewood will not play Alumni next week, since Blue and White has one game and few dates for the Normandy-Soldan and the Kirkwood-Webster clashes have not been set.

Huskers' Captain, Weir, Big Factor in Stopping Rushes of Urbana Star

All-America Tackle Breaks Through Illinois Line and Nails Hero of Last Year's Football Campaign — Not One Sensational Gain Made by "Red."

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct 3.—Out of the mist hanging low over Illinois' $2,000,000 memorial stadium, a revengeful Nebraska football team, smarting under defeats of 1923 and 1924, rose to super-power today, vanquished Illinois 14 to 0 and accomplished what no other football team has been able to do—completely stop Red Grange, America's outstanding football star.

Grange, heretofore unstoppable was nailed almost in his tracks virtually every time he started. Once the flaming red head brought the 30,000 spectators cheering to their feet when he broke away on a left end run, but he was chased out of bounds after sprinting 15 yards, his most spectacular effort of the game.

Grange, making his 1925 debut, carried the ball 19 times for a total gain of 62 yards. Thrice he was thrown back for a loss of two or three yards and once for a yard. However, he heaved a pass that netted 18 yards, making him responsible for a total gain of 80 yards.

Grange Taken Out.

Grange, unable to pierce the magnificent Nebraska defense, and thwarted in his efforts to circle the ends, was taken out of the game a few seconds after the start of the fourth period, broken and crushed. As the noted player, covered with mud from head to foot, walked to the side line, tears gathered in his eyes and he fell into the waiting arms of his comrades. In justice to Grange it must be said that he started the game suffering pain from a sprained wrist sustained in practice and unable to heave forward passes with his usual skill.

The stopping of Grange was Chiefly due to the deadly tackling of Capt. Ed Weir of the Nebraska eleven, himself an all-America star. Weir smashed through the Illinois interference, spilling the players in every direction, and brought Grange down with gains of two of three yards. Three times he ran Grange out of bounds. The Nebraska line charged furiously and quickly, getting away faster than Illinois backfield players and brought them to earth almost before they could get under way.

Interference Lacking.

Grange lacked the superb interference of 1924, when he amazed the gridiron world in his sensational flights across the chalk marks. He missed Wally McIlwain, Hall and Britton, his shock troops of last year. Britton did not start the game today. Neither did Hall. They were rushed into the gray in an attempt to give Grange a helping hand, but they came too late. Instead of being used in the backfield, as he was last year, Britton was used in the line today.

Nebraska's first touchdown, scored a few minutes after the opening of the first period, came directly as the result of a forward pass, which Grange attempted. Dalley, the Nebraska fullback, intercepted Grange's pass on the Illinois 40-yard line, and with interference quickly formed about him, carried it the remainder of the distance to the goal. Brown drop-kicked for the added point.

Another Pass Intercepted.

The Cornhuskers' second touchdown was also the result of an intercepted pass; at least, it paved the way for it. Rhodes went over near the close of the game after Schols had intercepted a pass from Daugherty, the Illinois fullback, on Illinois' 43-yard line. Rhodes then tore off a 40-yard run around right end. Capt. Weir on a tackle around play made a yard and Rhodes went over on the next smash. Brown again scored the extra point with a drop kick.

The game was played on a wet, slippery, rain-soaked field, made slow and heavy as result of an 18-hour downpour.

Natural and Graceful Footwork Secret of Successful Bowling, Writes Champion Jimmy Smith

This Is Most Important Detail of Game, Milwaukee Star Asserts—Long and Faithful Practice Is Needed to Correct Various Faults in Sport.

NO. 2—HOW TO BOWL.
By Jimmy Smith.
(World's Greatest Bowler).

YOU cannot become a good bowler in a minute. Like any sport you must practice and do lots of it. But it will [illegible] time when you can bowl good if you learn to start correctly. It is true that if you never saw an alley before, you can step on the platform and bowl—after a fashion. But I am writing these [illegible] instructions for the man who likes to do well whatever he attempts.

J. Smith.

Not every man can become a champion bowler, even if he follows these instructions faithfully. But every man, whether he has bowled before or not, can improve his average. They are the result of my 30 years' experience and development in the game.

I do not intend to advise you to adopt any particular system or style, nor to mimic any good bowler, except in the fundamentals of bowling. Every man has his own peculiar physical makeup, and so a certain system or style which would come easy and be natural to one would be awkward and inefficient for another.

Good Footwork Essential.

Bowling, as I have mentioned before, is quite similar in many respects to music, and demands the same qualities from the participant. You cannot become a great musician until after months of persistent exercises to train the fingers to flexibility and co-ordination to the brain.

Likewise you cannot become a great strike and spare artist until you have practiced delivering the ball, approaching the foul line; until you have mastered and have full control over your feet, your arm and your wrist, so that they coordinate with your brain.

So the first thing to do is, of course is to forget your strikes and spares, forget there is a thing as ten pins, forget you have an average; just set up the [illegible] practice footwork, the most important detail to good bowling, the one big thing most bowlers lack. And do not do this only do it every day for [illegible] at a time—do it two or three times a day if you can—continue to do it for weeks, or until the time arrives when you can mark a point on the foot at the foul line, take your run and stop at that point every time and do it gracefully and naturally—and until you can place the ball so accurately that it will [illegible] miss that headpin and will always hit on the same side.

Will Prove Worth While.

When you are able to do this consistently, even with a certain point in front of the pin, you have gained a great bowler—for after you have mastered this detail the rest is easy in comparison.

Try it today. Make up your mind as Grant said, "If it takes all winter." It will take patience and perseverance and good nature, as I have said before, but the result will be so gratifying, your average will jump so high and your action will be so much more graceful and natural that it will be well worth while.

In my next article I shall tell how to select a bowling ball to measurements for thumb and finger holes; how it should be drilled, and bored to get best results, and other very important matters to wear.

KUTSCH SCORES 17 POINTS AS HAWKEYES BEAT ARKANSAS, 26—0

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 3.—Nick Kutsch, sophomore, proved that he is probably one of Iowa's most brilliant football players when he lead the Hawkeyes' offense to a 26 to 0 victory over Arkansas here this afternoon.

Kutsch plunged off tackle and skirted the ends for two touchdowns, made one point after touchdown, and made a place kick for a total of 17 points. In addition to that he threw some of the prettiest passes that in the opinion of veteran sports writers, have ever been hurled on the Iowa field.

Can Harry Wills' Size Offset Champion Dempsey's Punch?

Negro Challenger, Now Matched for Title Fight, Has 25 Pounds Advantage and Also the Edge in Reach and Fighting Experience.

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

From Stevedore to world's champion—will that be the career of Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, now matched to fight Jack Dempsey for the title, next September?

Fifteen years ago Wills was hustling cotton bales on New Orleans levees, at the age of 19.

A strapping lad of 6 feet 3 inches in height and a tremendous reach of 84 inches, the lithe, brown-skinned youngster soon gained a reputation for fighting prowess. His amazing speed and his tremendous reach gave him an initial advantage over foes, and his weight, then about 190, was a big factor in his favor.

He soon gained more than a local reputation and in the short space of three years he entered the hall of fame, introduced by "Tham" Langford, then at the zenith of his great fighting career.

Wills was matched with Langford at Los Angeles and it was thought he would be just another meal-ticket for the left-hook king. When the men entered the ring the physical contrast was appalling. Langford was almost a foot shorter than his opponent, and had to rise up on his toes when he let fly for the tall boy's head.

Sam tried to work Harry into leaving an opening for his left hook when something struck him—the rafters for all Sam knew. But it wasn't the roof. It was the floor of the ring that flew up to meet him.

Langford Floored Four Times.

The youth from the levees had knocked the mighty Sam flat. The old campaigner toiled to his feet and fell into a clinch. But it wasn't long before the floor came up again and said "How dye do" to Sam.

Four times Sam and the canvas become intimately associated. It was Wills mitt that did the trick.

But not lightly is a veteran of ring wars put aside. Sam slowly conserved his strength and tied up Wills' arms. Regaining his strength as the fight progressed, he gradually began to solve the tall man's stuff.

An then the fun began. At the end of the fourteenth round Wills was all in. His second feared to see him take any more punishment. He resigned.

That fight was a turning point in Wills' career. Through it he added to his great natural fighting advantages the tricks and fighting features that made Langford great. He studied the infighting tactics of the old master, and from that time climbed steadily up the ladder.

Four years ago he became, at the age of 29, a real challenger for the title, and today sees him dated up for the trial.

In the long interval of 14 fighting years between his levee career and his signing for the Dempsey bout, Wills has known only one knockout defeat—that was by Sam Langford.

All Defeats Atoned For.

He has been beaten by only three other boxers. In 1914, the same year he first fought Langford, he lost to Sam McVeay, another great black fighter, after 20 rounds. In 1917 he broke his arm in a fight with Battling Jim Johnson and had to quit. In 1922 he lost to Big Bill Tate on a foul.

Each and every one of these fighters Wills has defeated. He knocked out Tate in one round, Sam Langford twice in six and five rounds, and Sam McVey in six rounds. He beat Battling Johnson in six.

That alone is enough to make the Brown Panther of today a terribly feared man. When it is further considered that he has flattened 44 opponents in 95 fights, it is evident that he has not lacked the punch with which to finish the foe.

Wills lacks the terrific punching power plant that Dempsey carries. Yet, when they meet, the black champion will have a signal physical advantage over his foe.

His reach from tip to tip will be about 8 inches greater.

He will be two inches taller.

He will outweigh Dempsey 25 pounds.

He will have had the benefit of experience against fighters of better quality than the men Dempsey has opposed.

On the other hand he will be four years older than Dempsey, is said to have bad hands, is none too strong in morale (if some stories are to be believed) and, with all his physical strength, is no such hitter as Dempsey.

Then, too, he is disliked by all referees. He embarrasses them. He fights foul and tries to "put something over" on officials. He holds his opponent and tries to sneak one over when the enemy's arms are locked.

Strong Enough to Win.

Wills appears to have the physical equipment to beat Dempsey. But, standing between him and his chance of becoming world's titleholder, are his caution, his fouling and his fear of smashing his hands.

Dempsey himself believes Wills can never beat him. He says that Wills is NOT clever, that he is NOT game and that he can NOT take a punch on his "glass jaw."

Yet the records show that, up to five or six years ago, Wills DID take it and get up from the floor to win; that he KNOCKED OUT the greatest fighter of his time; and that he WAS clever enough to avoid defeat by the best men of his time.

How far he has gone back is guesswork. Judged by the Madden and Firpo contests he will not whip Dempsey. Judged by his victories over Langford, McVea, Joe Jeanette, Fred Fulton, Kid Norfolk and others, he has a good chance with anybody.

Take your pick.

3 Marks Fall in Paris Meet; U.S. Stars Perform

Evans Is Third in 200-Meter Dash—Patterson Wins in Hurdles

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Athletes from the United State, England, Haiti, Switzerland, Sweden, Norway, Belgium, Finland, Holland and France competed today at the Colombes Olympic Stadium in the most elaborate track and field meet held in Paris since the 1924 Olympic games.

The United States was represented by a team from the Illinois Athletic Club headed by Ivan Riley, hurdler, which is concluding a 61-day tour of Europe, of which 31 days have been spent in athletic competition in 14 countries.

In the final of the 100-meter dash Vanderberg, Holland, was first; Theard, Haiti, second; Gavois, France, third. Time—10 4-5 seconds. Evans, the former University of Illinois sprinter, with the I. A. C. team, did not start in this event.

Baraton of France provided an upset in the final of the 1000-meter run by defeating Martin of Switzerland, who finished second to Lowe of England in the 800-meter run in the Olympic games. Martin finished second to Baraton with Keller of France third. The time was 2 minutes 29 2-5 seconds, a new French record.

Three Records Fall.

In the final of the 200-meter dash, Andre Mourlon, France, was first; Cerbonney, France, second; H. T. Evans Jr., United States, third. Time 21 4-5 seconds.

The meet resulted in the smashing of three French records, including Baraton's performance in the 1000-meter run. The other new records were set by Engdahl, Sweden, who was third in the 400-meter run in the 1920 Antwerp Olympia, in taking first in the 300-meter dash in 35 seconds, and by Eckloff, Sweden, who won the 3000-meter event in 8 minutes 35 seconds.

In the 3000-meter run Berg, Finland, was second and Guillemot, France, who won the 5000-meter run at the Antwerp Olympics, was third.

Petterson, Sweden, heralded as the greatest hurdler in Europe, won the 110-meter hurdles in the slow time of 15 2-5 seconds.

Charles Hoff, Norway, failed in an attempt to break his own world's record in the pole vault, stopping at four meters (13 feet 1½ inches).

West Point Team Shows Power in Beating Detroit

Wilson and Buell Score All of Touchdowns in 31 to 6 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Old fashioned football colored with flashes of aerial warfare carried the Army to a victory over the University of Detroit team here today, 31 to 5.

The new forward line of the Cadets, backed up by a sturdy and experienced backfield, presented an impregnable front to the Detroit warriors, who early were compelled to take the battle into the air. Their forward passing attack brought a counter-fire of long tosses from the Army, interspersed with powerful plunges into the line by the broad shouldered Harry Wilson, veteran West Point back.

Three long passes hurled by Harding to Wilson and Baxter, the former taking two of them, paved the way for the Army's opening touchdown in the first quarter. Wilson took the ball across on a line smash, but Harding failed to make extra point.

Wilson and Buell Star.

In the second quarter, after recovering a fumble at midfield, Pilippart, of Detroit cut loose two long throws to Jamoski and Coyle and the latter raced to the two-yard line. From here Maniere carried the ball over for Detroit's only touchdown. The Cadets replied with a steady parade down the field. Wilson finally carried the bal lacross and the half ended with Army holding their 12-6 advantage with a complete team of substitutes.

After Wilson had pierced the Detroit line for his third touchdown at the beginning of the second half West Point trotted out a pony backfield featuring a youngster named Don Buell. Buell made two long end runs for Army's fourth and fifth touchdowns.

HARD TO CHOOSE BETWEEN 1925 WORLD SERIES RIVALS

Batting Advantage of Pirates Is Offset by Senators' Pitching Edge

Washington Has Edge in Catching, Experience in World Series Games and Reliable Fielding; Pittsburg Excels in Base-Stealing and in the Outfield.

By Herman Wecke.

If records for the season mean anything, then two evenly-matched clubs will fight it out for the world's baseball supremacy in the meeting between the Pittsburg Pirates and Washington Senators. Statistics show that there is little to choose between the contenders in any department.

Thus, with all other things being equal, the team that gets "the breaks" will likely be crowned 1925 world's champion.

In but one phase has either club a decided advantage over the other. And that falls to the lot of the Senators. Bucky Harris' men have the experience and have exhibited their courage under fire. The same cannot be said of the Pirates. Only three players—Earl Smith, Stuffy McInnis and Babe Adams—of the Pirate nine will play in the coming series have been in the big series before.

EXPERIENCE AND COURAGE—Washington, tested in 1924 world's series with Giants.

PITCHING—Nearly even, with "Firpo" Marberry giving the Senators a slight edge, because of his wonderful ability as an emergency relief man.

CATCHING—Washington. Ruel is the best man on either club.

INFIELD — Practically even, Washington holding the edge at first and second and Pittsburg in the other two places.

OUTFIELD—Pittsburg.

BASE STEALING—Pittsburg.

BATTING—Slight edge for Pirates.

FIELDING — Pittsburg more spectacular, but the Senators are steadier.

Not only has Washington's courage been tested in the world series, but also in the past pennant race. The Senators had to come from behind to win. This they did and at one stage in the struggle they downed the Athletics, their closest rivals, in seven successive engagements. That practically clinched the second straight flag for Bucky Harris. Indicating that the Senator players can be counted upon to do their best under fire.

Pirate Morale Not Proved.

What the Pirate players will do in the pinch is not known, although during the campaign the Corsairs held together in great style once they got going after a bad start.

Two right-handers and two southpaws will be Washington's main hurling reliance. They are Johnson, Coveleskie, Ruether and Zachary. All have worked in world's series games. Covy got his baptism in 1920 and Ruether with the Reds in 1919. Against this array, the Pirates have Meadows, Aldridge, Morrison, Kremer, Yde and Adams. Meadows and Aldridge are likely to prove the more effective, although the others have good records.

There is little to choose between the two staffs as a whole. But Washington has Fred "Firpo" Marberry. Here is the man who may swing the series in favor of the Senators. Marberry is the greatest relief flinger in captivity. He showed he can stop world's series contenders by what he did against the Giants in 1924. Pittsburg has no Marberry. If a Pirate regular goes wrong, another regular is called upon. That gives Harris an advantage as he can save his regulars for starting duty in other clashes.

And, in a short series, that's a big help. Therefore, if there is an edge it must go to Washington.

As regards catching, there is no doubt but that the American Leaguers have the advantage, with Harold Ruel, St. Louis boy, as the outstanding receiver on either club, this despite the fact that Ruel made but one safety in the 1924 contests. Ruel went through without an error and established four new world's series fielding records for catchers. Ruel's chief assistant will be Hank Severeid, a tried veteran and a former member of the Browns.

Pittsburg will rely on Earl Smith and Johnny Gooch. Smith was with the Giants in the world's series in 1921 and 1922, but he proved no bowling success. It will be Gooch's first chance. Both Ruel and Smith are hitting .300 for the year, while Severeid has a better average than Gooch.

All-America Men in Infield.

Star athletes, in fact, All-American players, meet in the infield, Washington, with Joe Judge, has a decided edge at first. Grantham and the veteran McInnis are the Pirate regulars. Judge is not only a great fielder, but a fine batter. Grantham is serving his first year as an initial station guardian. McInnis was at the heighth of his career with the famous Athletics prior to 1914, a long time ago, as far as baseball goes.

The Senators have it at second with Manager Harris opposed to Moore. Moore has outhit Harris this season, but he is not as reliable in the pinch. It's in the tight places that Bucky does his best, as witness the 1924 world's series.

Then short. Here are two stars. Glenn Wright was named on Babe Ruth's All-America team, while Roger Peckinpaugh was voted the most valuable man in the A. L. Wright, because of his batting, speed and better arm is given the edge. But Peck has something of a sixth sense, which may permit him to outshine Wright in the coming series. Then Peck is a mighty tough customer in the pinch. Wright has been one of the Pirates' timeliest hitters this year.

Two more All-America men are at third. Bluege was picked by Ruth and Traynor by John McGraw. Traynor, however, is given the edge. He has outbatted Bluege and is just as good on the defense.

Senators Dependable.

The Washington infield as a whole is probably steadier. Then that Peck-Harris-Judge combination is one of the greatest on double plays in baseball. The Pirate stars, especially Wright and Traynor, are more sensational. However, the chance to do the sensational may not come in the 1925 series.

More All-American talent is also found in the outfield. Here are "Kiki" Cuyler of the Pirates and Goose Goslin of the Senators. These men play opposite fields. Cuyler, one of the leading lights in the N. L., holds the advantage over Sam Rice in right field. This despite the fact that Rice himself is a player of no mean ability. Cuyler has it on his rival in batting. They are about even in speed and fielding.

Then comes centerfield. Pittsburg has the veteran Max Carey, one of the greatest middle gardeners in the pastime. His rival will likely be Earl McNeely, who made something of a name for himself in 1924. But Carey has the better of the argument, in every department, although McNeely can go and get 'em in the meadows. Old as he is he leads in stolen bases.

In left field, Goslin has the advantage over Barnhart. He outhits his rival, while he also has more speed on the bases and in the field.

In reserve material, the advantag is with Washington. The Senators have Joe Harris, a handy man in the outfield or infield; Nemo Leibold, and Everett Scott as first stringers. The Pirates have Bigbee, Hass, Thompson and Ens.

Pirates Have Batting Punch.

Bill McKechnie will be able to put on the field eight regulars with swat averages of .300 or better. However, the season's averages show the Corsairs clubbing but a few points better than the Senators.

Pittsburg, with Carey and Cuyler, has two of the greatest base stealers in the majors, although Bluege, Goslin and Peck have shown ability to pilfer on opposing catchers.

Harris Drilling Ferguson to Hurl In World Series

Coveleskie Not Likely to Pitch —Special Brace for Shortstop Peckinpaugh.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—There is no broken bone in Roger Peckinpaugh's foot and the shortstop, who was voted the most valuable player to his club in the American League, will get into the world's series against the Pirates, according to physicians of the Washington club. An examination made after the veteran's return from Boston revealed only a slight ankle sprain that is expected to yield quickly to treatment.

To protect the shortstop from more serious injury in the tilt with the National League champions a special footgear, steel-braced, intended to so support Peck's ankle that he will be able to withstand all strain of play, is being made for him.

Manager Bucky Harris and Trainer Mike Martin are worried about Stanley Coveleskie, leading pitcher of the American League, who had been figured as one of the team's best mound assets. A sore back which had handicapped him early in the week, pained the pitcher so severely yesterday that he was unable to report for practice. He is not expected to return to active duty until after the tilts with the Pirates are under way, if at all.

Alex Ferguson is getting extra attention in the daily drilling, as the Senators will have to make much use of him should Covey not be available. If Ferguson can show in the series the brand of pitching he showed in his few starts as a Senator, Covey will not be sorely missed.

K. OF C. TEAM AND WAGNERS PLAY FIRST GAME OF TITLE SET

The first of a three-game series between the Wagners and Knights of Columbus to decide the championship of the University City Municipal Baseball League will be played this afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock.

Golf Match Postponed.

The exhibition golf match scheduled at the Creve Coeur Country Club today between Eddie Held and Jimmy Manion and Earl Howell and Vincent Nettsler has been postponed until next Sunday because the heavy rains made the course too heavy for the contest.

World Series Would Fill Park Seating 200,000 Persons

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, believes that the "Pittsburg Pirates have a little the better chance to win" the world's series from Washington, but also pays tribute to the strength of the American League entry.

"It would be foolish," said Mr. Heydler in a statement to the Associated Press today, "to make confident predictions when a team of the steadiness and spirit of the Washington Senators is engaged with a team that has the dash, brilliance and power of the Pittsburg Pirates."

"The series interest grows wider and deeper every year. The results will be broadcast and cabled all over the world. The ticket demand would tax a park with a seating capacity of 200,000."

DRAZ AND NELSON ARE SCRATCH MEN IN 14 MILE BIKE RACE TODAY

The Century Cycling Club's annual club road race, the Bellefontaine handicap, and derby events, will be held today. The road race, which is the feature, will be held over the Olive Street road, starting from the Creve Coeur car tracks at 9:30 a. m. The finish line is at Bellefontaine, a distance of 14 miles. After the events the riders will go to Little Creve Coeur Lake to participate in the derby events, a miss-and-out race, slow race, obstacle race, and hill climb.

Lou Schieller and Joan Illish have been given the limit handicap of 12 minutes, with Lou Droz and Chester Nelson pedaling from scratch in the road race. In training, Droz and Nelson covered the course in 32 minutes 35 seconds, 27 seconds faster than the record made by James B. Freeman in 1913.

The two men are the fastest bike riders in the city, with the exception of John Boulicault, state title holder. Both Nelson and Droz are veterans.

Nelson holds the 14-mile and 10-mile records of 2 minutes 44 seconds in 1921. Last year he established the 10-mile record, negotiating the distance in 24 minutes 41 seconds. Both were made at Fairground Park. Droz holds one record — the one-mile unpaced, in 2 minutes 26 3-5 seconds, made at the Fairgrounds last year. He is a former city and state champion.

Granville Is Winner.

LONDON, Oct. 2. — Philip Granville, formerly of Hamilton, Ontario, today won the Manchester-to-Blackpool road walking race, in 8 hours 6 minutes and 59 seconds. Last year's winner, Holt, of the Yorkshire Walking Club, was second.

Pirates Better on Offense Than Senators, McKechnie Thinks

Corsair Manager Writes That Goslin and Rice Are Strong Offensive Men—Rates Peck and Harris as Dangerous Men in the Pinches.

By William B. McKechnie.
Manager Pittsburg Pirates.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 3.—In considering the offensive strength of the Pirates and the Senators I believe everyone will agree with me when I say the Pirates have the better attack. I am not discounting such valuable hitters on the Washington club, like Goslin, Rice and Judge, and such dangerous men in the pinches as Peckinpaugh and Harris. At the same time though I feel sure that our club from top to bottom is a better hitting and a better base running aggregation than Washington.

McKechnie.

The Pirates are the best attacking club I have seen in all my experience. Until you get down to the pitchers you can't find a man who does not hit .300. It has been the terrific hitting of the Pirates that helped so largely in winning the pennant. It may be on the books, for Washington pitchers to stop the Pirates, but if they do they will have accomplished something that no other group of hurlers has been able to do. It is only natural that I do a little bragging about this hitting of the Pirates, because I have never seen the whole team stopped for any length of time.

Muddy Ruel is a good hitter, but he is not as apt to break up a game as Earl Smith, a free swinger. Gooch is a smart hitter. Grantham, I think, is a better hitter than Judge. McInnis' value to our club cannot be underestimated. He was a tower of strength every time called upon. He will help considerably against the Senators because of his experience in six world series.

Harris Gets the Edge.

Bucky Harris is a bad man at the plate, I am willing to admit, and extremely dangerous in a tight place. I am willing to give him an edge over Eddie Moore, this edge coming from Harris' experience. Don't discount Moore, however. He has been hittin .300 all year. Moore is faster, too.

Wright and Peckinpaugh are two great shortstops, strong in attacking power. Peck was awarded the most vluable player trophy in the American League, and I know how good a man must be to get that prize. I rate him as a tower of strength on the offensive, a fellow who is apt to break up any tight ball game. Still I won't put him above Glenn Wright in attacking power. Wright's batting mark doesn't tell the whole story. He hit over .300, but he hit about .500 in the pinches.

I put Traynor ahead of Bluege. Both are young hustling ball players. Traynor is a better hitter and is faster.

In the outfield, the Pirates can muster greater offensive strength, I believe, inspite of the great year Rice has had and the fine work of both Goslin and McNeely. Goslin is going to be a tough fellow to stop because he is one of those free swinging fellows. Rice, a veteran, is a real star.

What Pirates Have Done.

When you consider that Barnhart and Cuyler have driven in more than 100 runs each and that Carey's batting mark has been around .340 all year, I believe you'll agree when I say that our trio will be a better attacking force than the Senators' three.

McNeely is a valuable man, but his hitting is not as good as that of any of the three Pirate outfielders. Goslin and Rice are not to be toyed with, because they can hit and are fast, and form a strong offensive pair. I am giving my boys the edge in this comparison, nevertheless.

Cuyler, one of the sensations of the year, leads our club in hitting with a mark around .360. He has driven in more than 100 runs; is second to Carey in stolen bases; is one of the leading home run hitters and leads the club in triples and doubles. You can't ask for much more than all that. You must go far back in history to find a better attacking outfield than the Pirates.

Washington pitchers, like Johnson and Ruether, will outhit Pirate hurlers but the offensive strength of mound stars will hardly sway the series.

In summing up I feel sure the Pirates will show a better attacking force than the Senators. This is one big edge we have.

Defense Weakest Department Of Pirates, Wagner Writes

Records Show Team Has Been Unsteady This Season — Infielders Do Not Cover as Much Ground as in Old Days, Asserts Former Star.

By Hans Wagner.
Shortstop on Pittsburg's 1909 World Champions.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 3.—Defensive ability is a strong asset to a baseball team in an important engagement like a world's championship series. An air-tight defense is always desirable, but where so much hinges on the outcome of a single contest, errors are more costly than in ordinary games. They are also more noticeable, and may have a more serious effect on the player who makes them than in the everyday routine of the season.

Wagner

In a long series, a player realizes that a slip doesn't mean so much. He will have plenty of time later to retrieve himself, and make the fans forget his mistakes.

But in a world's series, every play has an important bearing on the final result and a single slip may mean the difference between the winners and the loser's share of the spoils.

I have watched the fielding performance of men in the National league during the past few years very closely. I don't believe that the average fielder today covers as much ground as did the players in the days of 1909 and thereabouts. No doubt the "lively ball" is responsible for the existing condition. The men don't have time to cover ground as they used to. Balls are hit harder, for nearly everybody is taking a free cut.

Science Dropping Off.

Year after year it seems to me that the science of defense has been getting smaller and smaller in the major leagues. Infielders play a different game from what they used to, and the outfielders also conduct themselves differently. They have had to plan a new defense since the game became so lively.

Recently it was claimed that a change had been made in the ball, reducing its traveling powers a bit, but teams have not yet had time to adjust themselves to the changed condition, if they actually are changed.

Sizing up the Pittsburg team of 1925, it looks to me as if the defense is its weakest department, and by that I mean fielding and pitching combined for both are part of the defensive system.

The Pirates have fought their way through to their high position in the race more on agility to hit and run bases than anything else. In many games, the opposition scored many runs, which would have been sufficient to win against ordinary rivals. However the Buccaneers had the wonderful strength on the attack to offset this.

Probably the present outfit is just as good defensively as we were in 1909. I have never claimed that the Pittsburg team which won the flag that year was an outstanding aggregation. It was fortunate in many ways. The old Cub machine, which had won flags for three seasons running, was beginning to slow up and disintegrate, although it was still capable of playing good ball.

Team Got the Breaks.

We got the breaks during the season, but they were coming to us because we had failed to get them in 1908, when we really should have won. The Pirates this year got a lot of breaks, too, but they were largely breaks which they made for themselves.

We had weak spots in our infield, but the men worked together well, and helped to conceal each other's weaknesses. The present Pittsburg team is a rather young aggregation, and that accounts for much of the unsteadiness which has marked some of its games. It takes time to co-ordinate defense, just as well as attack.

Just as was the case 16 years ago with Manager Clarke, so it has been this year that Manager McKechnie has had to do some experimenting to get the best combination. I figure that the Pirates of 1926 will be much steadier in the field than they have been this year. The team looks good to go ahead for several seasons with but few changes. In that respect it differs from our 1909 pennant winners, for the following season saw that old machine pretty well wrecked.

OKLAHOMA AGGIES LOSE FIRST GAME IN M. V. CONFERENCE

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 3.—The Oklahoma Aggies lost their first game as a member of the Missouri Valley Conference here today to the University of Kansas. The score was 13 to 3. The game opened the season for both teams.

The first scoring came in the second quarter after Kansas had worked the ball close to the Aggie goal. Schmidt, Kansas left halfback, plowed through center for a touchdown. The kick for the added point was blocked.

McCoy, Oklahoma Aggie right half, scored a place kick in the third period from the 36-yard line.

Anderson, Kansas substitute halfback, intercepted a pass in the last period and carried the ball to the three-yard line, from which it was carried over for a touchdown.

126 ENTRIES FOR WOMEN'S DISTRICT GOLF TOURNAMENT

Qualifying Play Opens Tomorrow

Miss Virginia Pep and Mrs. George Mix Will Open Westwood Event at 9 A. M.

The largest field in the history of the event will start tomorrow morning in the qualifying round of the annual women's district golf tournament which will be played over the Westwood Country Club course. Already totaling 126 players, the entry list is expected to swell before starting time, as applications will be received on the first tee up to 9 o'clock, when the first pair will tee off. The qualifying round will be of 18 holes and the finals of 18 holes will be played next Saturday.

It is doubtful if Mrs. Audrey Faust Wallace, reigning champion, will enter the competition this year due to impaired health and her trying 20-hole match in the first round of the national tournament at the Country Club. As champion she will not have to qualify for match play and may submit her entry in time for the first round matches. Mrs. J. A. Corbett, president of the district association, will not play because of an injured hand.

Two three-time trophies may be permanently awarded at the end of the week's play. Virginia Pep has two legs on the individual championship cup, presented by the men's district body, and the Triple A and Glen Echo Clubs have each won the August Maschmeyer team trophy twice.

Special Tourney Rules.

The following special rules have been made for the tournament:

A ball driven into the lake on No. 3 may be replayed from the tee instead of being dropped at the spot where it entered; a ball against the white wooden fence back of the fourteenth green is out of bounds. Players are requested by officials to bring their own caddies due to the shortage brought about by school attendance.

PLAYING SECRETS OF Famous Football Stars

No. 11—ANDREW GUSTAFSON

(Halfback, Pittsburg.)

By Ed Thorp.

Former Star Player, Now a Referee

GUSTAFSON was the mainstay of the University of Pittsburg's backfield last year and should be even more valuable this season. Gustafson is not particularly flashy, but is a consistent ground gainer and the type of player that coaches welcome on their teams.

The Pittsburg star weighs 195 pounds, is six feet, and has massive shoulders. His chief forte is line smashing. Picking up speed remarkably fast for a man his size, Gustafson runs from any kind of a formation. He hits the line low and with the force of a battering ram. Gustafson is good for from three to five yards any time he gets his head and shoulders through the line because of his great strength and ability to keep his feet.

The most difficult task a coach has is to develop high-class interferers, players who are willing to sacrifice personal glory to clear the path for the ball carrier.

In the old days of Columbia's greatest team on the gridiron, Harold Weeks was a sensational ground gainer mainly because Bill Morley had few equals as an interferer and "took out" opponents so effectively that Weeks was enabled to get away on his brilliant open field runs. Gustafson reminds me of Morley because of his skill in interfering for the runner.

On the defense Gustafson is a stone wall. He is seldom foxed out of position. After analyzing the play the Pittsburg star stops the runner dead with a low hard tackle. Gustafson, with Johnson, the center, formed an exceptional defensive pair last year.

Peckinpaugh Predicts Senator Victory in World's Series

Ability of Team to Rise to Great Heights in Pinches Is Basis for Veteran Shortstop's View — Great Third Sackers Meet in Games.

By Roger Peckinpaugh,

Assistant Manager and Shortstop of World's Champions and Voted Most Valuable Player in American League.

(Copyright, 1925.)

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 3.—In spite of all I have been reading lately of the ability of the Pittsburg team, I am convinced that they have nothing at all on Washington and that the end of the coming series will give us the right to tack another world's title pennant to our big flagpole.

Peck.

Having been a shortstop all my baseball life, I naturally am interested in comparing the infields of the two teams and perhaps am basing too much of my predictions on the work of the infields.

Generally speaking, I cannot see where, either man for man, or as a whole, we are not mechanically as strong as are the men of McKechnie. The fact that the Senators both last year and this have shown ability to rise to great heights in the pinches, to my mind, gives Washington the edge.

Watch Judge in Series.

Take first base, for instance. The Pirates will have to depend upon the veteran McInnis and the rather inexperienced Grantham. Stanley Harris has been alternating with Joe Judge and Joe Harris, the last named working when southpaws are pitching against us. With the Pirates boasting of but one first-class portsider—Yde—it looks as though Judge will get the call in most of the games. And, believe me, this boy will bear watching.

I am a great hunch player and have a feeling that Joe will prove one of the heroes of the series. Following his injury, he was in slump, but he is out of it now and looks like a million dollars at the bat. When it comes to fielding, I look for him to cover the opposing first sackers like a tent.

McInnis cannot cover the ground he formerly did, while Grantham, although a good man, has not had the needed experience to compete with a veteran of Joe's caliber. "Moon" Harris, while not as flashy as his side-kick, is a close second to Judge, and we are not worrying about him.

Will Miss Rawlings.

To my mind, Johnny Rawlings is going to be badly missed. His injury has given Moore a chance at the keystone sack and reports are to the effect that he is going in great style. But I'm satisfied that Moore's best will not be good enough to give him a chance to compare with "Bucky" Harris, who, in spite of the fact that he is handicapped with managerial worries, is a truly great second baseman. Above all, he is a "money" player and as cool as a cucumber in a pinch.

I have only seen Wright in action once, but from all accounts he must be one of the best young players developed in recent years and, a shortstop much better than the average.

I do not feel that it would be appropriate to do much talking about myself, but I will say this. The ankle which has kept me out of the game recently is well and, if I am fortunate enough to go through the series without further injury, I will do my best and try to force the youngster as much as possible for laurels. I am convinced that I will have a tough job on my hands.

Bluege vs Traynor.

Columns have been written about Traynor, Pirate third baseman, but I cannot conceive of him being any better than Bluege, who holds down a similar position for us. Osie is one of the few Harrismen who has been in the game every day and, as a result, he was pretty well frazzled toward the end of the season.

But he has not had anything to do but rest and take easy workouts for the past five days and I look for him to be at the very top of his form. In my opinion, he stands head and shoulders above any player in his position in our own league and "Pie" good as he is, will have to play super ball to give his team third-base advantage. One thing is certain, fans in the coming series will see the hot-corner guarded by two masters.

You will no doubt have noticed that my arguments have been based on fielding alone. In a short series, I figure this is just as important as hitting. With respect to batting, while conceding that the cold figures show that he Pittsburg infielders have a slight advantage, at the same time I do not figure that there will be any appreciable difference in a series of but a few games.

In my next article, I will discuss the respective outfielders and batteries and give my opinion on how the contending teams compare generally.

Kaiser-Wallace Bout to Feature Odeon Fight Card

"Peewee" in Good Shape for Reappearance Before St. Louis Fans.

The Business Men's A. C., sponsors of amateur boxing tournaments at the Armory and Battery arenas for the past three years, will take a fling at the professional mitt game tomorrow night with a program of six bouts to be staged at the Odeon Theater, Grand and Finney avenue. Seating accommodations for 2500 fans have been provided by placing ringside seats upon the stage. The ring has been built upon a trestlework foundation, occupying most of the space known as the orchestra pit.

Patsy Wallace, a battle-scarred veteran of the Queensberry game, meets Johnny "Peewee" Kaiser, local bantam, in the feature 10-round contest. Wallace reported yesterday and worked out with Mike Sansone in a sparring bout at the Red Ball Mymnasium. He appears to be in good physical shape for the match. The Philadelphit midget was once regarded as a strong contender for flyweight title honors. He has boxed Jimmy Wilde, Johnny Buff, the late Pancho Villa, Pete Herman and Joe Lynch in six-round bouts at the Quaker City.

Operation Helps Kaiser.

Kaiser also appears to be fit and ready for the fray, after two weeks of diligent preparatory work at the Business Men's Gym. Since his graduation from the amateur game in which he won district title laurels for three successive years, the South Side ringster has met with varying fortune in the professional ranks. He has, however, shown favorable symptoms of improved punching prowess since he underwent a nasal operation last spring, being credited with four kayo victories in five recent engagements of minor importance.

Johnny Lucas and Leo Julius, local lightweight scrappers, are slated to meet in a six-round setto, billed as the semiwindup of tomorrow night's program. This will be their second engagement. Julius earned a popular verdict by a stormy finish in an eight-round joust with Lucas at the Coliseum two years ago.

Lucas Takes Alfano's Place.

In tomorrow night's match, Lucas takes the place of Ray Alfano, who was suspended for a 60-day period for failing to make weight for his bout with George Butch at the New Coliseum last Wednesday night.

Amateur stars of the local district will make their bow as professionals in four-round preliminaries of the Odeon card. Mike Sansone, the Western A. A. U. flyweight title holder; Jack Horner, South Broadway lightweight, and Joe Meek, a featherweight, comprise the graduating class. Sansone tackles Sammy Price of Newark, N. J., while Horner meets Joe Kanup of Belleville, Ill., and Meek tackles Paul Steadman of Granite City. Another prelim event will feature Tom Smith and Harry Poeling, local welterweights.

Horseshoe Meet For Three States

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 3. — Horseshoe pitchers from Illinois, Missouri and Iowa will meet here soon to decide the tristate championship at barnyard golf.

With the announcement that a $100 purse will be given to the winner, cities and villages are preparing to send their star "ringers" to Quincy to compete.

The tristate tournament will come in two weeks after the city and county tournament this week, for which special awards were donated by merchants.

Quincy, with 40,000 population, has a specially built horseshoe court, in the heart of the business district. The court is lighted by arc lights, and most of the playing is done after dark. There are bleachers for spectators and good crowds watch the games.

Quincy takes its horseshoes seriously. The Rev. I. W. Bingaman, Lutheran minister and prominent Rotarian, is president of the Barnyard Golf Club, which is sponsoring the tristate tournament, as well as the city and county tournaments. The club has on its membership roster the best-known business and profesional men in the city.

PIKEWAY BASKETBALL SQUAD WILL START PRACTICE TOMORROW

Basketball practice for Washington University will begin Monday for those players who are not out for football. Coach White will have three letter men as a nucleus for his squad. They are Capt. Cox, Seago and Winkler. There are several men from last year's freshmen squad who will make a strong bid for the other positions.

Capt. Cox made the Valley mythical all-star five. "Bus" Seago played center for the Pikers last year, while Ted Winkler held down a forward job. Carl Stanford, who did not make his "W," is expected to land a forward position this winter. Garrett Pipkin of last year's frosh will provide Seago with some strong competition for the center position.

Soccer Players Must Behave, or Submit to Fines

St. Louis League Officials Issue Instructions for Benefit of Referees.

Players who participate in the games of the St. Louis Soccer League this season will have to be on their good behavior or suffer the consequences, according to an announcement by President Stanton Barker of the St. Louis Soccer and Exhibition Co.

At a meeting to be held at the Coronado Hotel tomorrow night, Barker will instruct the three referees—Ribby Murphy, Clancy Carey and John Cradock, to the effect:

Abusive or scurrulous language or smoking on the field while in uniform will draw a penalty.

The fines will be sustained by the franchise holders.

A player fined three times will be liable to suspension for the remainder of the campaign, it was stated.

Officials of the organization have announced that members of the clergy and students for the ministry or priesthood would be furnished season tickets upon application to H. P. McCarthy, secretary, 4642 Florissant avenue.

Ladies' Day Planned.

One Sunday in each month has been set aside as "ladies' day," while the idea of having a "holers' day each month will be voted upon at tomorrow night's meeting.

Managers of the four teams have announced that practice games will be played at Fairground this morning. It is the intention to play 35-minute halves, with new players participating in the closing period. Workouts also will be held Tuesday and Friday night in preparation for the opening of the campaign next Sunday.

"Bull" Durham doesn't need a week

I try to get around and see everything that is happening in New York City. I just returned from a parade, the "Safety Week" Parade. This is "Safety", or "don't Get Hurt Week" in New York. The taxi-cab drivers can hardly wait until next Monday to run over you. It speaks very highly for the generosity of the East to try and save your life one week of the year, so if you are coming to New York I would advise you to come on this particular week. Then on your Tombstone back in Claremore, Oklahoma can be written, "He Was Killed During Safety Week In New York". We have had every kind of "Week" in the World, even "Smile Week", in which every one went around with a sickly grin on their face like a Cheshire Cat. We had an "Apple Week", but we couldn't afford the apples. Why don't we have a "Wives Don't Shoot Your Husband Week". That would guarantee us males at least one week of immunity. Or "A Don't Get a Divorce Week," it only means one more week of putting up with him. All these weeks of Fads are great, but the thing that stands up is the thing that don't require a week. A thing that operates fifty-two weeks without a slogan, and that is "BULL" DURHAM. I have never tried it, but evidently someone has for I see where the owner just bought a new yacht the other day.

Britain's Best Chance of Recovery Lies in Return to Land, Lloyd George Says

Declares Events Will Drive England to What Almost All European Countries Have Already Accomplished, Adaptation of Waste Soil.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
Wartime Premier of Great Britain.

LONDON, Oct. 3. (By Cable.)

WHY is the land question once more coming to the front in Britain and why will it, in the coming years, become increasingly prominent, whatever political interests may do to keep it down? It is because events will drive Britain to what almost all European countries have already accomplished—the adaptation of their land system to the national exigencies of the day, after the great deluge.

Soon after the Armistice the resurrected nations of Central Europe, impoverished and devastated by war, of one accord resorted to the rich treasure locked up in the moth-eaten chest of feudalism. They broke the rusty padlocks and distributed the hoarded riches. The great estates had withheld from the people for centuries much of the wealth which was there for the digging. These estates have now been largely divided amongst the peasantry.

Vast areas of wasted land have thus been brought into cultivation in Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and the Baltic states. Before the war these lands, now cultivated or under cultivation, were dedicated to the pleasure of a caste. England has alone stood by the lordly past with its wasteful spaciousness.

Change for the Worse.

In all its essentials, the feudal system still fashions the life of rural England. There you will find the lord of the manor, with rentaing feudatories in the form of tenant farmers who hold their lands from him on a tenure more precarious, and, therefore, more dependent, than that which prevailed in the Middle Ages. Beyond that, you have hundreds of thousands of hereditary toilers—agricultural laborers—with no legal interest or prospect of acquiring an interest in the soil of their native land.

Here, also, the change from olden times is for the worse. A year's notice from a landlord can deprive a tenant of the homestead which his ancestors may have held and cultivated for centuries, and a week's notice can turn the landless worker from his cottage. No reason need be assigned for the severance. The decision of the feudal chieftains is unchallengeable. The power is not often exercised, but the fact that it is there and can be put into operation and occasionally is enforced gives the lord of the land, within his seignory, a dominion which the King does not possess.

My first recollection of political life is associated with the wholesale eviction of hundreds of tenant farmers in Wales from the lands held by their families for centuries, for no better reason than that they had voted Liberal at a recent election. I also call to mind the case of a widow, who farmed with the aid of an only son. The latter was suspected by the landlord's gamekeeper of having killed a hare—on his mother's land—with a pitchfork. This was a heinous feudal crime. She was given the alternative either of parting with her son or with her farm. The son left for the towns and never returned.

Feudalism Has Broken Down.

The King of England has no such power over his subjects—not even in darkest Africa. This arbitrary power is the law of the land today in Britain, though public opinion exercises a more restraining influence over these feudal excesses than it imposed a generation ago. The laborers flee from this gloomy tyranny to the squalid freedom of the towns, and, as a result, rural Britain has become gradually depopulated. It is visibly decaying.

But it is characteristic of England that the movement towards reform of the land system does not proceed from any revolt against the oppressive anachronism, but from a hard, practical necessity. Feudalism has broken down. It is no longer supplying the national needs in food and Britain has, in consequence, to buy abroad £400,000,000 (approximately $2,000,000,000) worth of food and timber, most of which ought to be raised on her own soil. Before the war, this startling fact did not worry her in the least. British trade was coining money out of its foreign exports, its finance, its shipping, its coal. We supplied the world with goods, with fuel, with carriage, with money—all at a good price. Why, then, should we not buy cheaply at the counters where we sold dearly? It was a fair and fruitful exchange. Our medieval land system was very picturesque. Why modernize this remnant of medievalism which distinguished England from the parvenu nations of the world?

"If it showed signs of crumbling and decay, were those symptoms, not after all, the surest proofs of the antiquity of the structure?

"Besides, every successful merchant and manufacturer looked forward to the day when he realized prosperity would enable him to acquire one of these seignories and establish himself and his descendants in the halls of the Mighty—peradventure with a suitable title.

Feudalism Not Business.

"Then came the deluge and Britain is beginning to ask herself whether she can much longer afford to maintain this hoary ruin from a remote but dubious past. Feudalism is not a business proposition, whatever may be its other sport—no other system could have preserved the glories of the chase in so small and densely populated a country. No doubt it possesses other merits, political and especially social, but it is fatal to any conception of agriculture as a business and Britain in her distress, is wondering whether she will not be compelled to part with this costly heirloom.

"We are now entering upon the sixth winter of unexampled depression and instead of things improving as we have constantly and confidently expected with the indomitable optimism of a successful as well as a courageous people and as we had been assured by high financial and commerce authorities to expect, matters have been getting worse. In my last article, I pointed out the precarious state of our financial and trade position and how, from having been a creditor nation, we have become a debtor nation for the first time in our history. Our national income, taking it at its value, is substantially less than it was before the war, although our population has increased by a million. We were, and still are the greatest international carrier in world and a large proportion of our income depended upon that business, but our proportion of that business has fallen from half the world's carrying trade, before the war, to less than one-third today.

Other Nations Turn to Land.

Since this time three years ago, we have had five governments, each of which has no doubt done its best. They have succeeded in averting acute distress. But the real problem has not yet been tackled. No doubt it is because the business men, who advise Governments, were hoping the worst was over and persisted in seeing symptoms of steady improvement and in predicting we

Confidential War-Time Letters of Ambassador Page to Woodrow Wilson

"World Going Lying Mad and Credulously Stupid," He Told the President — Doubted in 1914 if People of Empire Could Stand the Strain as Depression and Anxiety Increased.

Edited by
BURTON J. HENDRICK

Today's first instalment tells the story, hitherto unknown except to a few diplomats, of an American officer's secret visit to the British front in 1914. For five months he was practically a British officer. He was admitted to all the secrets of the Allied armies, obtaining first hand information as to facts about which the world was wondering, at a time when the United States Government still adhered to the policy of neutrality. Today's chapter also gives a vivid picture of the situation in London during those gruesome early months of the war.

"All the world has taken to lying," wrote Page, in describing to his chief the fears and troubles of the Embassy.

As in the case of the previous letters these are edited by Burton J. Hendrick, whose comments include disclosures of facts never before published. In the preparation of the letters Mr. Hendrick has consulted various leaders, political and diplomatic, with whom Ambassador Page came into contact. They have permitted him to record happenings previously hidden in secret archives.

TO THE PRESIDENT
6 Grosvenor Square, W. (London)
Nov. 4, 1914.

Dear Mr. President:

MY daughter got a scolding when she came back and told me that she had left Washington before your kind invitation to call reached her. She told me she wrote her explanation and excuses. She was rushing to get back before all the ship routes became mine-strewn; and this is now fast coming to pass.

Most important of all—House informs me that you are in good physical trim. That's cheerful as well as most important. I am frequently asked about your health—not because the questioner supposes you are ill, but because he means that the world can't afford now to have any uncertainty on that score.

The darkest days, I fear, are not yet come here. When more British ships are blown up and more and more of the sea is German mined and when more and more neutral ships are sunk (pray Heaven, not an American one!) and when it is discovered how many Englishmen are among the innumerable dead in France, shudder of horror will sieze all England. It is most solemn now; the men who think look back over their history and see no time so murderous and perhaps none so dangerous and uncertain. All that holds the world together is the friendship and kinship of our country and this. I never forget for one moment this fact that just now is the most important fact in the world; and I do thank God it is you that are where you are, so that this will not be forgotten on our side in any small controversy that may come. That Lincoln-like man, Sir Edward Grey, never forgets it. He is, so far, the strong, pathetic figure of the time.

"Steady, steady," I say to myself every day, "and look a long way ahead. It's the big, lasting, profound things that count now, not the little tasks of the passing day or of the changing humor;" and I try to keep the rudder true.

Always heartily yours,
WALTER H. PAGE.

Walking Tight Rope of Neutrality.

TO THE PRESIDENT.
American Embassy, London,
Nov. 30, 1914.

Dear Mr. President:

OF course nobody has any clear idea about the duration of the war, and the general military expectation that it would last certainly one year, probably two years, and possible three, has not been changed. But the feeling often comes over me that no people can stand such a tension and the depression and the anxiety will become simply unbearable. I surely am as far out of it as any man in England. My work is work of singular detachment. We walk the tight rope of neutrality. The women have even ceased to insist on Mrs. Page's serving on this and that committee that has to do with only one side of the conflict. The thrifty American merchants of contraband wares have ceased to come to me to help them get to the War Office to make big contracts. We are as aloof from it as it is possible to be.

WALTER HINES PAGE,

Yet we are not aloof at all. It isn't work that tires It's the war. Everybody feels it. I meet nobody who feels differently. Well, if this is so in London, how must it be on the Continent? I think the world was never before put to such a strain. May it not break some day all on a sudden?

The French would probably have collapsed as they did in 1870 but for the Belgian check of the Germans and the English help. There is an unexpressed feeling that the Russians may suddenly quit some day as they did in the Crimean War. They believe here that the Austrians have almost come to the point of despair already—I do not know. The Germans and the English don't have panics. But the people of any nation must reach a point sometime when they feel as I often feel: What's the use? You can do nothing useful, constructive, you can get no cheerful experience in life, you live in a mood of mourning and of anxiety—is life worth while?

A Christmas Without Meaning.

In every time of trouble before now (I haven't had many) I have been able to forget myself in some good book. I thought I should always have this resource. But it's gone now. The war gets between my eyes and the printed page. It gets between your golf and the ball. Somebody said something here the other night about Christmas. It startled me. I found myself thinking it all out as a new proposition — Christmas — December — presents—the children at home—Santa Claus—the year 1914—when did I hear of these things before? What does one do at Christmas?—I feel as if I'd never care to come to Europe again. It will always link itself in my mind with this supreme crime. Most of its best young men will be dead, the older ones forever under the shadow of this experience, the Continent bankrupt and ruined, suggesting only human misery—haggard old women, beggars, and starved children, and maimed men, and endless talk all their lives of this war. The sunshine on the sand in North Carolina, a country-man spitting at a pebble on his way to church and calling his mangy dog—that seems a healthful scene to me compared with anything here.

And all the world has taken to lying. You can't believe anything that you hear or read. Three times within a week somebody in the United States lied to the State Department.

Lies Bred of Hysteria.

Here come telegrams: An American citizen imprisoned for criticizing the English: get him out. We call the man up on the telephone (in his office) and ask him if he's in prison or if he has criticized the English. "News to me," he says and he goes on with his work. A day or two later—an American citizen found guilty of spying, to be shot tomorrow; hustle! All the military camps in the kingdom, all the military courts, all the police are set to work frantically to find the man who's to be shot tomorrow. Telegraph and telephone are worked hot. Tomorrow comes. Nobody's heard of such a man. We are talking about what we are to do, when the man walks in and says he guesses he'd better get a passport. He is asked about being a spy and condemned to be shot; and he laughs and remarks: "I guess my folks at home were getting uneasy about me."

Reported England Suspicious of German Influence and Activity in This Country—Talk of Peace Would Be Regarded as Unfriendly Suggestion if Inspired by Berlin.

Then comes a telegram about the detention of a ship with a full cargo of cotton. Demand its release! Well, it has so many tons of copper in the bottom. On this side of the world it's the same way. The Germans have taken Calais—everybody believes it for a day. Tomorrow night the Zeppelins will come—many people believe it. The Germans have seized American food in Belgium. I get a messenger through to Whitlock. On the contrary, he writes back, they are giving us every aid in distributing it. The German Government asks for a report on the scandalous condition of the detention camp at Newcastle. There has never been a detention camp at Newcastle.

Periodically I remind the British Government that we can't send private inquires in our Government pouch to Berlin; will they please inform the public that inquires must be made at the War Office? Certainly. The very next day a man on the staff of the War Office comes in and says that since our embassy is the only channel of communication will we please make inquiry about his brother? So, in addition to being infinitely sad, the whole world is going lying mad and credulously stupid. Now, people can't recover from this abnormal state overnight. These little incidents hint big of the demoralization of the mind and of the character of men

"Thank God for America."

The Germans are indescribably angry with the British. They question and criticize everything. At bottom they hate and distrust us also. The English are slow beyond any decent patience. The Austrians mechanically follow the Germans in their restrictions. The Turks ask twice a day about their consuls. Untruthful merchants in the United States misinform our own Government. The British Admiralty and War Office cause interminable delay. I never know what a day will bring. Depression hangs over everybody like a London fog. But all these are incidental—are as nothing, if we keep fair and considerate dealing, these two Governments with one another; for upon this hangs the destiny of the world. The Prime Minister and Sir Edward Grey never forget this and I use their appreciation of our friendship as far as it is manly to use it. (And their attitude will unable us to pull through.

As I say, all else is of minor consequence. Ours, of course, is the future of the world. When the world recovers its senses, its first remark will be, "Thank God for the United States." And so say I now.

Heartily yours,
WALTER H. PAGE.

P. S.—Just after I had finished this letter, Lord Haldane dropped in and talked an hour or more. In addition to being "the Keeper of the King's conscience" he is yet Secretary of War, being a sort of civilian aid to Lord Kitchener. He knows German literature and the Germans as well as any man in England. A few days ago he sent me a letter that Prince von Bulow had written to me, asking my good offices on behalf of his interned brother.

"Your old friend, the old German Chancellor, knows better than to expect me to be able to do what he asks—doesn't he?"

"Well, that doesn't keep any German from trying."

False Hope in Russians.

Lord Haldane doesn't know how to guess about the duration of the war any better than I. Yet he knows all that the British Government knows. But he has more confidence in the Russians than most men I meet have. He told me of a Russian whom he met here a little while ago. Somebody asked him if he wouldn't soon be called to the front.

"Not immediately," he said, "I belong to the thirteenth million and only five millions have yet been called out."

Lord Haldane thinks they'll stick, for they regard it as a holy war. He's chiefly afraid that a peace may be patched up before another war is made possible. That's what, I find, most Englishmen fear—that Germany will be left with a chance to do all this over again some years hence. If that be so, life will not be worth living on this side of the

Authoritative Figures on The Automobile Jam in Downtown St. Louis Streets

Eight Thousand Machines Parked Daily in Commercial District—Thirteen Thousand in One Hour Start Homeward During Rush Hour—125,000 Autos Move In and Out of Business Area Every Day.

"HOW MANY," muses the motorist as he stops and starts and shifts his tedious way through traffic on Locust street at 5 p. m., "just how many automobiles are there in this jammed-up downtown?"

The answer is that every day between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m., 125,000 automobiles move in and out of the business district of St. Louis.

And at the evening peak hour, 13,121 automobiles move out of the downtown toward the residence section within 60 minutes.

"How many," muses the street car rider as he carefully removes his toe from beneath some No. 10, "just how many people are there in this homebound mob?"

The answer is that every day more than 500,000 people move into or out of the downtown each day—not 500,000 different persons, for many are the same individuals coming and going repeatedly.

And street cars in the evening peak, are carrying 62,332 persons out of the business district in one hour—packing them in for an average of 72 persons per car.

An Official Survey.

The figures, forming perhaps the first accurate traffic study that has been made in St. Louis, are from a survey covering August and September for the special committee of the Board of Aldermen which is endeavoring to draft a plan of rapid transit for the city. The progress report was given out yesterday by Alderman Samuel L. Wimer, chairman of the committee. The study was made under the direction of C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the city.

Among other things the survey discloses that there is space in garages and lots downtown for approximately twice as many automobiles as now utilize them and that, if the garage and lot facilities were used to capacity, there would be need for little if any all-day parking in the congested district. On one day more than 8000 automobiles were counted at downtown curbs.

And if the streets were cleared of all-day parkers, street cars would move more speedily and that would help the transportation facilities of from 60 to 75 per cent of the population.

"So," the report concludes, "this survey discloses that it does not seem to be a proper use of the streets to permit automobiles which carry only a small percentage of the public, to occupy the streets so as to seriously interfere with 60 to 75 per cent of the people who must be carried by street cars."

Many Autos, Few in Them.

The report discloses also just how small a proportion of the public is carried by the privately-owned passenger automobile. During the evening rush hour, the count for all vehicles was as follows:

Street cars, which are only 8.4 per cent of the vehicles moving out of the downtown toward the residence sections, carry 72.8 per cent of the people, or 71.8 persons to each car.

Automobiles, which are 89.3 per cent of the vehicles in the jam, carry only 20 per cent of the people, or 1.9 persons per car. In this connection it should be noted that the average number of passengers per automobile for the day is only 1.6 per cent.

Busses, which are 1.2 per cent of the vehicles moving in traffic, carry 6.5 per cent of the people or about 45 persons per bus.

Credibility of the figures in the report is given by figures disclosed in a recent survey for the city of Washington. It was developed there that automobiles, on the average, carried only 1.6 persons per car, the same figures as disclosed for St. Louis.

A complicating factor of the traffic situation also lies in the fact that nearly half of the passenger automobiles enter and leave the congested district to the west, and that there are 50 per cent more cars moving to and from the south than from the north.

17,000 Cars in Hour.

The report shows that in one rush hour in the evening there are 4207 passenger automobiles leaving the downtown westward and 3568 going southward. There are a large number entering the downtown at the same hour, also. The total of those entering and leaving approaches 17,000 cars in one hour. This is exclusive of busses, commercial cars and jitneys.

Locust street and Twelfth boulevard to the south are established as the city's busiest highways, with Washington avenue and Chestnut street running closely behind.

The district selected for purposes of the count was that bounded by Poplar street on the south, Franklin avenue on the north and Eighteenth street on the west. The reason was that it was found that in the morning street cars began to unload at these points and in the evening had accumulated their full loads at the streets named.

The count showed the following figures for the normal business day between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m.:

9,645 street cars, 9.6 per cent of all vehicles entering and leaving the business district carried in and out 308,779 passengers, 62.3 per cent of all riders, an average of 32.1 passengers per vehicle.

87,700 automobiles, 87.3 per cent of all vehicles entering and leaving the business district carried in and out 142,759 people including the 87,700 drivers, 29.8 per cent of all people, an average of 1.6 persons per automobile.

Motor Busses Better.

1976 motorbusses, 2.0 per cent of all vehicles entering and leaving the business district carried in and out 36,233 passengers, 7.4 per cent of all riders, an average of 18.3 passengers per vehicle.

1,208 service cars (25c jitneys), 1.2 per cent of all vehicles entering and leaving the business district, carried in and out 3913 people including the 1208 drivers, 0.8 per cent of all riders, an average of 3.2 persons per car. The service cars are a negligible factor.

Then the count was divided between the non-rush hours between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., and the morning and evening rush, and from the figures, the committee deduces that "other agencies are taking away from the electric cars a greater percentage of passengers during the non-rush hours than during the rush hours. They also show that motor busses do not carry as large a percentage of the rush hour traffic as they do during the remainder of the day." Or, in other words, when people are in a hurry to get home in the evening jam, they take the first street car. During the day, when passengers are not in such a hurry, they wait for busses.

The report continues: "In connection with the count of moving automobiles, a check was also made of the down town parking situation. The cars standing at the curbs in the streets outside the limited parking district were counted, and an approximation made of the number that use the streets for all day parking.

"A count also was made of the parked automobiles within the dis-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

For Straight Highways.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

AS a citizen and taxpayer of Callaway County, Missouri, it seems to me the Fulton obstructionists, highly-paid lawyers from St. Louis and their country lawyers, too, paid the lawmakers of the State a poor compliment in their speeches, trying to shoot holes in the road law.

If it were left to the people's votes, it would be four to one in favor of the commissioners. It is absurd to think they are not following the law—if a railroad were built on a straight line from St. Louis to Kansas City and another built to switch back from one town to another across the State from St. Louis to Kansas City, it would not take a lawyer or a Judge to tell which would haul the freight and passengers. It would be five to one in favor of the straight road, the other would go into the hands of the receiver. So let's have a straight concrete road and connect nearby towns with it. The Highway Commissioners are high-class men and are doing a fine job. If the obstructionists will stop annoying them, they will get us out of the mud and give us a fine system of roads and everybody will be highly pleased.

Here is hoping the Supreme Court will decide on facts, common sense and law and not on "intent" and "legislative intent."

Anyway, if it were left to the people of Missouri, the commissioners would receive a confident vote of at least five to one in their favor.

No Trouble in Arkansas.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WISH to express my hearty appreciation of your editorial of Sept. 26 headed "Bootlegging Disease Treatments." If all those occupying like positions would be as fair and clear in their articles the public would soon come into their rights throughout the entire United States.

Here in Arkansas we have had a chiropractic examining board and law since 1911 and there has been no trouble nor friction since. P. V. BLOND.

Right and Wrong.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE Rev. Mr. John McCarthy, a Methodist divine, preached "a thing is not wrong merely because a preacher calls it wrong." He then proceeds to state what is "wrong" and adds "nothing else is wrong, no matter what preachers say." Will someone inform the uninitiated reader how to decide when to reject the advice of preachers who are not "right"? The same divine defines "nice people" as being "those who recognize the situation confronting the white man's civilization and accept the duty imposed by it." "The other sort are called nice but it does not mean anything." This sermon only adds to our confusion in trying to "do right" and associate only with "nice people." We are therefore forced to use our own minds and strive to learn what part "experience" has taught mankind in perfecting civilization since the era of the cave man and the primeval wizards.

Forestalling War.

Jefferson's Tolerance.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IF it be expedient to argue with a class so blind to tolerance as some of the prohibitors of all things, we might cite them to Thomas Jefferson, the sage and son of Virginia. A man that stood four square for all kinds of social equality and liberty; who gave Virginia her free schools and founded the University of Virginia and inscribed over its portals, "And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

Branded by his enemies as an infidel, yet he was willing to tolerate all and oppress none. It was Thomas Jefferson that made his own State free from all religious encroachments and gave it the free nonsectarian schools. It was Thomas Jefferson that said in his first inaugural address:

"And let us reflect that having banished from our land that religious intolerance under which mankind so long bled and suffered, we have yet gained little, if we countenance a political intolerance, as despotic, as wicked and capable of as bloody persecution.

Will Virginia, the mother of Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and Washington forsake her distinguished sons and turn back to the hateful ways of intolerance and bigotry? Let us hope and pray not. Need we go further in Jeffersonian principles to show how far the other way some zealous reformers have proceeded?

GOOSE QUILL.

BUILD THE ROADS.

Only one objection can be raised to the appointment of Hugh Stephens of Jefferson City to the vacancy on the State Highway Commission occasioned by the resignation of Murray Carleton. Because of this city's immense contribution to the road fund we believe a St. Louis man ought to have had the place. With that exception the Post-Dispatch is glad unreservedly to indorse Gov. Baker's choice.

Moreover, the objection in this instance may be qualified. Though literally a resident of Jefferson City Mr. Stephens, by reason of his business training and family tradition, may be called a citizen of Missouri in the sense of having the State outlook. He has been engaged all his active life in State business. In his earlier years he was associated with his father, E. W. Stephens, in a printing company at Columbia which did much of the State's printing. That period, too, was rich in contacts with all Missouri by virtue of university environment. His subsequent career at Jefferson City as head of his own big printing house continued and intensified this relationship with public men and public affairs. And, as remarked in the Post-Dispatch story of his appointment the other day, "during all the years he had this contract (the State printing contract) there was no taint of fraud or graft connected with it." The simple truth is that the very atmosphere of the Stephens plant at Jefferson City was that of clean, honorable and capable enterprise.

Such is the equipment of experience and character that Mr. Stephens brings to the Highway Commission. It is the measure of equipment needed in the office. The magnitude and importance of the Highway Commission's work do not have to be rehearsed. They are well understood. We think it is also well understood and appreciated that the Highway Commission has done, and is doing, its work admirably. There has been criticism, of course, and some dissatisfaction. That was inevitable. Doubtless the commission has made mistakes—mistakes of policy, of judgment, of construction. All that was inevitable, too. But the project has been managed with vigor, difficult conditions have been met with courage and candor, and—for final proof—the roads have been built, they are being built, the highway system is gradually taking tangible form and is today so well along that its completion is in sight.

The driving force of the commission has been its chairman, Theodore Gary. It is only fair to say, we believe, that Mr. Gary has proved as able an executive in this public office as the State had a right to expect of a man who had been so distinctively successful in private life.

We know nothing about the personal relationship between Gov. Baker and Chairman Gary. We know nothing as to the Governor's rumored design to make the Highway Commission a "Baker board," with the implication that Gary's power is to be shorn and his chairmanship reduced to a merely nominal status. The appointment of Mr. Stephens, however, seems to us to disprove such purpose. Our judgment of Mr. Stephens is that he will work in harmony and effectively with Chairman Gary in pressing this great road project to a successful conclusion.

Certainly that is what the people of Missouri want—the completion of our State highway system. Upon that great effort in public service there must be no blight of political intrigue. Woe to the politician, big or little, that attempts it.

THE SEASON OF FAIRS.

America's fall festivals are as unchanging as the circus. The state fair is but a glorified county fair, with a longer midway and somewhat better horses on the race track. The largest pumpkins and best beef cattle have their galleries at both. All agricultural and industrial activities have their products on display, and there is the element of competition to keep interest alive. Food stands and pop stands, fakers and frivolity take their toll from the crowds that make an autumn holiday. Hamburgers and hot dogs are everywhere, and a tired but happy crowd goes home to come again another year.

Doubtless there is room for initiative, imagination and artistry to make something more of the fair than has been achieved. Such patronage might warrant better entertainment. Something more colorful, with less of the tawdry and ballyhoo tendencies might better celebrate a bounteous harvest and symbolize the greatness of agriculture. But it is quite as unlikely that such a sudden change will come. The patronage is proof that people like them as they are and the carnival spirit may find expression in ringing canes and judging livestock as well as in a harvest dance to honor Ceres.

And there is the practical side, as well as pleasure-seeking. From this competition come better grain and fruit and farm animals. The machinery exhibits demonstrate the worth of a new tractor, or the household drudgery saved by a power washing machine. There is mutual advantage in the interchange of experience and achievement. A broader acquaintance comes from this mingling with the throngs and watching agriculture on parade.

Senator Capper has decided to be one for the Coolidge third term.

THE OLD TIGER.

Some time, men being what they are and life being what it is, as Mr. Arlen puts it, Georges Clemenceau will give up the ghost. But, until that moment when the old Tiger's heart actually ceases to beat, it would be hard to imagine a livelier, more vital person.

Clemenceau, living quietly now in his little seaside cottage on the Vendee coast, has just celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday. Although he is out of French politics, of which he was the most conspicuous figure in his latter seventies, the electricity of his personality still spurs him to activity. The Tiger, we are informed, is deeply engaged in writing a philosophical work, dealing with the conception of God through the ages.

Without any knowledge of the tone of this opus, we daresay it bristles with the old man's insouciance. Clemenceau's spirit is young, untamable, and buoyant. He represents the French temperament in its perfect flowering. He walks briskly into the mists of great age, a boutonniere in his coat, a stick twirling audaciously in his hand, with the same care-free air with which he once was wont to saunter of an evening on the grand boulevards.

In Clemenceau's lexicon there's no such word as dotage. At 84 he is writing a book. At 94, tired of reflective pursuits, we can easily imagine him starting a war, unseating the existing Prime Minister or exchanging badinage with the prettiest lady in the Follies.

THE CONQUERING MOTOR.

The saturation point of the motor industry, which doleful prophets have been forecasting for several years, is an elusive sprite. It just won't stand still long enough to be caught. Anyhow, that is what the statistics testify. They inform us that for the first half of 1925 the registered motor vehicles in the United States total 17,716,709, which is an increase of almost 14 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.

Those figures, however, may not indicate an insatiable motor market. They show that the motor has been conquering comparatively virgin territory. For example, Alabama leads in the percentage of registration gain, with 53; Florida is second, with 41, and Oklahoma, with 39, is a close third. This means that prosperity has returned to the South and doubtless means that the South, like other sections of the country, with the inspiration of its own Texas as an example, is building good roads.

But when the motor's conquest of the South is completed, what then? Will the saturation point be reached, or at farthest just around the corner? That would seem to be the logic of it. But the appetite for good roads apparently grows on what it feeds. It is an invariable experience thus far that the more good roads a State constructs the greater the need and determination to build more good roads. And as good-road mileage increases the number of motor cars increases. There is obviously a definite limit to this axiom somewhere, but it cannot yet be definitely fixed. Meantime the car-per-family basis is disappearing. The so-called auxiliary car is now a somewhat commonplace companion of the family car, and this development, instead of a luxury, is justified as sound economic practice.

So the motor chugs or purrs, according to its genre, along an ever-ascending scale. Some day, of course, it will bump into the saturation point, but that day is out in the calm, complacent void.

THE OLD HOME TOWN.

Meredith Nicholson, having done well enough in the Hoosier capital, that is at least near his boyhood home, writes at length in Collier's Weekly to urge the youth of America to stick to the old home town. This probably won't halt the growth of Gotham, or greatly handicap the other crowded centers, and a great deal might be said in rebuttal. Only recently an eminent business man suggested that a young man's best move was to abandon the city of his fathers and fare forth to strange streets, where people would cease to call him that Simkins boy, and take him seriously, so there must be two sides to the question.

If Calvin Coolidge had lingered beneath the family rooftree he might have done well enough in the grocery business, but someone else would have been President, in all probability. That much for politics. In many lines of business and in learned professions, the guerdon is greater near the bright lights. No one would seriously contend that an actor should confine his itinerary to the tank town circuit, or that a journalist can hope to do as well at Sioux Falls as along Park Row. A country banker is unlikely to tower above Wall street, unless he cuts home ties and takes a chance in the financial center. That is gauging comparisons on material returns, but there are many other points to consider.

Happiness is one of them, and there again is no general rule. William Allen White always hurries back to Emporia, and has rejected princely offers that would have tied him to Manhattan. Others have gone out of the corn belt to find happiness among the teeming millions. Friends are a part of life's rewards, and there, one might say, the small city offers great advantages. Yet men have found more congenial company in the metropolis than ever they knew at the starting point.

Affluence is not for most folk anywhere. Perhaps happiness isn't either, but a measure of success is possible to many. Yet there is no general rule, and the youth of America might about as well do as they please, which happens to be a way they have.

THE MATTER WITH THE MOVIES.

What's the matter with the movies? "They're all right!" choruses the millions of "fans" who spend their money and their evenings in accepting whatever the producers offer. But are they? The London Times evidently has discovered that there's something wrong with the movies, so that ponderous paper has sent to Hollywood the well-known British poet, Robert Nichols, to investigate and report. Novel assignment for a poet!

Mr. Nichols, laying off his academic gown and his bay crown, has worked diligently in trying to answer the question, "Why don't we get better pictures?" Some of his findings are clarifying, although the light they shed is not likely to penetrate the skulls of some of the movie "magnates." Only a slump in box-office receipts can constitute the javelin to pierce those thick frontal bones. For one thing, the prosing poet has discovered a "dumbness" in the producers. But one of them told him: "We are no dumber than the public we serve; get clever and you'll lose money."

So that is that. But Mr. Nichols imagines he has made another discovery, namely, that the "hicks" are responsible for the puerilities of the pictures. He finds the hicks only in our "immense rural areas, sparsely populated, dotted here and there with small towns." Not having visited and studied our small towns and countrysides, Mr. Nichols may be half-forgiven for this misconception. How can he, a stranger, know that the hickiest hicks we have with us inhabit the big cities? There are more genuine hicks, for instance, in New York City, to the thousand population, than there are in, again for instance, Taney County, Mo. Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit, St. Louis, all are surcharged considerably with hickiness. Mr. Nichols, as he mentions incidentally, has been reading Mr. Mencken. "Tough-minded Mencken flatly names them"—that is, the rural population—"the 'yokelry,'" says this poet, now "absent on location."

It may be true that the hicks are largely responsible for the shortcomings of the movies, always bearing in mind that the primary responsibility rests with the dumbskulls who say what they shall offer to the hicks. But let us include the urban hicks with the rural hicks when we seek to lay the blame. There are more of them, and they are more hicky in many respects than are their country-cousin hicks.

NOTHING NEW.

I knew a man whose name, I guess,
I have forgot;
But anyhow he spilled this mess—
Forget it not.
He said his mother's sister's ma's
Great grandam's uncle's pa
Told how his father's great-grandad's
Grandmother's mother-in-law
Heard from her uncle's father's great-
Great-great-great-great-
Great-great-great-great-
Grandmother's mother's mate
(Who lived in ancient Troy)
Of how they played our kissing games
With saucy little Trojan dames
When he was just a boy.

He said they saw the same old moon,
That women chewed the rag at noon,
As women always may;
That mothers sang the lullaby
As sweetly in the days gone by
As mothers do today.
He said the landlords boosted rents
Until the people fled to tents,
That lawyers killed their joy;
That grafters grafted in the halls
Within that royal city's walls—
The walls of ancient Troy.

The Pueblo Bonito in New Mexico, greatest and loveliest of the old Indian apartment houses of the Southwest, was four stories high, covered three acres and contained 800 rooms. A member of the National Geographic expedition which has been excavating it for the past four years says that the community of 2500 people who lived in it must have been a democracy, because there is no apartment better than another or any indication that superior persons dwelt in the house. So there was no janitor, and the apartment fell. It will happen anywhere, any time.

One of our contemporaries says there was a "hectic hour" out in the West End the other day, when the police tried to shoot three bulls which had escaped from the corral of a local packing company. One of our readers objects to using the word "hectic" in this instance, since hectic results only from organic disease. We therefore do not have hectic days or nights, and not even the police, versatile as they are in everything but taking payroll robbers, can give us "a hectic hour." Our reader may take the head of the class.

I was asked yesterday which was the greater aid for love-making, the automobile or the porch swing. I was not a qualified witness, but if either of them can beat the old-time Columbus buggy with a good old gentle horse, and a drive out through the country lanes when the little blue johnny-jump-ups were seen in the fence corners, and out in the woods the dogwood blossoms were sprinkling the forest with their snow white, and the catbird and the jay were calling their mates, with an occasional bobwhite whistle coming from out in the cornfield—I say if the porch swing or the auto can beat the old buggy—it's some aid, all right.

Being as how we are one of the few persons living who have not written a book on "How to Write Short Stories," we wish here and now to remedy this matter and go on record. After having revised and edited our 40,000-word treatise, we are able to submit it in the following condensed form:

The less you have to say, the more likely you are to be understood. The secret of modern writing is to have nothing to say and say it interestingly.

Double space your work. This uses up more paper and so makes your story look more imposing.

Write on one side of the paper only; the other side is what the editor looks at.

Kid the editor all you want. You might as well get some satisfaction out of the matter.

Enclose with your story a stamped self-addressed envelope. It is also well to place your story in this envelope; it saves the editor's time.

Make your story as short as possible. The less time you take to bore the editor, the better he likes it.

Don't give up. Write story after story. Then, when you have a fair-sized pile of them, take them out in the alley and make a bonfire of them.

THE FARM PROBLEM.

FRANK O. LOWDEN in the World's Work for October.

SUPPOSE we had a Federal farm board. Suppose that board found that the producers of any farm commodity were sufficiently organized so as to be really representative of all the producers of that commodity. Suppose that when it ascertained this fact it should authorize such producers to form a corporation for taking care of the surplus, either storing it to meet a possible future domestic need or exporting it upon the best terms available, the expenses and losses incurred for storage or in export to be borne proportionately by all the producers of that particular commodity. Such a board could function successfully, in my opinion, only if it operated through and in hearty sympathy with co-operative commodity associations. It could expect to prevent ruinous over-production only in co-operation with such associations. It is vital to any plan, therefore, that it should be so framed as to strengthen and not to weaken the co-operative movement. For in that movement lies the best hope for the future of American agriculture. I throw this out by way of suggestion. I am aware of the practical difficulties in the way of any plan, but practical difficulties can always be overcome where there is a will and where the principle is sound. If there is a better way let us find it. But let us not confess ourselves impotent in the presence of what many Americans deem to be the greatest menace to the future of our civilization—a decaying agriculture.

RECIPROCITY IN JOURNALISM.

From the Dallas News.

THE University of Missouri announces the establishment of an arrangement whereby it exchanges professors with the National University of Mexico. Dean Walter Williams will go to Mexico to deliver lectures on journalism, while Dr. José Manuel Puig Casauranc, Secretary of Public Education of the Republic of Mexico, goes to Columbia for lectures in the School of Journalism there. It is said to be the first exchange of this sort between the United States and Mexico. If this is so, it is a good beginning, worthily begun. * * * The University of Texas has had some exchange arrangements for the benefit of students of the two countries. This has been of benefit in encouraging understanding. But the interchange of information such as would follow from setting up news contact in a broad and vital way is of even more sweeping import. Mexican newspapers stand, perhaps, at the head of Latin-American journalism. At least those of Mexico City do. Recognition of that fact could take no more graceful form than the act of the University of Missouri in according to Mexico's national university a man of the prestige and standing of Dean Williams. And Mexico, by her choice of educational envoy, has adequately shown her appreciation of that fact.

Memoirs of William Jennings Bryan

He Spikes an Old Rumor That His Name Originally Was O'Brien — Was Born a Bryan in Salem, Ill., and All Efforts to Give Him a More Irish Surname Failed—Early Recollections of Salem.

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.
Edited and Corrected by Mary Baird Bryan.

IN THE BEGINNING.

ANCESTRY counts.

We inherit more than we ourselves can add. It means much to be born of a race with centuries of civilization back of it. Blood, if it be good, inspires one to great effort. If it be bad, it paralyzes ambition and fixes the boundaries to one's possibilities.

I am speaking of the rule, not of the rare exceptions. Many have become degenerate in spite of inheriting the stimulus to better things, and a few have, to a degree, overcome handicaps of their life and early environment.

If one is tempted to boast that he is self-made, a few questions will puncture his pride. Let him analyze himself, separate all that has come to him into three factors: one representing that which has come to him by inheritance, another representing that which has entered his life through environment, and the third representing what he can fairly credit to himself—that which is not based upon either inheritance or environment. The third factor will not be large enough to flatter his vanity.

Fortunate From Birth.

The child comes into the world without its own volition, containing within himself capacities and weaknesses for which he is in no way responsible. He finds himself in an environment which he did not choose and cannot control. His first impressions come to him with breath and food, and his life is largely moulded for him before he has the intelligence to choose, or a standard by which to measure effort if he could choose.

It is a consciousness of the helplessness of the newborn babe and of his independence upon an unknown past and upon surroundings that he cannot comprehend that makes me increasingly grateful for the parentage with which the Heavenly Father blessed me and for the home in which my life began. My Gratitude for that which meant so much to me, and yet for which I can claim no credit suggested to me the title which I have chosen for these memoirs. I have been a child of fortune from my birth as I shall show in the narrative of my life.

My father was of Irish extraction. How far removed he was, I do not know. Neither do I know from what part of Ireland his ancestors came. William Bryan is the most remote ancestor of whom I have knowledge. He lived in what was then part of Culpeper (now Rappahannock) County, Va., near the town of Sperryville. He owned a tract of timber land in the Blue Ridge Mountains, which we learned of when I was a young man because of a 99-year lease which expired about that time. We know nothing of his parents, brothers or sisters. He belonged to the Baptist church in that neighborhood, which was known as the Bryan Meeting House. This William Bryan was my father's grandfather.

I digress at this point long enough to relate the experience that I have had with the name. I had scarcely entered upon the practice of law when my business brought me into acquaintance with a considerable number of people of Irish birth, and I was frequently addressed as Mr. O'Brien. I was at first in doubt whether I should correct this mistake or allow it to pass unnoticed, but decided that honesty was the best policy and said to a very typical son of the Emerald Isle:

"My name is not O'Brien, but Bryan."

"It's all the same," he replied. "When Bryan Boru became King, his descendants put on the 'O, and the Bryans are of the same stock, but just common people."

I have had frequent occasion to use this explanation when a similar question was asked. The most notable opportunity of this kind was at the dinner tendered me by the Mayor of Dublin in Ireland in 1903. One of the speakers jestingly called upon me to tell them when and why I dropped the 'O.' I replied by asking whether any of them ever knew of an O'Brien prior to the line of Bryan Boru. When no one could name an earlier O'Brien I explained to them that Bryan was the original name, and that the 'O' had been added by them, and not eliminated by my ancestors.

Father Came to Missouri.

After the campaign of 1896 I received a letter from a man in California named Bryan. He sent me an interview which he had given to the papers. It seems a story had been circulated by someone who claimed to have seen my name printed as O'Brien when I began the practice of law at Jacksonville, Ill. My correspondent had given out an interview saying that he was a relative of mine, and denying that there had been any change in my name. He explained to me that he was not a relative, but added: "It is a poor friend who cannot lie for another."

My father was the son of John Bryan and Nancy Lillard, and was born in a log house near Sperryville on Nov. 4, 1822. Soon thereafter his parents moved to a farm at Point Pleasant, W. Va., near the mouth of the Kanawha River, where Nancy Lillard Bryan died in 1834 and John Bryan in 1836. My father afterward lived with his uncle, William, at Troy, Lincoln County, Mo., and with a sister in Marion County, Ill.

My father early developed an ambition to secure an education, and having to make his way, he worked as a farm hand between terms while he went to school. Later he alternated between teaching and going to school until he was able to enter Montgomery College at Lebanon, Ill. He continued to teach part of the time and attend college part of the time, earning what he could while at college, until he graduated in the classical course in 1849 at the age of 27.

I have met several people who knew my father as a student. They unite in commending his scholarship, his deportment and his amiability, and they all agree in reporting one incident of his college course.

A new teacher took occasion to express himself very pointedly against the use of tobacco. My father at that time used tobacco in three ways. He smoked, chewed and took snuff. Father construed the teacher's remarks as applying to him personally, and asking permission to reply, made a defense of the use of tobacco. I do not know what his arguments were, but he continued the use of tobacco until a few months before my birth, when he quit it entirely, being convinced that tobacco was responsible for an attack of dyspepsia which he suffered just before my birth, and from which he was never entirely free during the remainder of his life.

Preserved Birth Place.

While he studied law, father became superintendent of schools of Lamon County, Ill., in 1852, at the age of 30. About the same time he married Elizabeth Jennings, who had been one of his pupils when he taught school at Walnut Hill.

My father was elected to the State Senate and served eight years. In 1860 he was elected Circuit Judge, his circuit including half a dozen counties in that section of the State. While Judge he was in 1873 chosen a member of the constitutional convention of Illinois, and helped write the organic law of the State. In 1872 he was a candidate for Congress, but went down to defeat by a majority of 240.

I was born on the 19th of March, 1860, at Salem, Ill. The house in which I was born, standing about half way between the public square and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad station, had been built in 1852, my father, then a law student, helping to hew the timbers.

Being doubly attached to the place because my father had helped build it, and because I was born there, I purchased the place in later years and gave it to the City of Salem, moving the house a few feet to the west in order to make room for the erection of the Bryan-Bennett Library, which now stands on the lot.

I do not know the hour of my birth, because the information never became material until after the death of my parents.

When I was first nominated for the presidency, astrologers made their appearance and offered to consult my horoscope with a view to ascertaining whether I would be elected.

I never had any faith in their calculations, but gave them such information as I could furnish.

One cast my horoscope and declared that it indicated my election. He was very much mortified at my defeat—seemingly more than I was myself—and hastened to explain to Mrs. Bryan that his failure was due wholly to the fact that he did not have the exact hour of my birth. He said he had cast my wife's horoscope and felt sure that I would yet be elected to the presidency.

My wife enjoyed the humor of it, and informed me that if I would stick to her she would land me in the White House yet.

I expressed appreciation, but admitted it was a little mortifying for a presidential candidate to have to keep his horoscope in his wife's name.

Became Oldest Son.

I did not, until after the Chicago convention of 1896, hear much about the incidents of my childhood. I know only that I was blessed with as happy an environment as a child could hope for or ask. The two older children, John and Virginia, had died before the third child was born. As she was a daughter, I became the oldest son, and had all the care that a mother could bestow upon a child, and all the interest that a father could feel.

After my first nomination I met a Salem friend who told me he had visited our home when I was just beginning to walk. It was evening and they were just getting me ready for bed. According to this friend, my father stood me up before the visitor and boastingly remarked: "He will be President some day."

As my father never divulged to me any such expectations, I will be pardoned for having considered the remark apocryphal.

About 1921 I met at Springfield, Mo., a man a little over 100 years old who said he had visited my home on a day when my parents were selecting a name for me. Whether I should be called William, for my father's older brother, or Jennings, my mother's family name, was the moot question, and this man told me it was he who suggested to my parents that the two names be combined and I be called William Jennings Bryan.

A Runaway Child.

The first thing that I can recall is seeing my younger brother, Harry crawling upon the floor. As he died when less than a year old, I could not have been more than three.

According to family tradition, I was not a perfect child by any means, unless the word perfect describes a boy with all the natural inclinations to mischief. Tradition has it that I used to disobey the injunctions of my mother and slip away from home to play with other children. Our yard was enclosed with an old-fashioned paling fence with a baseboard about a foot deep. By crawling close to the ground I could conceal myself behind this broad board and get away from home without being noticed. More than once I was brought back and chastised and tied to the bedpost as a punishment.

Three ambitions entered into my life before I was 6 years old. I fix the age at 6 because one of the first things to stay in my memory is the removal to our farm home which occurred in the summer of 1866. The incidents of my boyhood are roughly classified as having occurred while we lived in town or after we moved to the country. This is the way I know of three early ambitions.

The first was to be a Baptist preacher, due doubtless to the fact that my father was a member of that church. Of course, I was too young to have any distinct recollection of either this ambition or its abandonment, but the record as given by my parents is that my father took me to an immersion one night during a protracted meeting held in a Christian Church. I saw the converts going down into the pool of water to be baptized. I evidently watched the ceremony with great interest and was deeply impressed by it. On my return home I asked my father whether it would be necessary for me to go down into the pool of water in order to be a Baptist preacher. He answered in the affirmative, and after that they never could get me to say that I was going to be a Baptist preacher.

My second ambition was to be a farmer and raise pumpkins. This did not last long, but long enough to be a matter of remark in the family. It may have been due to the plans we were making to remove to the country. I remember that a young lady by the name of Hester, daughter of Brother Williams, the much-beloved pastor of the Christian Church, came into my life about that time and promised to wait for me. She was a very handsome girl, nearly grown, and encouraged me in my taste for agricultural pursuits. When I shortly afterward decided to be a lawyer she gave my change of plans as an excuse for refusing to look forward to a life partnership and married a farmer cousin of mine.

Final Decision on Law.

My third ambition, to be a lawyer, was probably due to the fact that my father was a lawyer, and at that time a Circuit Judge. I used to go down to the courthouse and sit upon the steps leading up to the bench and listen to the trial of cases. This ambition was more permanent than the ones which it succeeded, and was actually attained.

In 1866 we moved to the country, because father believed that the farm was a better place to raise a family. Our house was a brick one, of the type quite familiar in Virginia, with a hall running through the center. A commodious yard, about 300 feet long and 200 feet wide, contained a row of cedars on each side of the walk, and several rows of maples.

I still measure distances by my recollections of that farm. A hundred yards is still the distance between our front door and the gate. A quarter mile is the length of the avenue, and a half mile is the distance from our farm fence to the main street.

One picture which is most clearly outlined in my memory is that of the family gathered in the parlor on Sunday afternoon, singing Sunday school songs and church hymns. Mother, although not an accomplished musician, played the accompaniment on the piano, and led the singing. Father's favorite piece was "Kind Words," and we were wont to close the singing with his favorite song.

Amid Politicians and Preachers.

The spare bedroom was set apart for the special entertainment of politicians and divines. Bringing together in our home these two classes of people not only illustrated my father's views on the subject, but early taught me to regard the science of government as an entirely honorable one. My father was as much at home with ministers as with politicians or statesmen. He saw no necessary conflict, and I have never been able to see any, between the principles of our government and the principles of the Christian faith.

Our farm, which was my home for 17 years, contained 520 acres in one block, nearly all of it prairie, with a small woods pasture near and an 80-acre piece of timber about three miles away. We had a part of 14 acres adjoining the farm where my father indulged his fancy for deer, the number in the park running up at times to as high as 20.

My parents were not fanciers of pure bred stock, although I remember several excellent males that were bought from time to time—as a bull to which we gave the name White Cloud. We were very proud of him until he became vicious, when we had to dispose of him. My first experience with pigs was with a Chester White boar. I took him to the fair oe fall, and have a very distinct recollection of the amount of washing necessary to keep a white pig clean.

Hardships of Winter.

As we rented the land out and cultivated only a few acres, our place might have better been called a suburban home than a farm, but we had enough farm life to give us experience. We boys had the wood cut and the chores to do. I, being the oldest, used the laboring oar, so to speak, and learned to milk and care for the stock and do the general chores. If I were required to select the days of my boyhood which were least enjoyed the lot would fall on the winter days of this period.

My first business was to make the fire in the Franklin stove, and then go to the barn and feed the horses, cows and hogs. Then came the milking, and then breakfast. Sometimes we had a farm hand, and I played the part of assistant, but much of the time we did not have enough to justify the employment of a man in the winter time, and the burden fell on me.

More than 50 years have passed since those days, and I can see myself engaged in this drudgery, my nose running, my fingers numb, and with feelings for which the Sunday school songs I knew did not furnish fitting expression.

And yet I look back to these days as the most valuable of my life, and I would not for anything have them eliminated. They taught me industry and obedience, and they gave me an exercise which no gymnasium can supply. My physical strength has been an invaluable asset, and I feel that I am indebted to work on the farm for the strength that has enabled me to endure fatigue and withstand illness.

Our verdicts which we pronounce in youth are often revised and set aside in mature life. I am sure that the indictments which I would have framed about the time the chores were done are very unlike the judgments that I now render in retrospect.

BRITAIN'S BEST CHANCE IS IN RETURN TO LAND, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

should soon return to a prosperous normal. But the complacent are at last showing signs of alarm and are beginning to ask: "What has been done to deal with this disquieting situation?" Just as a child in distress turns to its mother, so a nation in straits turns to the land—the mother of us all.

The land saved France after the defeat of 1815. It saved her again after the debacle of 1870. It is saving her today after the devastation of 1914-18. The nations of Central Europe are turning to the same inexhaustible source of comfort and sustenance. England has go long been fed from across the seas that she can with difficulty be persuaded to return to the breast that once nourished her strength. But there lies her best chance of recovery. If some of the labor that has been tempted to flee from the land to the delusive glare of the towns could be lured back, then Britain could afford to wait in serenity until that ever-receding wave of prosperity returns and once more floats her stranded barque.

£50,000,000 for Idle.

The annual maintenance charge of the unemployed is, one way and another, well over £50,000,000 (approximately $250,000,000). The real cost to the community is much heavier, for this prolonged idleness is demoralizing, especially to the young. No one can foretell how much longer the depression will last. So there has been an equal growing in the numbers of those who have been urging that the lull in trade should be utilized to recover lost ground in British agriculture. Half that £50,000,000, sunk in the land, would produce results that would permanently enrich the country.

So the cry is swelling. Take the workless off the dole, especially the hundreds of thousands of young men who are supple and adaptable enough to learn a new occupation, and also the scores, and maybe hundreds of thousands brought from the rural areas. Turn them on to help developing our greatest and our most undeveloped national asset—the land, thereby increasing our national wealth, instead of dissipating it. When trade returns in its full flood, improvements in machinery and organization will, by then, have more than made up for the gap in labor caused by the withdrawing of the workers to the task of national production on the soil.

world. They all confess now that it hasn't been worth living these 10 years.

Question of U. S. Prestige.

TO THE PRESIDENT
6 Grosvenor Square, London, W.
December 15, 1914.

Dear Mr. President:

THIS is my wish for a happy Christmas for you—that we may get through this war with the great influence of our country not only unimpaired but strengthened.

In the small share that I have in working for that great aim, I try at every step to consider the large historic forces at play before I consider any irritating incident of the day. The incident, at its worst, will be forgotten tomorrow; the great historic forces will exist after we are dead. The great question is, How will our country stand when the Old World is reorganized after this war is ended? The present German Government or any Government like it will hate us then as now, because we stand for the very opposite of its military spirit and ambition. Other nations will respect us as we conduct ourselves during its progress. It is the larger good and the future relations that we shall have that I try to keep in view.

When I get a hint from home that I am pro-British, and am chided here both by English and Americans because (they say) I lack proper friendliness and am too pro-German, I recall a far-off memory of my life out West. There was a cowboy ball in town. As the hours tripped along, a jolly drunk came over the merry gentlemen of the party and they showed their real enjoyment of the evening by accusing one another of all the crimes of which each man had been suspected. As this hilarious fun was running strong—all jolly drunk and noisy—the able-bodied parson of the town stepped in. Two friendly fellows seized him, one by each arm, and one said:

"Say, parson, what's you accused of—too much hell fire?"

"No," said the other fellow, "too much harp and holy ghost."

I don't remember what the parson said; but I do know that neither his cosmogony nor his daily walk and conversation suffered radical change from this inquisition; for he had a way of looking ahead and of seeing things in proper proportion. I suspect he regarded each accusation as offsetting the other.

Warns Against Peace Move.

To drop to a serious depth (that's a sudden way we have in this time of unnatural strain)—I have heard from high sources that any talk of peace which is suspected of being inspired in Berlin would be received as an unfriendly suggestion. There is not the slightest feeling of vengeance here—only a feeling of sorrow; but the English are determined not to have this war recur. The German armed threat must disappear, and the sooner it disappears and with the least harm to the Germans, the better. There is not the slightest hatred of Germans. The moment Germany will or can give up what we call militarism forever, peace will come instantly—with no revenge, no hatred, but of course, with the reinstatement of Belgium. But no voice will be heard except on these conditions—no talk of merely stopping the war to let it recur 10 or 20 or 40 years hence, to gratify a vast military machine, which must fight somebody at some time to justify its existence.

The English are becoming very suspicious of the German influence and activity in the United States.

But I set out only to wish you a happy Christmas, while I congratulate our country on your wise leadership and your ever-strengthening grasp on the confidence and affection of our people and of the world. And I send this to be posted under the serene countenance of George Washington (and not King George) by Mrs. Page, who hears (and answers) the call of our grandchildren at Christmas. I hope that she may have the pleasure to see you before her return.

Always heartily yours,
WALTER H. PAGE.

Back of the Scenes.

Editor's Note: Col. George O. Squier, military attache, was transferred to the London Embassy in 1912. Col. Squier was a man of great scientific attainments. In addition to his military education, received at West Point, he held the doctorate of Johns Hopkins University, where he had been a pupil in physics of Rowland. Col. Squier had spent the larger part of his military career in scientific investigation. His inventions in cable transmission and his wireless had already enrolled him as one of the greatest workers in this field. Under new conditions of warfare, therefore, Col. Squier seemed to be the man for this London post.

When Page reached London he found Col. Squier well established as military attache. Page was not at first familiar with his reputation; the military attache was a modest and undemonstrative man; Page became interested, however, when he discovered that many of the leading scientists in London were making frequent visits to the little office above his own where Col. Squier had his headquarters. This two years preceding the war gave the military attache the opportunity not only of meeting scholars but of forming the closest association with the leaders of the British army. When hostilities broke out there were probably few military attaches in London, if indeed any, who had so completely won the intimacy of the men who were to direct the war. British officialdom gives its confidence carefully, after only the severest testing; the indispensable requirement is that a man shall be able to hold his tongue; Col. Squier had already proved, to the satisfaction of Lord Kitchner and his associates, that his ability to keep secrets amounted to little less than genius; from the beginning of the war, therefore, he was taken practically into camp and given opportunities and privileges for which all the other attaches were vainly clamoring.

The proposal of Gen. von Donop, that the American Government transfer hundreds of thousands of Springfield rifles from its own arsenals to the British Army, has already been described. Not only Von Donop but Lord Kitchener himself made this request to Col. Squier. It was, indeed, one of Kitchener's favorite plans; the diplomatic details involved apparently did not interest him.

"You've got those rifles; we need them and we must have them"—this was the way the matter phrased itself in Kitchener's mind. Col. Squier was amazed at the War Minister's knowledge of American armament. He knew just how many rifles the American Army had and precisely how many were in each arsenal. At that time British recruits were drilling with wooden muskets and the task of early munitioning an army was a formidable one.

Kitchener's life was burdened by the demands of foreign military observers who wished to visit the allied front in France. Their eagerness and insistence, indeed, passed all reasonable bounds. The extension of such privileges had been usual in all wars, and never since the world began had military experts had such an opportunity of witnessing their art. However, the head of the British Army was inflexible in his hostility to such excursions. The grim and implacable "organizer of victory," however, sat unimpressed in his large room on the second floor of the War Office, silent in face of these appeals.

One day Col. Squier was summoned to his headquarters. He was requested to come in full-dress uniform and to keep his visit a secret from everybody except his Ambassador. Col. Squier found Lord Kitchener sitting alone, as usual, in his large office, and in an extremely genial mood. Col. Squier's recollection of Kitchener, indeed, is not the common one. The War Lord whom he recalls is not the grim, unsmiling, monosyllabic and unbending autocrat who has passed into literature. Instead, his picture is that of an extremely genial and gracious man, with the most confidential manner and the most friendly smile, deprecating rather than insistent in his conversation—in fact, a rather slow and hesitant talker, but open, frank, and ingratiating. He was certainly in this mood on this morning. He was secretive about only one thing—his wish that not a soul in London, especially not the military attaches of other nations, should know anything about this interview.

"I suppose I shall get caught at it," he explained, "but I have decided to let you go to the front in France and stay there as long as you wish."

The great importance of having the United States in possession of the latest information in case it did go to war made Kitchener willing even to risk offending other nations.

This was the opportunity which Col. Squier and all the other military men in the world had been clamoring for since the outbreak of the war. The difficulty, as Lord Kitchener now explained, was that of preventing the attaches of other nations from learning about such a visit. Of course, Col. Squier's absence from London would be noted immediately, and the suspicions of his brother attaches at once aroused. However, he had hit upon a plan. That was to have Col. Squier detached from the American Embassy in London and become, at least temporarily, military attache to the American embassy in Paris. His absence from London would thus be satisfactorily explained; Lord Kitchener asked Col. Squier to make clear the situation to Page and obtain his consent.

From the War Office the American attache went at once to the embassy.

"I'll do it!" said Page, thumping his desk, and in a brief period the matter was arranged. Ambassador Herrick in France cordially cooperating.

In Nov. 22, 1914, Col. Squier arrived at St. Omar, Gen. French's headquarters in France and presented a brief note from Lord Kitchener. He soon learned that his trip was not the usual more or less dress-parade affair that the visits of military attaches subsequently became.

Col. Squier was taken into the British family and the British camp; he spent five weeks in every-day association; he lived at times with the men in the trenches; he messed with the officers; he was shown everything and permitted to investigate the deepest secrets of the army. Before leaving London, Lord Kitchener had provided Col. Squier with authority to draw English gold from any British paymaster in the army in France as he desired, and to draw it without limit. His daily life from hour to hour was that of the British officer. When he wished to pass from one corps to the next, formal memorandum orders were issued exactly as in the case of a British officer except that only his name and rank appeared in the order. These orders gave no hint that he belonged to the American Army. These courtesies were all in response to instructions from Kitchener's office in London.

The explanation was clear enough. Neither Lord Kitchener nor the many military leaders whom Col. Squier met in France made any concealment of their wish that the United States should enter the war. This was a point that Sir Edward Grey and the diplomats of the Foreign Office carefully evaded, but most of the important military chieftains whom Col. Squier met freely discussed the possibility; the fact that his country was "neutral" did not put the slightest restraint upon their tongues. That the real purpose of this visit was to enable the American Army to learn the details of the organization and management of modern war has always been Col. Squier's belief.

Col. Squier wrote, frequently under gunfire and sometimes in the midst of a battle, a series of reports. His position was really an unparalleled one, he was technically a "neutral," an officer of a nation whose President was preaching the doctrine of "neutrality in deed and in thought," yet for five weeks he was virtually a member of the British Army. Not unnaturally he believed that Washington would be as interested in his reports as he was himself.

TELEPHONE EXCHANGE NAMES TO BE CHANGED

Installation of Automatic System Indicated in New Directories.

Seven new telephone exchange names will be used here after the new directories are delivered between Nov. 21 and Dec. 1. Old names are being dropped on account of the requirements of the automatic telephone, which will be started in use here next spring. There are mechanical reasons for the need of varied initial and second letters in exchange names.

Olive will become Garfield. Bomont will become Jefferson except for coin telephones. Sidney will become Humbolt. Benton will become Hiland. Ferguson will become Atwater. Party telephones only of Central will become Locust. Coin telephones of Bomont will become Fremont.

In connection with plans for the automatic system, the new directory will list numbers in the following fashion: Post-Dispatch GArfield 6600. The new names were chosen for phonetic as well as mechanical reasons. Jefferson and Locust are the only ones having local significance also. There are a few new telephones in use now under the new names.

Mother's Club Meeting Friday.

The Mothers' Circle of the Ben Blewett intermediate school will meet on Friday at 2:30 p. m. in the west auditorium. One of the pupils will explain the school clubs and how they function. Two members of the faculty will speak; one on some feature of the school work and another on "Psychology; Fundamentals of Child Study." Some of the mothers have been reading books dealing with children and school problems and a short review of one of these books will be given. Mrs. Walter J. G. Neun will preside.

AUTHORITATIVE FIGURES ON AUTOMOBILE JAM IN DOWNTOWN ST. LOUIS

trict of forty-eight city blocks bounded by Third street, Franklin Ave., Market St., and Twelfth St., about 100 acres, where no parking whatever is permitted between 7 and 10 a. m., and between 4 and 6 p. m., and parking is limited to one hour between 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. This count was made between 11 a. m. and 3 p. m., so as to give time in the morning for these streets to fill up, and to count them before the automobiles had began to leave in the afternoon.

"It was found that within the district, there were 1,821 passenger cars at one time; on account of buildings under construction there was some unused curb space which if used might have raised the number to about 2,000, which is believed to be the normal number of cars that can avail themselves of the one hour parking privilege. On the basis of six hours from 10 a. m., to 4 p. m., if the cars change every hour, about 12,000 cars can fined curb space, and more if the average stop is shorter than one hour.

"No check was made to determine the extent to which these cars abused this privilege by remaining longer than one hour. There is room for more than 2,000 cars, but necessary reservations for public purposes will keep the space down.

Cars by the Curbs.

"In addition to the above there were 386 commercial vehicles at the curb in the limited parking district.

"Outside the limited parking district, where all-day parking is permitted, the following number of standing automobiles were counted:

| In unlimited parking district just outside the limited parking district: | Automobiles. | Trucks. |
|---|---|---|
| East Side | 545 | 189 |
| West Side | 3052 | 270 |
| North Side | 520 | 186 |
| South Side | 2068 | 338 |
| Total of above | 6185 | 983 |
| Inside limited parking districts | 1821 | 366 |
| Total standing vehicles in congested district | 8006 | 1349 |

"It is interesting to note that approximately one-half of the parked automobiles are west of the district. Also that those south are four times those parked north of the district. This difference is due in part to the Municipal Bridge and in part to the large industrial plants between the south edge of the limited parking district and the railroad in Mill Creek Valley. This preponderance of parked automobiles south of the districts indicates the desirability of another east and west street between Market street and Chouteau avenue, which can be secured by extending Clark avenue as a major street.

"The parking garages and lots within the congested district, where a charge is made for parking, were found to have a capacity of 10,282 cars. It was also found that although no exact records were available, these facilities were used daily by 57% automobiles, about 56 per cent of their full standing capacity.

"The result of this survey would indicate that there is storage capacity available now for several thousand more automobiles than use them, and if they were used to full capacity, there would probably be no necessity for cars to park all day anywhere around the congested district, as many of the automobiles counted there remained for only short periods.

"Parking garages and lots having standing capacity at one time of 10,000 cars can accommodate 25,000 automobiles per day if one-half of the capacity is used by all-day parkers, and the other half is used by parkers averaging two hours, thus turning over four times between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. This use of the storage spaces now available would clear our streets of the all-day parkers and speed up street car traffic."

RED CROSS DELEGATES

JUDGE JOHN BARTON PAYNE

MAJOR GENERAL MERRITTE W. IRELAND

MAJ.-GEN. IRELAND TO ATTEND CONVENTION

Surgeon-General of Army Among Distinguished Men Coming to Red Cross Meeting.

Major-General Merritte Weber Ireland, Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, will be one of the distinguished men attending the national convention of the American Red Cross here Oct. 12 to 15. He is a member of the Central Committee of the Red Cross, representing the War Department. Gen. Ireland was appointed Assistant Surgeon in the U. S. Army in 1891. He rendered distinguished services during the Spanish-American War, and in 1918 was appointed Major-General, and a few months later was made Surgeon-General. He was Chief Surgeon of the A. E. F. in France until October, 1918. For his brilliant service in France, Gen. Ireland was reappointed Surgeon-General of the Army in 1922, with the permanent rank of Major-General.

Judge Payne to Preside.

The Red Cross convention opens on Monday morning, Oct. 12, with a big mass meeting in the Scottish Rite Cathedral at 10 a. m., at which Gov. Baker, Mayor Miller and Mrs. Frank V. Hammar will give welcoming addresses. Judge John Barton Payne, national chairman of the Red Cross, will preside at the opening meeting and will also give an address. He is one of the best known jurists of the United States and was a member of President Wilson's Cabinet.

All meetings of the Red Cross convention are to be open to the public. There will be four morning and three evening mass meetings in the Scottish Rite Cathedral. "The National and International Program of the Red Cross" will be the subject of the first evening meeting on Monday, Oct. 12, and the presiding officer will be Col. Ernest P. Bicknell, in charge of insular and foreign operations of the American Red Cross, who directed many relief projects following the World War.

Stone to Address Meeting.

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 13, the subject of the mass meeting will be "The Red Cross as the National Disaster Agency," with addresses by Earl Kilpatrick of the Red Cross, Melville Stone, for many years general manager of the Associated Press, and W. R. Dawes, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. The convention will close with the mass meeting on Thursday evening, Oct. 15, at which Rev. Dr. Charles Cloud, S. J., president of St. Louis University, will preside, and among the speakers will be Chancellor H. S. Hadley of Washington University, Col. David Stone, commandant of Jefferson Barracks, and Miss Clara Noyes, director of the Red Cross Nursing Service, who, during the World War, directed over 20,000 nurses in army, navy and Red Cross service.

1500 Delegates Expected.

There will be round table conferences every afternoon at the City Club, Hotel Statler and Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Music Hall, with addresses on Red Cross problems and activities in many fields, including disaster relief, war service, civilian and veteran aid, nutrition, life saving, first aid, nursing and home hygiene. Over 1500 delegates are expected, representing all parts of the United States, the Philippines, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Canal Zone. Heads of departments of the Red Cross who have directed enormous enterprises in many lines of relief, educational and community work, will attend the convention and speak at the various sessions.

Ex-Engineer's Revival Sermon.

M. E. Lewis, former engineer, who is holding revival meetings at the Lighthouse Mission, Tower Grove and Norfolk avenues, will deliver a sermon at 7 o'clock tonight entitled, "The Grand Central Station." There will be choir singing under the direction of Mrs. M. E. Lewis.

CHIEF ALT'S RULES TO PREVENT FIRES

Urges St. Louisans to Make "Fire Prevention Week" an Individual Matter.

Everybody's business is nobody's business, and therefore the individual mind should be concentrated on individual action, Fire Chief Alt points out, in a statement directing public attention to the fact that "Fire Prevention week" in the nation and city begins tomorrow.

"Let's make 'Fire Prevention Week' not only a public occasion here in St. Louis," he says in a statement issued yesterday, "but also a private matter and keep its lessons by us throughout the year to come." He puts forward these rules for fire safety:

Watch disposal of matches and lighted smoking materials; they are responsible for heavier fire loss than any known cause. Always keep matches out of the reach of small children.

Use proper fuses in electrical circuits; turn off electric flat irons and the like before doing something else.

Beware of gasoline and volatile liquids as cleaning fluids; many safe compounds are obtainable at drug stores.

Keep Chimneys in Repair.

Keep chimneys and flues in repair; they caused $20,000,000 destruction last year.

Hunt your gas leaks with a flashlight, not a match or candle.

Clean smokepipes before winter; clogged pipes overheat easily. Remember, hot ashes belong in metal containers; oil lamps should be filled in daylight and open fires should be screened when left untended.

"I have just concluded an inspection of business and residence premises," Chief Alt continued, "and have called for a general cleanup. Hundreds of property owners already have co-operated in this respect, I noted."

Proclamation by The Mayor.

Mayor Miller issued a proclamation Friday, calling upon citizens to observe "Fire Prevention Week" 'Fire, the greatest destructive force in nature," he said, "again proved its potency last year by the destruction of hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of property and the loss of many thousand of lives. Much of this material and physical waste could be avoided by a little care and thought on the part of the inhabitants. Undoubtedly the great majority of these fires are occasioned by carelessnes or improper inspection.

"I trust that the citizens of this city, with renewed effort and with a new determination, may do those things in the coming year that will lessen the loss by fire both to persons and property, that this vast sum of money, may be used in gainfl occupations."

Closing the week's program, the St. Louis Safety Council will hold its first regular meeting of foremen and superintendents at Community Center, Grand boulevard and Vista avenue, Friday evening. Richard E. Verner, manager of the Fire Prevention Department, Western Actuarial Bureau, at Chicago, will speak on "The National Ash Heap," which is announced as a discussion of America's annual loss of 15,000 lives and $548,000,000 in property due to fires.

GERMAN CONSUL TO SPEAK

Dr. Ahrens Will Attend Chamber of Commerce Luncheon.

Dr. George Ahrens, recently appointed Consul for Germany in St. Louis, has wired from Washington that he has accepted an invitation to speak at a luncheon of the Foreign Trades Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce on his arrival in St. Louis has been without a German Consul for the last two years. The Foreign Trade Bureau has been active in trying to have the consulate restored.

Merchant Slugged, Robbed of $40.

Two negroes slugged Frank Cohen, 52 years old, a merchant at 3338 Franklin avenue, when they visited his store Friday afternoon. With a brick wrapped in a newspaper they struck him on the head, fracturing his skull, and leaving him unconscious they fled with $40 taken from the cash register. It was their fourth visit in a week and Cohen was suspicious of them until they asked to purchase underwear, when he turned his back to serve them.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically, from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines, and artificial digestants, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

WEIGHT COMPLAINTS WANTED

All Will Be Investigated, Commissioner Says.

Commissioner of Weights and Measures Haley yesterday renewed his request that all persons who have received short weights notify his department at once. All complaints will be investigated and, if substantiated, prosecutions will follow.

Three coal weighers and a Kroger store manager have been fined in police court this month on charges of short-weighing. Complainants are requested to address the Commissioner of Weights and Measures, Room 44, Municipal Courts Building, or telephone Main 5560, station 59.

Holderness Gets Bankers' Post.

M. E. Holderness, vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, was elected chairman of the Public Relations Commission of the American Bankers' Association at the convention of that organization held recently in Atlantic City. He succeeds Francis H. Sisson, vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York.

'THAIS' PRESENTED BY NEGROES

Proceeds to go For Aid of Day Nursery Organization.

The Day Nursery Organization of St. Louis negroes, headed by Mrs. W. C. Bridges as manager and Mrs. Anna Russell Garner as secretary, presented "Thais" Friday night at the Odeon before a capacity house. The four-act play by Paul Wilstach, founded on Anatole France's novel, was staged and supervised by Clarence E. Muse of Chicago.

A group of negro women have decided to make an effort to establish a day nursery. The proceeds will go to augment the limited funds of the organization.

20 DAYS FOR EAST SIDE WOMAN

Pleaded Guilty of Possession of Moonshine Whisky.

After pleading guilty of possession of half a pint of moonshine liquor found in her home by East St. Louis police, Mrs. Agnes Robinson, 40 years old, was sentenced to 20 days in jail Friday. The liquor was found on Sept. 11. Mrs. Robinson denied she had it for sale.

TRIALS OF 'OPEN SHOP' PAINTER ON CITY JOB

Contractor Says Employe Was Assaulted and Paint Ruined by Putting Salt in It.

Difficulties encountered by an "open shop" operator in obtaining and performing city work was outlined yesterday by B. T. Trimble, manager of the Eureka Shops, 4511 McMillan avenue, whose contract to decorate City Courtroom No. 1 resulted in the Painters' Union calling out approximately 100 union painters employed on city work.

Trimble was awarded the contract to decorate the courtroom on a bid of $368, slightly lower than the bids of two competitors operating strictly union shops. He began work a week ago, selecting four men, who he says had union cards, from among his 27 employes, for the job.

Salt Put in Paint.

Trimble says the preparatory efforts in the courtroom resulted thus: All union painters employed at city institutions and all painters of union employers doing city work went on strike; salt was put in 15 gallons of paint to be used in painting the courtroom, causing a loss of $40; Ross Clark, one of the four men working on the job, was assaulted by a group of men while leaving the Municipal Courts Building; and Mrs. Marian Trimble, Trimble's mother, was insulted by several men, who went to her home on the day work started, requesting to see him.

Trimble got police protection and the work is now being pushed by eight painters, four of whom Trimble says have union cards. The men are being paid the union wage scale, $10.40 per day, and work under the same conditions as in a strictly union shop, Trimble says.

The Eureka Shops specialize in interior decorating. "The nature of our business makes it impossible for us to employ only union painters," Trimble said. "We must have men who can do our style of work and when we get one who can we don't ask him whether he belongs to the union or not. Our customers don't ask us whether our men are union members, but they do want results."

Shop Employs 70 Men.

The Eureka Shops employs as many as 70 painters during rush seasons, according to Trimble, many of whom are union members. Records of his company show that the concern has done decorating in several hundred St. Louis homes and has also received contracts from numerous commercial houses and office buildings. Trimble came to St. Louis from New York four years ago and says he has been attempting to obtain city work ever since. The courtroom job is his first city contract and, despite the difficulties encountered, Trimble says he will bid on more city work.

The strike of union painters employed by the city will continue "until such time as assurance is given that future city painting contracts will be awarded contractors operating strictly union shops," according to a decision made at a meeting of the Painter's District (Union) Council Friday night.

Union Denies Assertions.

Union officials have disputed Trimble's assertion that he is employing union painters on the courtroom job, declaring that only one of the men ever belonged to the local painters' organization and that he was dropped two years ago for nonpayment of dues. The painters on strike include 29 men regularly employed at city institutions and the employes of four painting concerns holding contracts to paint the exterior of the City Hall, a water tank at the City Sanitarium, a new fire engine house, and the Health Department quarters in the Municipal Courts Building.

Opening of New Furniture Department—Great Demonstration of Quaker Laces—Correctly Appointed Tables in the China Shop—Sale of Oriental Rugs—Among Features Most Unusual

HOMECRAFT Week, as it was originally started, featured only certain kinds of Lace Curtains, having its beginning in the Quaker Lace Company. It has now become a week set aside for the promotion and improvement of Better Homes throughout the entire country. It no longer means merely Quaker Laces to the average householder. It means a time when many stores feature unusual displays of Furniture, Lace Curtains, Over-Draperies, Floorcoverings, Lamps and all the other articles which make a house a home.

Homecraft Week at Vandervoort's has always been an important occasion. This year it is of even greater importance than heretofore.

With the opening of our new Furniture Department; with special displays of Quaker Laces and other good Curtains and Drapery materials; with an especial exhibit of fine China featuring correctly appointed tables for different occasions; with exhibits of Lamps, Lighting Equipment, Pictures, Mirrors, Tapestries and Floorcoverings including Oriental Rugs; this will be one of the most interesting occasions of the Fall season at Vandervoort's.

Many exhibits out of the ordinary have been planned for each of the Home Furnishings Departments.

U. S. WOULD REVOKE WOMAN'S PAPERS

Brought by Government to Cancel Naturalization of Dr. Anna Golstein.

To cancel naturalization granted Dr. Anna Golstein, Waterman avenue, on the ground that she committed perjury in her application for a license to practice medicine in Missouri, was filed in the United States District Court yesterday by the Government.

The suit is based on evidence brought out at a hearing before the State Board of Health last March, which resulted in the revocation of Dr. Golstein's license to practice medicine in this State. The license was ordered restored recently by Circuit Judge Miller, who sustained Dr. Golstein's plea to have the Board of Health order set aside.

In its petition, the Government has set forth that Dr. Golstein, in her application for a license to practice medicine, Jan. 1, 1922, declared she was born in St. Louis, Sept. 28, 1898, whereas it was disclosed at the subsequent hearing that she was born in Russia on that date and that her given name is "Chana," not "Anna."

The petition also cites that Dr. Golstein made affidavit that she had been examined by W. P. Sachs, State examiner, as to her preliminary educational qualifications, and had attended the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons from September, 1916, to May, 1921, when she was graduated. Evidence introduced before the Board of Health disclosed that Dr. Golstein had not been examined by Sachs, had attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons but one year, and purchased a medical certificate from Dr. Robert Adcox, the petition declares.

Dr. Golstein's misstatement of facts in applying for a medical license refutes the declaration of herself and witnesses at the naturalization hearing, July 5, 1924, that she is a person of good moral character, the Government's petition states.

ST. ANTHONY'S HOSPITAL FUND CAMPAIGN OPENS TOMORROW

Large Subscriptions to Be Sought in Advance of City-Wide Canvass.

The campaign for $500,000 to build an addition to St. Anthony's Hospital will open tomorrow, when a special committee will begin solicitation work for large subscriptions. The intensive period of the drive when a city-wide canvass will be made by more than 500 volunteer workers, has been set for Oct. 9 to 19.

The addition would enable the Franciscan Sisters, who have operated the hospital for 50 years without calling upon the public for financial assistance, to install 100 additional beds in the hospital. The work of the sisters was praised in a statement issued yesterday by Dr. H. S. McKay, president of the hospital staff, who described St. Anthony's as "the hospital where the small salaried man may get the best of medical attention at a moderate cost."

U. S. BOARD OF TAX APPEALS TO BEGIN HEARINGS TOMORROW

Members of the United States Board of Tax Appeals will begin a series of hearings at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the Federal Court room. The members of the board are: J. M. Sternhagen, W. C. Lansdon, and C. R. Arundell. Sternhagen is chairman of the board.

The Appeals Board was created in 1924 and the hearings to be conducted here will be the first in St. Louis. The board sits as a court to hear appeals from tax deficiencies found by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in income, excess profits and estate taxes. The taxpayer is privileged to file an appeal and obtain a hearing before payment. He must be prepared to introduce witnesses and other evidence to prove his facts. Many cases have been dismissed by the board because the taxpayers did not understand this and were not prepared.

A. D. Sharpe is the legal assistant for the board. W. C. Hamilton is clerk. There are two secretaries, Miss Helen H. Moore and Miss Ruth Hahn. The delegation is at the Hotel Mayfair. The members will address the Members Conference luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday.

Brilliant Assemblage Attends The Bemis-Luyties Wedding

Dean Scarlett Performs Ceremony at St. Michael and All Angel's Church — Dinner for Wedding Party and Few Friends Follows at Bride's Home.

SOCIETY in its newest autumn garb braved the inclement weather yesterday to attend the wedding of Miss Louise Bemis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson S. Bemis of Brentmoor, and William Harrison Luyties, which took place at 5:30 o'clock in St. Michael and All Angel's Church and a brilliant assemblage had crowded the rather small auditorium before the organ prelude announced the bridal party. Clusters of chrysanthemums decorated the chancel, where Dean Scarlett of Christ Church Cathedral read the service.

The bride was preceded to the altar by Miss Elizabeth Luyties, a sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Oliver J. Anderson and Mrs. Samuel Dozier Conant, her own sisters, as maid and matrons of honor and Misses Virginia Hoblitzelle, Katherine Steedman, Judith Dana and Faith Bemis of Boston, the latter a cousin of the bride, gowned alike in sheer blue chiffon, with accessories corresponding in shade to the wine of an orchid, as bridesmaids. The frocks were fashioned with panel backs and short ties fastened over the fullness of the front and long bell-shaped sleeves. Their shoes, their rather large velvet and felt hats, and the ribbons tying great arm bouquets of chrysanthemums which they carried were in the wine tint.

The bride, of a distinctive tall brunette type, wore white velvet, as she did when making her debut two years ago. The gown was made on long lines with a slight drapery in front and a low embroidered pearl girdle at the back preventing a severity of silhoutte. There were short duchess lace sleeves, and a velvet court train lined with silver cloth. A rare old lace shawl of the early Victorian period, which was purchased in York last summer by Mrs. Bemis, was used for a veil. One corner was arranged to her hair while filmy tulle fell from the other end the length of her train. She carried a bouquet of ex-

Retiring Consort to Have Cluster of Gorgeous Roses Culled From Same Place — Innovations in Seating Arrangement.

LAST-MINUTE preparations for the advent of St. Louis' own beloved Veiled Prophet are in progress, for only three days intervene before the ball at which the venerable monarch will place the jeweled crown upon the fair head of a new consort as she kneels before him, and the queen of 1924 graciously abdicates her place on the throne. The event has come to be synonymous with the formal opening of a new season, and milady must be prepared for the rush of dinners, dances and teas which follow in rapid succession until after the mid-year holidays. Last fittings at the fashionable modistes, final marcel waves and hurried trips to the florists occupy the time of many of the prospective guests, especially those fortunate enough to be invited to the Country Club, where the Queen's dinner is to be held, or to any of the other clubs where supper dances will be given.

Flowers for the ball have been given much time and consideration by the committees, and for the second time a Veiled Prophet Queen, not unlike Elizabeth of Belgium, will carry orchids culled from the rare collection at Shaw's Garden. Each blossom has been tended with a view to its cutting for Wednesday night, and each is perfect. The sheaf will contain 25 varieties, according to orchid experts at the Garden. Some are hybrids, which were originated in Europe by French and English botanists, and one was grown for the first time by the late Joseph Chamberlain, former Premier of England. The gorgeous collection of roses at Shaw's Garden also has been depleted in order that Miss Collins, the retiring queen, and the four special maids of honor may have the choice blossoms to harmonize with the general color scheme of their gowns.

A variance from the usual number included in the court of honor, and a difference in their seating arrangements constitute a deviation which promises to be attractive. Instead of the usual 75 matrons and an equal number of maids, there will be 100 matrons and only 50 of the maids in the ensemble about the throne. The young women have been classified by his majesty as regular maids, and a special 20 will accompany the retiring queen as she descends the throne to join her predecessors in the queens' box to the right of the dias. The names of the immediate court, the new queen and her four special maids will be announced by a trumpeter to the assembled guests, as each steps into the ball room.

Below is printed a complete list of the maids and matrons of honor, which includes the name of the queen.

BRILLIANT ASSEMBLAGE ATTENDS THE BEMIS-LUYTIES WEDDING

quisite white orchids and wore a diamond and platinum bracelet, the gift of her husband.

Frederick August Luyties Jr., served his brother as best man, and Oliver J. Anderson, Samuel Dozier Conant, Jgrn Jay Johns, Loisel Papin, Carl Koehler, Reginald Mortimer, Cross Ormrod, Tom Hord of Murphysboro, Ill., a cousin of the bride, and Raymond De Voe of New York as groomsmen.

Because of the ill health of the bride's mother, plans for a large reception were abandoned, and instead, a bridal dinner for the wedding party and a few of the closest friends followed at the Bemis home.

Mr. Luyties gave his attendants gold key rings and his bride gave her attendants gold cloth evening bags sewn with French flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Luyties will sail Wednesday on the Berengaria for Europe, and will return to St. Louis Jan. 15.

Out-of-town guests for the event included Mrs. Joseph St. George Tucker of Mobile, Ala., an aunt of the bride; her cousin, Miss Una Webster of Birmingham, Ala., and another cousin, Farwell Bemis, father of Miss Faith of Boston.

The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn. Her debut party was a dinner dance at the St. Louis Country Club. Later she became a member of the Imperial and the Junior League. Mr. Luyties is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic August Luyties of Brentmoor. He was educated at the United States Military Academy at West Point and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a member of the Racquet and University Clubs.

The dates for a number of additional debut parties were announced last week. Mrs. Edward Carpenter, of Fortress Monroe, Va., and her daughter, Miss Juliet Lee Carpenter, have arrived in St. Louis to be the guests for a month of Mrs. Henry S. Turner of 4967 Pershing avenue. Mrs. Carpenter was a niece of the late Mr. Turner. Miss Carpenter will be presented to society at a dinner dance given by her mother at the St. Louis Country Club Oct. 30. Mrs. Clarence Curby of Washington terrace will present her daughter, Miss Ruth, at a tea the afternoon of the same day at her home, and Miss Lillie Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard B. Allen of Maryland avenue, will make her bow at a dinner dance at the Country Club Dec. 18. Mr. and Mrs. Allen are at Hotel Chase with their family until after their house is remodeled. Miss Katherine McCluney will be honor guest at a similar debut party at the same club Nov. 20. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. McCluney.

RECENT WEDDINGS; ANNOUNCEMENTS OF BETROTHALS

AN ENGAGEMENT of much interest to society in St. Louis and Pittsburg, is the betrothal of Miss Margaret Anne McClay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McClay of Pittsburg and Henry Haarstick Whittemore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Levering Whittemore of Forsyth boulevard. The engagement has been announced in Pittsburg, where the prospective bride is a belle in the younger social set. Miss McClay was formally presented to society last winter. Whittemore is a graduate of the University of Virginia, and recently returned from a world tour. The wedding date has not been decided.

An attractive home wedding in Webster Groves last night was that of Miss Jesse Rebecca Jarvis, daughter of Mrs. William T. Long, and Dr. Ernest Linwood Coffin, which took place at 8 o'clock at the Long home, the Rev. Dr. John S. Bunting of the Church of the Ascension officiating. The lower rooms of the house were decorated with roses and lilies combined with ferns, and the ceremony was performed in a bower of the blossoms built in a bay window. Miss Blanch Pollock played the wedding music.

The bride was gowned in white crepe satin trimmed in godets of beaded georgette. There was a georgette court train beaded to match and a tulle veil. She carried white roses. Mrs. Long gave her daughter in marriage. Mrs. Amber Anderson of Terre Haute, Ind., who attended her sister as matron of honor, wore green georgette and silver and carried pink roses. Dr. Newman Donnell, an uncle of the bride, served Dr. Coffin as best man.

After a reception for 150 guests, Dr. and Mrs. Coffin departed for Chicago on a short wedding trip. They will make their home at 5656 Kingsbury boulevard.

The bride has studied music for several years, and made her home until a year ago in Kansas City. Dr. Coffin attended Cornell University and received his degree at Washington University.

Another pretty ceremony of yesterday took place at 4 o'clock at the Second Presbyterian Church, when Miss Ruth Warren, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Warren, became the bride of William R. Becker, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Becker of Quincy, Ill. Chrysanthemums and ferns adorned the chancel, where the Rev. Dr. John W. MacIvor read the service. The bride was gowned in white moire, made simply in gored fashion, with decided flare at the hem, and long close fitting sleeves with rose point lace at the hand. A princess lace veil over tulle cascaded over a long moire court train and orange blossoms held it in place. She carried roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Russell Stanley of Kansas City, the matron of honor, wore orchid and lavender chiffon made with a petal skirt of alternating colors and a lavender chiffon bodice. She carried Ophelia roses. Miss Mary W. Long of Metropolis, Ill., as maid of honor, was gowned in pink chiffon shading to a deeper shade. The skirt was made in tiers, each outlined in pearls and rhinestones. Her flowers were Columbia roses. Each young woman wore a black chiffon velvet hat faced to match their dresses with a black ostrich tip drooping over the brim at one side.

Norman L. Gerrish of Boston was best man and Mervyn James Warren, brother of the bride; Harold Michaels and Marion Forestove of Quincy, groomsmen. William Warren gave his sister in marriage. A small reception for the families and wedding party with a few friends followed at the home of the bride's mother, 4540 McPherson avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Becker are motoring East, and on their return will make their home with Mrs. Warren until they find an apartment.

They are graduates of the University of Illinois, and Mr. Becker spent two years at Knox College. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta and his bride is a member of Delta Phi Beta.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Marion Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gershon A. Ward of Webster Groves, and Alfred Percival Bosanquet, son of L. P. Bosanquet of Fruitland Park, Fla., took place at 5 o'clock the afternoon of Oct. 1 at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Dr. D. N. Skilling, assisted by the Rev. Robert W. Burns, a cousin of the bride, performed the ceremony in a bower of roses. Mrs. John Edwin Friedrichs was matron of honor, and Mildred and Suzanne Ward, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. David Newell was best man, and the bride's six brothers, Thomas H., John W., Gershon A. Jr., David E., William C. and Joseph W. Ward, were groomsmen and ushers.

Unusual Winter Coat Values

20 Years Ago

St. Louis was famous for its "night-life," its fine restaurants with their excellent cuisine.

No one ever came to town without going to Tony Faust's. The beautifully appointed dining room on the second floor with its tessilated floor was ultra-smart. The Southern across the street had sumptuous appointments. The three exquisite art windows by Tiffany, illustrating a Wordsworth poem, were much admired.

Then, there were always gay sets of epicures to be found at the Planter's, the new Jefferson, McTague's, and the Lindell Hotel with its great dining room "without a post to obstruct one's view."

In those days the town's visitors saw a new apparel store added to the city's shops. The name Kline's had no merchandising significance then—until the values had a chance to speak for themselves!

ADAPTO SHOES for STOUT WOMEN

We dont make any extravagant claims for ADAPTO shoes—We don't claim that they will "cure" all manner of foot ailments.

But, ADAPTO footwear being scientifically and specially designed for stout women, we do state it as our honest belief that the average stout woman will find a greater degree of foot comfort, foot freedom and shoe-style in ADAPTO shoes than in any other shoe she may select.

The heel fitting is snug. The arch is high and restfully supporting. And the complete range of sizes and widths comes very close to assuring perfect fit.

Add to this the fact that ADAPTOS may be had in all the new Fall modes and you know why we can confidently invite your most critical inspection.

*If you suffer from any manner of foot ailment, visit our Foot Service Department for a free consultation. This completely equipped department is the only one of its kind in this city and is under constant supervision of our foot specialist. # St. Louis Is All-Agog to Know What Is to Be Worn This Autumn—and Here It Is

The Accepted Evening GOWNS

Fashion dictates certain lines in the new silhouette that have been followed with utmost interest. Flaring through circular panels and uneven hemlines, diagonal effects intercepted by startlingly lovely flowers introduced at intervals, Princess lines molded to the figure in clinging velvets and sheer chiffon, and Jumper frocks stressed in striking colors of metallic cloth in evening gowns are exquisite beyond description. Prices are $35 to $225.

(Costume Salon—Fourth Floor.)

The Vogue in New FROCKS

For business and street wear madam will sponsor the elegant simplicity in cloth frocks, embodying only a subtle touch of decoration. Silk Frocks for smart teas exhibit a profusion of flares, godets, pleats—always fulness. The only concession to fulness above the waist is found in capes and daring jabot conceits. These are the ultra notes in Paris decrees. Frocks are priced $25 to $95.

(Dress Shops—Fourth Floor.)

Color Appears on FOOTWEAR

An unlimited variety of materials, exotic treatments in decorations, and the great emphasis placed on spiked heels mark another fashion era in footwear. Silver kid outlines around the top of slippers, unique inlays of contrasting materials and ornamental buckles are a few of the important and noted details. Prices are $6.50 to $12.50.

(Footwear Shop—First Floor.)

COATS Flare in Animation

The silhouette in coats is a restless mode; fulness at the side, in back, in front, it changes with youthful animation, perhaps to slender wrap with long fur stole. The collar rises in "Medici" dignity, or rolls softly into shawl or revere style. Evening wraps in vivid colored velvets with collars of fur or unique velvet roses, others of metallic cloth, fur trimmed, envelop one in folds of glistening splendor. $45 to $395.

(Coat Shop—Third Floor.)

FURS in New Supple Beauty

Whether it be for sports or important occasions, the Fur Coat lends itself to every variation of line. Deft ways of fashioning and blending the furs are most noteworthy. Browns, black and gray revealed in hardier pelts for daytime wear, of muskrat, antelope, caracul, leopard, vie in beauty with broadtail, ermine and squirrel, reflecting the more formal mood. $97.50 to $1195.

(Fur Shop—Third Floor.)

HATS Turn With the Mode

Diversity in millinery is quite as noticeable as that of every part of the ensemble. In felts, velours, satins, velvets and the most recent introduction of metallic fabrics, the brim is up, is down, or disappears in skilfully wound turbans. Colors are proclaimed in vivid hues or in a dull haze of soft tones. Sport Hats are priced $10 to $25. Street and Dress Hats range in prices from $10.00 to $75.00.

Examination Without Charge

Consult the special representative from Wizard headquarters. Learn the cause of your Foot Trouble. Without charge a skilled examination will be made of your stockinged feet. You merely slip off your shoes, just as you do in buying a new pair. The cause of your trouble will be revealed and you will be given the benefit of a test fitting which will convince you that you may have relief. There is no inconvenience—no obligation.

(Foot Relief Department, Shoe Section—Main Floor.)

Why Let Your Feet Hurt?

Fallen arches, leaning ankles, callouses, rotation of the heel and other foot troubles are traced to the breaking down of the delicate bone structure of the foot. One or more of the bones in the 26-bone structure has given away under the weight of the body. Displaced bones are pressing against sensitive nerves. Pain, enlargement or swelling are nature's warning that your feet need help.

Restoration of the foot structure to natural position is the only means of relief. This is quickly and comfortably accomplished with smooth all-leather Wizard Arch Builders, adjustable at the heel, ball and arch. Wizard Arch Builders—invisble when worn—are feather light. They may be worn in practically any style shoe that meets with your approval. The results in comfort and graceful poise are priceless.

Erases Wrinkles in Less Than 15 Minutes

Scientists have at last taken up seriously the problem of removing wrinkles and age lines. Many experiments have been made. The result indicates that the "tarkroot method" is the best because it produces immediate results with perfect safety and comfort. It consists merely in spreading over the face a mixture of powdered tarkroot, one spoonful, and lemon juice, one spoonful. In your mirror, before your very eyes, you can watch the wrinkles and sagginess literally melt away—in less than 15 minutes!

The sensation from this brief treatment is most refreshing. The effect is far better than that produced by the most expert massage. Tarkroot is so harmless you could eat it. And the cost per treatment is trifling—less than three cents when purchased in the original package at any drug store.

CAPITAL ENTERTAINS MANY FOREIGN VISITORS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Washington has been entertaining America's debtors this week. First came the French mission, headed by the former Premier Caillaux, then the Czecho-Slovak debt mission, headed by Dr. Vilem Posisil, and right on the heels of these distinguished visitors came the men and women delegates to the Interparliamentary Union, which is one of the few organizations coming to this capital which ever won the privilege of holding its sessions in the Capitol Building.

The trio of Congresswomen who will be a center of interest in the next session of the House of Representatives have come to Washington to greet the women members of foreign Parliaments who are delegates to the Interparliamentary Union gathering, including Mrs. Mathilde Hauschultz and Mrs. Elna Munch, members of the Chamber of Deputies of Denmark; Mrs. Thusnelda Lang Brumann, Mrs. Clara Mende, Mrs. Antonie Pfulf; Mrs. Luise Schroeder and Mrs. Christine Teusch of the German Reichstag. The American Congresswomen, Mrs John Jacob Rogers of Massachusetts, Mrs. Mary T. Norton of New Jersey and Mrs. Julius Kahn of California, escorted these visiting legislators over the Capitol building and also entertained them informally at luncheon in the House restaurant.

President and Mrs. Coolidge will leave Washington tonight for Omaha, where they will attend the convention of the American Legion there. In the presidential party will be his secretary, Everett Sanders, Maj. James F. Coupal, and his military and naval aids.

Washington society is agog with excitement over the interesting rumor that Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the late President, is to marry Dr. Sterling Ruffin, one of the fashionable physicians of the capital. It is an open secret here that Dr. Ruffin was a persistent admirer of Mrs. Wilson before his courtship was eclipsed by that of President Wilson. During the late President's illness Dr. Ruffin was frequently called in consultation by Rear Admiral Grayson, U. S. N., who had direct charge of the case and it is surmised that his sympathy and attentions led to the present romance.

It is recalled here that Mrs. Grover Cleveland, widow of Grover Cleveland, remarried some years after her husband's death. She is now Mrs. Thomas Preston, wife of a Princeton professor. Mrs. Wilson is still in Europe but is expected to arrive in America in a few weeks.

One of the brilliant social events of the Interparliamentary Union conference was the reception given in honor of the delegates by Mrs. John B. Henderson at Boundary Castle on Thursday. Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the Vice President, is a co-member with Mrs. Henderson on the special women's committee which arranged entertainments for the visitors.

Mrs. Henderson also was accorded a very signal honor when she was the first Washington hostess to entertain members of the French Debt Funding Mission at dinner on Wednesday night. A distinguished company, highly official in character, was assembled to greet them. Mrs. Henderson and her granddaughter, Miss Beatrice Henderson, were the only ladies present at the dinner. Besides Secretary of Commerce Hoover, a group of Senators formed the American contingent of the party.

The festivities for the marriage of Missouri's Princess, Princess Bertha Cantauzene, great-granddaughter of President and Mrs. Grant, to Bruce Smith of Louisville, Ky., have already begun in Washington. The Princess and her mother, Princess Michael Cantacuzene, sail from Paris this week for New York. On landing they will come immediately to Washington, where they will be house guests of the Princess's grandmother, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, until after the ceremony, on Saturday, Oct. 10.

The acting Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis and their daughters, who recently returned from Dark Harbor, Me., have taken a country place at Bethesda, Md., where they will spend the winter.

Many Washington notables will go to St. Louis to attend the annual convention of the American Red Cross this week. The capital delegation will be headed by Judge John Barton Payne, national chairman of the Red Cross, and others in the party will be Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of the American Red Cross, and Major General George Barnett, U. S. M. C., retired, chairman of the Washington chapter of the American Red Cross.

Miss Eppes Hawes, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Mary Hawes of St. Louis, is a house guest of Miss Virginia Hume in Washington. After a week Miss Hawes will be the guest of Miss Katherine Sutherland, daughter of the former Senator of West Virginia, for a few days.

The Southern contingent here is greatly interested in the marriage this week of Miss Mary Curtis Lee, great grand-daughter of General Robert E. Lee, and daughter of the late Colonel and Mrs. Robert E. Lee, to Hunter F. Debutts of Upperville, Va. The marriage united two noted Virginia families.

William H. Bliss, father of the Minister of Sweden, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren of Detroit, are at Hot Springs for a month's stay. On their way to the famous resort they stopped in Washington for a few days.

Telling How and When To Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolene, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

Mrs. C. T. B. asks: "My family of five seem to be always having a cold or a prolonged cough throughout the fall and winter. First one and then another is attacked. Can you offer some help?"

Answer: This being the season when thousands are seeking relief from distressing colds and stubborn coughs due to same, my advice to all, based on years of experience, is to act quickly as soon as a "cold" is apparent.

To check a cold in its early stage, obtain triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve. Use it as per directions promptly and regularly. When this is done the cold is generally banished before it gets serious. If the system is run down take Cadomene tablets as a tonic. For obstinate distressing cough, spasmodic croup, and for whooping cough convalescents, there can be found nothing better than essence Mentho-Laxene, to be used as per directions with each bottle.

Mr. J. R. asks: "I am 37 years old and am very nervous. Suffer a great deal with pain in head and back of neck. Have no ambition and am always tired and depressed. Am pale, thin and don't sleep well."

Answer: I suggest that Cadomene tablets be taken to aid improvement of the quality and quantity of the blood and thus restore the normal functioning of the body organs and nervous system.

R. J. D. asks: "I am 21 and under weight for my age and height. Am troubled with costiveness and pimples and boils on my face and body. Would like to know what to take."

Answer: To quickly aid the bowels and rid the blood of the toxins causing pimples and boils, take Sulpherb tablets as a laxative blood medicine. To increase weight try Hypo-Nuclane tablets as a nutritional tonic. They may be taken at same time.

H. A. asks: "I have bladder and kidney trouble, with a burning, stinging sensation. My night's rest is disturbed, and often have dull aches and stiffness of muscles and joints. Can this condition be Helped?"

Answer: This condition is sometimes due to constipation in which case take Sulpherb tablets as a bowel and kidney regulator. If due to functional inactivity of the kidneys, take Balmwort tablets as a diuretic-tonic and neutralizing agent to tone up the kidneys and overcome the bladder irritation.

Answer to Mrs. E. R.: The pains of neuritis may sometimes be relieved by lightly annointing with triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve. Su-thol tablets give relief in some cases of rheumatic character.

T. Y. W. asks: "In the past year I have gotten too fat and also I suffer with embarrassment, because I have to have all my clothing made to order, as ready-made things will not fit. Can I reduce?"

Answer: I suggest that you obtain Arbolone tablets, which are generally very effective in reducing superfluous fat.

W. E. B. asks: "My hair is falling, have itching scalp and bad case of dandruff. Does Minyol stain the hair?"

Answer: No, Minyol does not stain. It quickly stops dandruff, falling hair, and itching scalp, and improves the strength and beauty of the hair.

Answer to Mrs. B: Cadomene tablets and Balmwort tablets may be taken at the same time when conditions warrant.

Mr. K. K. asks: "For nearly seven months have tried to rid my system of a rheumatic affection which impairs me to the extent that I am unable to work regularly. The muscles of arms, legs and right side are the worst, although it seems to be all through my body. Can I be helped?"

Answer: Where the pain is acute and unbearable, I advise five grain Su-thol tablets for quick help. To aid in eliminating the cause and toward complete recovery, I recommend Cardiol tablets as a most effective treatment generally, in muscular rheumatism, lumbago and gouty conditions.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 Collee Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method. The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit-forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist. Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book, "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to anyone sending ten cents (coin).

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

INWOOD PARK, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.: Daniel M. Wert, 9 Maple Road, writes: "I am a carpenter and most of my work is outside. Am 50 years old and I have had trouble with my kidneys and had pains in my groins for 2 years before I got any relief. My landlady then told me about Balmwort tablets from which she had found relief. I have used 2 boxes and am feeling fine—no trouble the last 6 months. I used to have to get out of bed 6 or 7 times a night, and could never die on my back. I would also be subject to chills, etc."

MOBERLY, MO.: Miss M. A. Brower, Lock Box 577, writes: "I saw your 'Answers to Health Questions' in the St. Louis Post Dispatch and a case similar to mine, itching skin, rash and blotches, and procured a box of Sulpherb tablets at once. Have taken 4 packages and there is a wonderful change, for itching, rash and blotches have disappeared. Also tried Minyol for my hair and scalp as I was annoyed with dandruff, and received splendid results and am telling my friends, etc."

MILWAUKEE, WIS.: Mrs. Hilton Roeber, 1156 Third St., writes: "First of all I want to thank you for the wonderful results I got from taking Cadomene tablets. I was very nervous, run-down and weak; could hardly do my housework. A friend recommended Cadomene and I am now taking my third box, and I must say I am feeling just fine, have gained eleven pounds in the last month, can do all of my work and do not feel a bit tired. Have also used Yellow Minyol for itching scalp and dandruff and it surely works wonders. My friends, too, have used it with good results. I am, very sincerely."

CLEVELAND, OHIO: Mrs. J. Leada, 1714 W. 28th St., writes: "My husband was suffering for a long time with lame back, legs and arms, such as muscular rheumatism. I cut out your piece in the paper, took it to the druggist. The first package he took done him lots of good, so he got another to be sure he was all right. It was certainly fine and we thank you very much."

EAST TAWAS, MICHIGAN: Mrs. K. L. Ware writes: "Mentho-Laxene is just wonderful for coughs and colds. I am glad to recommend it to all my friends, etc."

TURTLE CREEK, PA.: Mrs. T. M. Zafaras, 700 Penn Ave., writes: "I had a tickling sensation in my throat. I used one bottle of Mentho-Laxene and the tickling feeling left. Have also used the triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve and can say it is the greatest and grandest I have ever used for colds, catarrh, etc."

LANCASTER, PA.: Mrs. S. Vogel, 340 E. Marion St., writes: "I asked I weighed 195½ pounds. I took 4 tablets and he said, 'go ahead.' Before I started taking the tablets I weighed 195½ pounds. I took 4 packages and my weight reduced to 180 pounds. I highly recommend them to all stout people."

INFORMATION: If your regular druggist does not supply the medicines mentioned by Dr. Baker, the following St. Louis Druggists can do so: Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Johnson Brothers and all good druggists everywhere.

The Monterey Pine in California is a tree of stunted growth and worthless. Seeds of this tree were planted in New Zealand. The conditions of soil and climate were favorable, and this tree has become a remarkable producer of wood. It is called the "Wonderful Tree." Man plodding from day to day with no stimulus in his work soon gets into a rut. We can do with man as with that tree, change his environment and develop him.

DR. HARRISON URGES MANY CIVIC CENTERS

Sees Solution of City Problems in De-Centralization.

Suggestions for a new type of city building, which would give an movement, were made by Rabbi movement, were made by Rabbi Leon Harrison of Temple Israel in an address Friday night, when the feast of tabernacles, the ancient Jewish harvest home, was celebrated. He said, in part:

"There is only one remedy for this frightful congestion of great cities that becomes worse and worse with every passing year. The remedy is the decentralization of our cities. Within the legal confines of each great city there should be many civic centers instead of one; there should be many completely equipped subdivisions of the same city, at different points in the circumference of the same circle, each one a civic center, each one solving its own traffic and transportation problems and its housing problems; and thus, by reducing congestion, solving the question of swollen rentals; and so making possible many a city beautiful, with gardens and open spaces; without slums, without overcrowding, with poor people, perhaps, but poor people in decent surroundings, safeguarded from disease and filth.

"Would Not Harm Industry."

"And this would work no injury to industries. It would simply decentralize them, too. There would be special neighborhoods or civic centers for special industries and trades. They do not all have to be in one place, but can be far apart, thus decentralizing the population. And so working people would not all have to live in one neighborhood or one part of the city, but they could live in many sections of the metropolitan area, and thus automatically prevent rent gouging and the multiplication of unbeautiful and unsanitary dwellings.

"This would be the first great step toward living on the land, in the open country, in natural and wholesome surroundings. The joy of life and its goal should be to live on the land, to escape from the smoke and filthy air, to leave when one can the crowd and the granite pavements, and to have a little home where one can enjoy the green fields and the open sky and the spirit of peace.

"A Possibility for All."

"'Back to the land' should be the cry today of the wise statesman, of the city planner, of the man who cares for the health and happiness of his fellowmen. And 'back to the land' for the not-rich also, back to the wholesome life of quiet and calm, the life of nature. To see the unbroken sweep of the sky above our head and the shining stars, to inhale the sweet refreshing breath of the night, to hear the ancient whispering of the trees over one's home, to hear the songbirds in the morning: This is not autoplan dream; it is a possibility for all who care to have what is best for them. It is the message of this happy day, the vision evoked by this olden feast of tabernacles, that began to be celebrated in the daydawn of human history; when men grew strong from contact with old Mother Earth, when they were free from the diseased growth of cities that breed crime, madness, poverty and discontent."

AMERICAN PUBLIC HEALTH CONVENTION OCT. 19-22

Fifty-Fourth Annual Meeting of Association to Be held at Hotel Statler.

The fifty-fourth annual meeting of the American Public Health Association will be held at Hotel Statler, Oct. 19-22. This association is the professional society of sanitarians in North America, and its annual meetings offer a program of particular interest to public health workers.

The American Public Health Association, representing all public health specialties, both official and unofficial, brings together at its meetings and includes in its programs the various elements, personnel, and subjects that go to make up the public health structure. With a view to correlating these elements, it has this year arranged for a greater number of joint sessions and general sessions than is customary.

The nine sections of the association—public health administration, laboratory, sanitary engineering, food and drugs, vital statistics, industrial hygiene, child hygiene, health education and publicity, and public health nursing—will have their own programs, consisting of one or more sessions. In addition, in a number of instances, two and sometimes four sections will combine to discuss in a joint meeting some outstanding development of interest to the various groups. One subject to be discussed from four angles is the epidemiology of respiratory diseases; another is oyster pollution. There will be also five general sessions participated in by the entire association. In the 27 meetings, more than 125 papers and reports are scheduled. These figures do not include luncheon and dinner sessions devoted to particular topics, nor a special session on mental hygiene sponsored by the National Committee on Mental Hygiene.

More than a thousand delegates are expected to attend from all parts of the United States and also from Canada, Cuba, Mexico and South America.

KNEE-DEEP IN MUD THE MISSOURIANS FOUGHT INDIANS

General Taylor Said They "Fled to the Baggage" in Seminole War but Inquiry Showed Gallantry.

VOLUNTEERS LOST HORSES AT SEA

Then Into Florida on Foot and Suffered 138 Casualties—Not Needed After Battle of Okeechobee.

(Under the title, "This Week in Missouri History" Oct. 4th to 10th), Floyd C. Shoemaker, secretary of the State Historical Society, has compiled the following interesting article:)

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 3.—"The Missourians will go whereve their services are needed," was the answer of Col. Thomas Hart Benton, in reply to President Van Buren's question as to whether or not Missourians could be induced to travel to Florida to aid in the war against the Seminole Indians. Benton was at that time a Senator from Missouri. On Oct. 6, 1837, his prediction was proved when at Columbia a regiment of Missouri volunteers under Col. Richard Gentry was mustered into service for the Florida struggle.

The Seminole War grew out of the order for all Indians to move west of the Mississippi. The Seminoles of Florida and the Creeks of Georgia refused to migrate. The latter were quickly subdued, but the Seminoles in the marshes of Florida baffled the leaders of the American forces for seven years before they were finally driven out.

Fighting had been going on for more than six years when Van Buren asked Col. Benton whether or not the Missourians would aid. In response to Benton's reply the President authorized Joel R. Poinsett, then Secretary of War, to request Gov. Boggs of Missouri to furnish two regiments of mounted volunteers for service in Florida.

Richard Gentry Raised Troops.

Richard Gentry, a pioneer from Kentucky, who had had experience in Indian warfare and who had in 1832 been appointed Major-General of the Missouri militia, was assigned the task of raising the troops. One regiment was raised from Boone County and the surrounding counties. Four companies of the second regiment were raised and attached to the first regiment. Among these were two companies of Delaware and Osage Indians, who were attached as spies. These troops became known as the Missouri Volunteers and spies.

Gen. Gentry and his regiment left Columbia on Oct. 15 after the women of the town presented them with a silk flag which was carried through the engagements of the Missouri Volunteers and afterwards returned to Columbia. It is now in the Sailors' and Soldiers' Memorial Hall in Missouri's State Capitol. The presentation address was made by Lucy Ann Wales, preceptress of Columbia Female College, now Stephens College.

The Missouri Volunteers marched to St. Louis, arriving at Jefferson Barracks on Oct. 20, where they took boat for New Orleans, to Jackson Barracks. Leaving New Orleans Nov. 2, in four sail boats, they encountered a storm. Three of the boats were blown off their course and it was three weeks before they sailed into Tampa Bay. To lighten the boats, horses had to be thrown off, so that when the Missouri Volunteers went into action it was on foot instead of mounted.

Seminoles Were Defeated.

The Missouri regiment was attached to parts of the First, Fourth and Sixth regiments of regulars under Gen. Zachary Taylor. With these regulars, they advanced on Lake Okeechobee, where the Seminoles had massed under four of their best leaders. The Seminoles were met Dec. 25, 1837, and defeated. The Americans suffered casualties of 138 men, most of whom were Missourians. Gen. Gentry was fatally wounded in this battle. He was buried at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, with two more Missouri officers. The Missouri Volunteers were returned to their homes early in 1838, as there was no further need for them after the battle of Okeechobee.

Gen. Taylor, in his report to the War Department, criticised the action of the Missourians, saying they "fled to the baggage" when the Indians were encountered. The Missouri Legislature investigated the report and found that the Missourians had fought gallantly, even though they were ordered to advance through a swamp in which they waded knee-deep in mud. The Legislature requested both President Van Buren and the War Department to make an investigation of the report of Gen. Taylor, but the matter was tabled.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"No girl or woman should 'purge' and 'physic' herself every few days. This is very injurious. Besides, it isn't necessary."
—DR. CALDWELL

Tells Girls and Women to Avoid "Physics"

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many women had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, sallow skin, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every day or two was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

RAILROAD PLANS LARGE SCALE BUS SERVICE IN EAST

New York, New Haven & Hartford to Run New England Lines Through $1,000,000 Subsidiary.

Railroad and electric transportation men are watching with interest the experiment of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad through its subsidiary organization, the New England Transportation Co., capitalized for $1,000,000, in operating the motor busses on a larger scale than does any other railroad.

The New Haven is among the first 150 railroads to plan operation of busses as substitutes for unpaying train service or as feeders from communities not served by steam trains.

Problem an Economic One.

The million dollar experiment is being viewed as an economic problem, the results of which may determine future action of other roads throughout the country, whether a railroad company, financially strong, can compete against independent bus operators, trolley lines or whether bus operation will be controlled in this country by a few large railroads, or by small independent operators is yet to be determined.

The New Haven, to furnish transportation to 6,000,000 people, the combined population of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, must prove its ability to handle mass transportation, as against the power of 61 independent bus companies operating 300 busses on routes aggregating 1010 miles of highway in Connecticut. The New Haven plans four bus routes 200 miles long in Connecticut and has applied for 10 routes in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Passengers Deserting Rails.

Bus operation by railroads seems to be the most economical means of transportation for communities without adequate transit facilities but which do not furnish sufficient patronage to make rail operation a profitable investment. Adequate bus transportation instead of train operation at approximately one-fourth the cost of steam transit, is the gist of the New Haven bus experiment.

A. P. Russell, vice president of the New Haven, describes the bus operation plan as follows:

"As an extension of and in connection with rail service, making connection with important trains.

"Parallel with and as feeders to rail service, thus enabling rail service to be scheduled rapidly.

"To filling of rail schedule in communications where highway operation is justified but where passenger traffic is too light or freight trucking too heavy to justify gasoline rail cars.

"To a highway service connecting rail service, so far as practicable, between certain populous centers where rails handle passenger travel, but between which the construction of new or improved highways has now created a situation in which the use of the motor coach offers the only means of regaining former revenues."

Loses 8,000,000 Passengers.

Improved highways and motor car popularity probably caused the New Haven to operate busses. Passenger revenue on this road dropped off 24 per cent last year. As compared to income during 1924. As compared with traffic in 1923, the New Haven actually lost 8,000,000 passengers in 1924.

Thirty-seven busses have been acquired to date by the New Haven. Twelve of these are Macks and the balance divided among several other makes.

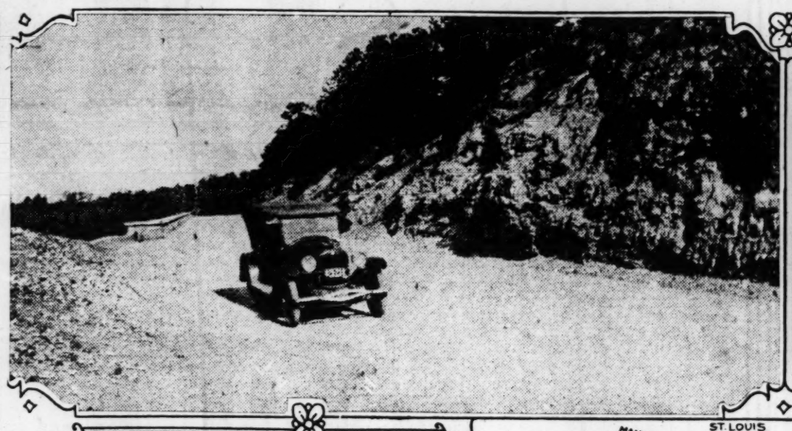
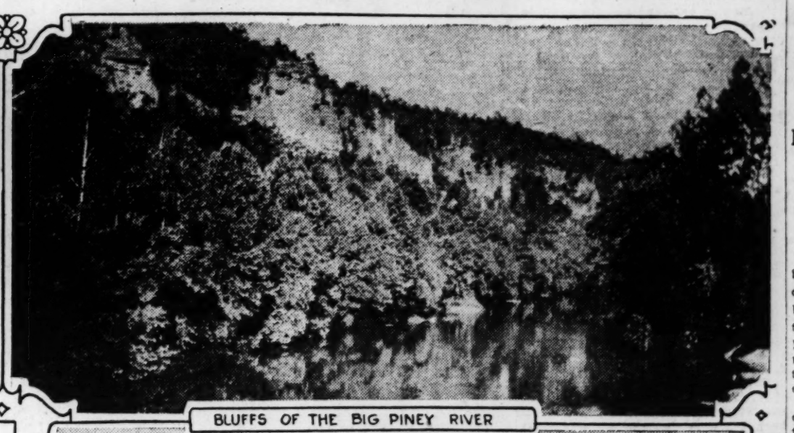
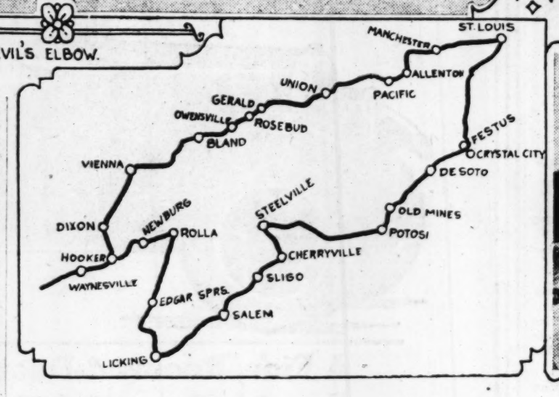
Tour to Steelville, Salem and Waynesville-Vienna Region



ROUNDING A CURVE ON THE DEVIL'S ELBOW.



BLUFFS OF THE BIG PINEY RIVER



By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

A BIRD quivered in the smooth yellow road as Skidamaree skipped northward. Its bright head dipped to the ground for an instant, then it soared away into the brilliant blue sky with a long, black thing wriggling in its beak. It was an eagle with a luckless snake.

This happened in sight of the orange and black sign marking the crossing of the Pulaski-Maries County line and State highway No. 28. The road was unexcelled, traversing a plateau surrounded by high, rugged hills. The countryside shone with the sunlit green of mountain trees and only tiny, spotless clouds specked the rare blue of the heavens. Here and there a tree glowed from the first pangs of frost.

Only the one eagle lighted before Skidamaree (that Detroit-born veteran of many Post-Dispatch tours on this trip), but for mile after mile the Ozarks spread their glories for the driver's eyes.

Tour Covers 400 Miles.

This tour, covering nearly 400 miles, took in favorite vacation and week-end centers of Missouri's playground, Salem, Waynesville and Vienna being the far points. Unfortunately, some of the roads are not yet good for all-weather driving, but the trip is feasible within several days after heavy rain. Soon the foliage will be ablaze with autumn color. This country is the home of the saddle horse still and its inhabitants are the sort of folk who wave in friendly fashion to strangers.

Start out on this trip by the familiar route of the Lemay Ferry road and State highway No. 8 to De Soto. Take No. 21 from De Soto to Potosi; it is acceptable to excellent gravel. Potosi is 70 miles distant in the fringe of the real Ozark land. Turn west there on No. 62, which is being improved for the 35 miles to Steelville.

There is a fine, new bridge over a creek 7.2 miles out of Potosi. The old ford over the Courtois River remains in use 18.8 miles out, but 26.3 miles out Huzzah Creek has been bridged with a substantial affair of wooden beams forming wheel ways which can be utilized only by automobiles. The surroundings are attractive—a pool of clear water, a bubbling rapids, shady hills and a general air of peace.

No. 62, the best way to Rolla, now is excellent going in spots, never very bad, narrow in stretches, with rising and falling grades like a scenic railway sometimes. About a dozen fords at the east end have been eliminated recently by light culverts. There is a rough and muddy down grade just west of the Courtois, after a rain,

NEW BRIDGE ON GRAVOIS ROAD TO BE OPENED OCT. 17

New Detour for Paving to Flat River - East St. Louis Subway on No. 3 to Be Open Today.

October 17 has been set by the State highway engineers as the date for opening to traffic the new bridge on the Gravois road over the Meramec River at Fenton. Meanwhile motorists are using the new concrete to the river, but must turn off the pavement and use the old bridge into Fenton.

Because of deep mud after rain on the detour south of Festus on the new concrete to Flat River on Highway No. 9, a new detour is recommended. To use it, motorists should go south on highway No. 25 from Festus and then west to the point where the pavement is opened to traffic. A detour is still necessary from this pavement at Bonne Terre to the old road and then south to Desloge and Flat River.

The eastern side of the subway under construction on Illinois State highway No. 3 at the East St. Louis City limits is scheduled to be opened to traffic today. The western section probably will not be opened for another two weeks. With the subway virtually completed and the opening last Thursday of a short strip of pavement between New Providence and White Hall, Highway No. 3 will be paved from East St. Louis north through Alton and Jerseyville to Jacksonville, and south to Chester.

Except for an eight-mile section of dirt between New Athens and Lenzburg, State Highway No. 13 is paved from East St. Louis through Belleville to Sparta, a distance of 50 miles. The pavement was opened Friday.

Every day sees more Jewetts on the road. Every day our new plant—the most modern in the industry—is taxed to meet the growing demand for this quality car—at moderate price!

The greatest coach value on today's market! Because of performance that cannot be described. It must be experienced! Because of roominess that appeals instantly to all who sit in Jewett Coach. Because of artistry in design—color—refinements. That's why we say "Never a car like this—never such value."

You Want This Comfort!

And what comfort it is! A longer car—made so for improved riding quality. Take any road—at your natural speed. Jewett Coach will do it restfully. And roomy too—like most big sedans—without their bulk. Room to enter and leave without disturbing those in front.

Many Important Improvements

A new air-cleaner adds years of service—insures clean air—clean oil—clean cylinders. Greater freedom from carbon, scored cylinders, worn bearings—increased motor life are the results. Light switch is conveniently at hand on the steering gear. Indirect lighting on the dash eliminates glare. Gear shift and emergency brake levers are moved forward to provide clear floor space in front—and many other improvements.

Smoother Than Ever!

When you drive—then only can you appreciate what an engineering achievement this car really is—smoother—quieter than ever. It even surpasses Jewett performance of the past. And the country knows what that was.

Months ago our sales reached a new high peak because of Jewett Coach.

Today—that success is repeating itself in doubled volume—because of the improved Jewett Coach. And because of its remarkable value. If comfort is what you are seeking—and of course it is; if a new and utterly different type of performance interests you, and we think it does—then by all means have a Jewett Coach demonstration. # THIRD ASSEMBLY LINE AT CHEVROLET PLANT

Factory in St. Louis Working at High Pressure to Step Up Production.

Another assembly line has just been put into use in the great Chevrolet plant at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, making three assembly lines working full blast and overtime. For some time the two assembly lines in use have been overcrowded, one being devoted to passenger cars only, while the other was used for putting out closed models and trucks.

The new line will be used for commercial cars, while both the old lines will be devoted to passenger cars. It is in the south wing of the plant.

One day last week 750 Chevrolet cars were assembled and loaded, and all were shipped the same night. In the period found 4 p. m. Saturday, Aug. 31, to 4 p. m. the following Monday, 1274 cars were shipped. The plant is continually close to the assembling record, and with the new line at work may set a new record any day.

Installation of the new line makes it possible to increase production of Chevrolet commercial cars and trucks from 38 to 50 to 55 an hour.

The local plant is assembling as many, if not more cars than any other Chevrolet plant in the country.

NEW CARBURETION DEVICE SAID TO INCREASE MILEAGE

A new device for increasing gasoline mileage is being introduced under the name of Wesco by the Western Specialty Co. of Sioux Falls, S. D. The manufacturer states that motorists who have used it claim records as high as 50 miles to the gallon on Overland and Ford cars.

The device acts on a simple principle of automatically controlling the mixture of gas and air to insure at all times much more perfect combustion than with ordinary carburetion. It is said greatly to increase power on hills and to give improved acceleration, and in cold weather operation to do away with need of hot spots and pre-heating devices.

It is said the device can be attached by anyone in a few minutes and requires no tapping or drilling of motor or carburetor.

Packard Fuelizer Makes 'Gas' Be Good

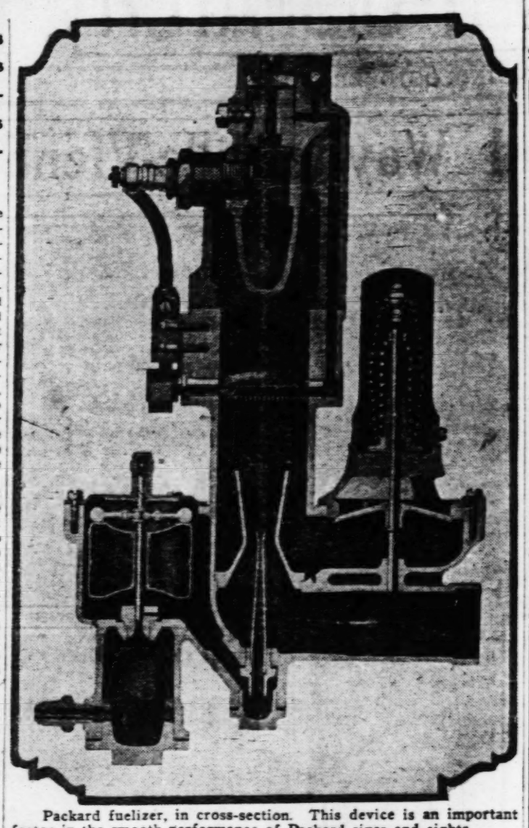
Device, Exclusive to This Make of Car, Changes Gasoline Into More Combustible Fuel, Saves Waste and Increases Engine Power.



Packard fuelizer, in cross-section. This device is an important factor in the smooth performance of Packard sixes and eights.

Among outstanding automobile inventions is the Packard fuelizer, which changes today's low-grade gasoline into a more completely combustible fuel and thereby saves waste and increases engine power. The device is used on both Packard single six and straight eight. It changes the wet mixture of gasoline vapor and air that ordinarily comes from a carburetor into a drier gas that is exploded by the spark more rapidly, burns more fully, and so tends to lessen spark plug fouling, cylinder and piston carbonizing and seepage of unexploded gasoline past the piston rings into the crank case oil.

A bit of gasoline is sucked from the main carburetor through the fuelizer vaporizer which mixes it with air. Then the mixture goes into the fuelizer chamber, that is on top of the intake manifold through which goes the main flow of gasoline to the cylinders. The mixture that goes into the fuelizer chamber is ignited by a special spark plug in such a way that it burns instead of exploding and so heats the intake manifold so as to dry the main flow of gasoline and air. After circulating through the fuelizer chamber, it spurts through two tiny holes into the manifold, further drying the main flow of mixture to the engine. By the time the mixture in the main intake manifold has passed through the heat created by the fuelizer chamber and also has absorbed the superheated exhaust from the fuelizer, it is so dry that it is as near to perfect fuel as has been created.

The suction from the pistons that draws gas into the cylinders from the carburetor also keeps a steady flow of gasoline and air moving through the fuelizer. As the circulation of gas through the fuelizer begins below the butterfly valve and exhausts above it, the degree to which the fuelizer heats the main gas and air mixture in the intake manifold is regulated by the way that valve is operated. When the valve is closed, engine suction is heavy through the fuelizer, which then receives a maximum of gas and gives off its maximum of heat. The further the valve is opened, the less is the engine suction through the fuelizer because it is easier for the engine to suck in mixture through the main manifold. Thus heat given off by the fuelizer is automatically increased or decreased in proportion to the increasing or decreasing need of the engine for heat. This is especially true in cold weather.

In normal operation the fuelizer uses about 3 per cent of the engine's consumption of gasoline. Its automatic character prevents waste of fuel in warm weather or under favorable engine conditions.

In a way, the most interesting part of the fuelizer is its moulded Pyrex glass inspection plate through which the motorist may see at any time if the device is working properly.

STUDEBAKER HAS EXPORT RECORD FOR HALF YEAR

More high-powered motor cars were exported by Studebaker in the first six months of 1925 than by any other automobile maker in America.

In most countries, this was despite a horsepower tax which makes ownership of cars more costly in proportion to their rated power.

In England, for example, the buyer must pay a yearly tax of £1 per rated horsepower, or about $171 on a Studebaker Big Six, on which the power rating is 34.4. The smallest of the Studebaker cars, the Standard Six, carries a tax of $129. On the other hand, the tax on cars which compete with the Standard Six runs from $81 to $100 each, ratings being from 17.3 to 23.4 horsepower.

AUTOMOBILE AWNING AMONG CAR NOVELTIES

An awning designed to fit on the sides of a car has been invented by a Denver man. A company is being organized to produce the accessory enabling motorists to enjoy fresh air and at the same time to keep out driving rain.

The Hupmobile Six Can Be Seen Today

The announcement of the new six-cylinder Hupmobile has brought hundreds to our showroom, and in order that everyone may see this wonderful new car we will be open all day today and until 10 o'clock tonight.

To members of the great Hupmobile family, to seasoned motorists who are familiar with Hupmobile traditions, this announcement of a Hupmobile Six is of more than noteworthy significance.

This announcement is historically important.

It means that now to the six-cylinder type are brought, as was so recently to eight-cylinder motoring, the superiorities of economy, endurance and reliability that have made Hupmobiles famous the world over.

You cannot afford to accept anything else that the present market offers without first inspecting this new Hupmobile Six, without personally testing its performance, without studying fully its amazing dollar value.

Bear in mind that this new Six is exclusively a Hupmobile product.

HUP EIGHT RUNS 866 MILES IN 19 HOURS

Stock Car Beats Time of Fastest Train From Hartford to Detroit, Averaging 44.79 Miles Per Hour.

Tearing through a night that included six hours in a heavy rain, T. W. Campbell, Hupmobile distributer at Hartford, Conn., and C. E. Emery, one of his organization, drove a standard stock Hupmobile eight sedan from Hartford to the Detroit ferry dock at Windsor, Ont., in 19 hours and 20 minutes elapsed time, Sept. 20 and 21. They beat the time of the fastest through limited train from New England to Windsor by more than three miles an hour. They averaged 44.79 miles an hour for the 866 miles they traveled.

The distance the car traveled is 120.5 miles further than the railroad distance from South Station, Boston, to the Michigan Central Railroad Station at Windsor.

"The record of Maj. Campbell and Mr. Emery with their Hupmobile eight is the most comprehensive test of its ability since the Hup factory completed its tests of that car last autumn before placing it on the market," says O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager of the Hup Motor Car Corp.

The car which made the trip bears the factory number E-961. It was bought by Maj. Campbell as his personal car March 11. On its arrival in Detroit it had covered some 19,800 miles.

Despite the speed at which the car was continuously driven, an average of 14.7 miles to the gallon of gasoline was made. Four quarts of oil were added to the crankcase. Actual oil consumption, as measured at the Hup factory, was less than three quarts.

TOUR TO STEELVILLE, SALEM, WAYNESVILLE AND VIENNA REGION

and a severe down grade 6.2 miles west of the stream. You begin to get that woodsy odor in this section and to see the typical Ozark people. Steelville, which is a noted resort place, is 105 miles from the city.

Auto Route to Salem.

Now our trip veers over a road with which most motorists are unfamiliar, No. 19, from Steelville to Salem, east of Dent County. Salem, reached hereetofore only by a branch railroad and wagon trails, now can be reached by car from the north in ordinary weather, or at all times from the west. No. 19 winds south through gently sloping hills, over little plateaus and past countless rail fences. As far as 4.8 miles south of Steelville it is a wide, high-speed gravel thoroughfare. From 4.8 to 6.2 there is dragged earth. From 6.2 to 8.0 there is old gravel, followed by four miles of packed but not dragged earth, passing the crossroads of Cherryville at 10.0. From 12.0 to 14.5 there is old gravel again and then a reasonably fine gravel highway runs from the Crawford-Dent County line at 17.4 to Salem at 32.3. For five miles after leaving Cherryville the route is especially winding and sylvan.

Sligo, basking in the past glories of its iron industry, is busy loading timber at 18.1. A branch of the Meramec River, only a creek here, is crossed on a motor bridge of wood and metal troughs at 21.9.

Skidamaree suffered a fracture of her speedometer shaft at Salem, so her public will have to be content with approximations of mileage for the rest of this trip, and the State figures. No. 32 is the western route from Salem to Licking, 22 miles away on No. 7 (the Rolla-Arkansas road). One of the inaccuracies of the State Highway Commission map is demonstrated by No. 32, which is shown on the map as a "completed" first-class road, but which is not really so. First, there are about seven miles of fine gravel, then five miles of sand followed by earth, with rough spots, but with considerable dragging going on. The country is thinly settled and its landscapes are in broad sweeps.

Overnight Stop at Rolla.

No. 7 has been told of before. For this trip it is followed for 35 miles from Licking north to Rolla, through interesting country and across the Little Piney River. The first five miles are graded earth with construction going on, then it is good gravel, but Skidamaree encountered some spots where the surface was worn bare, showing the need of constant maintenance work on this type of highway. Rolla, home of the State School of Mines, is reached after 190 miles from St. Louis, and is advantageous for an overnight stop.

From Rolla to Waynesville No. 14 (the St. Louis-Joplin highway) is followed. There is a poor but pretty detour of about five miles at first around a section of modern road under construction, and then there are 30 miles of unexcelled gravel speedway over hills which become more entrancing each mile. This takes the motorist through a great recreation center, crossing the Little Piney again at Arlington, skirting near Jerome and the numerous other camp and cabin resorts of the Gasconade River and crossing the Big Piney River in Pulaski County. From the high, modern bridge across this stream turtles may be seen on the bed of the clear water.

A little way beyond comes the "devil's elbow," a long, easily-ascending grade on the side of a mountain, with a steep declivity at the high point walled off with heavy masonry, and with a wide range of the Big Piney valley laid out to feast the eye. Waynesville, seat of Pulaski County, nestles quietly among the hills. Turn back after progressing that far, for seven miles along No. 14, to the junction of No. 28, a meandering link of the State system. The junction is a notable picture. No. 14 winds down hill and No. 28 winds up hill, with only a narrow strip of shrubbery between them, but a little way farther No. 28 affords a great view to the east.

From this junction to Dixon, 12 miles north, is one of the most delightful sections in all the Ozarks. The hills are big, the woods are thick and old and undisturbed by man, and the region is bisected by the wandering Gasconade and its green and white cliffs. Except for a few stretches of earth which holds no terrors the road to Dixon is good gravel.

From Dixon to Vienna, seat of Maries County, is 20 miles on No. 28. For about eight miles there runs Missouri's typical broad gravel speedway and it was on this stretch that the eagle crossed Skidamaree's path. Beyond, the road is narrower, but good gravel.

Vienna is another railroadless county seat. One must remember that Missouri is not Italy and Missourians believe in an I for an I; Vienna is "Vy-enna" and Maries is "Mary's." (Similarly Courtois River is "Curdaway" and the accent goes on the "Mad" in New Madrid.)

Just east of Vienna the Gasconade is crossed again and then the land becomes less rugged and more devoted to farming. What's worse, the 43 miles from Vienna to Rosebud are nearly all hard, rutty earth, which is somewhat rough in dry weather and requires chains and careful steering in wet. The eastern part is the worst, in spite of gravel spots, but some construction work has been started.

Rosebud is the junction of No. 28 and No. 12 (the St. Louis-Jefferson City-Kansas City highway). No. 12 is an old story with new variations. It has become rough from Rosebud to Leslie, fine from Leslie to a point five miles west of Union and rough into Union, with a mile and a half of hard going over grading work. There are 15 acceptable miles from Union to Gray's Summit, then a detour of about 15 miles, through Pacific and Allenton, to the concrete of Manchester road and smooth driving homeward.

There are some alternatives. No. 7 is good north of Vienna to No. 12, near Jefferson City, and on to Columbia, where No. 2 may be chosen home. No. 45 may be picked up north of Rosebud for Hermann, where the Missouri River may be ferried for a county road to No. 2 or a county road taken to Washington. There is another county road from Union to Washington, where there is a ferry of No. 47 to Warrenton on No. 2.

What's New in Cars

NEW CHANDLER MODELS SHOWN HERE WITH PRICE CUTS RANGING TO $505

NEW 1926 Chandler six cars announced today embody notable developments in closed car body types and important chassis improvements, with price reductions on all models ranging as high as $505. The Lewis Automobile Co., 4700 Washington boulevard, which distributes Chandlers, expects so much interest in the new models and big price cuts that it will keep its showrooms open Sundays and evenings.

A handsome new full-sized four-door sedan, named the Twentieth Century sedan and listing at $1490 at factory, is the feature car. The development of this four-door sedan at coach price is the culmination of extended experiments to work out an ideal closed body.

Chandler six prices at the factory have been reduced as follows: Twentieth Century sedan, by $505 from $1995 to $1490; metropolitan sedan de luxe, by $400 from $2195 to $1795; 7-passenger sedan, by $400 from $2295 to $1895; brougham (2-door, 5-passenger), by $350 from $2045 to $1695; Comrade roadster, by $100 from $1795 to $1695; sport touring, by $100 from $1595 to $1495, and 7-passenger touring, by $140 from $1735 to $1595.

Believes Four-Door Ultimate Type.

The Twentieth Century sedan is finished in Duco, and is colored a deep lustrous black for the upper deck, with dustproof, Buckingham gray below. A ¾-inch bead goes around body and hood. A fine grade of broadcloth is used in trimming throughout. Standard equipment includes full size balloon tires, V. V. one-piece clear vision windshield, with windshield wiper, rear vision mirror, and a convenient smoking set. The position of the driver's seat sets a new comfort standard.

All Closed Cars Reduced.

Other fine closed cars are the two-door five-passenger brougham, at $1695, finished in sagebrush green duco and trimmed in high-grade mohair; metropolitan sedan de luxe, at $1795, in two-tone brown duco, upholstered in high quality mohair; and the greatly enlarged seven-passenger sedan at $1895, finished in dark blue duco, with trimming in high quality mohair fabric.

The open cars include the Comrade roadster in blue and buff duco, at $1695, trimmed in dark gray Spanish leather, with a roomy rumble seat in the rear deck for extra passengers; a five-passenger sport touring in gray-green duco at $1495, and a seven-passenger touring, at $1595, also finished in gray-green duco. Both touring cars are upholstered in black long-grained leather.

All the new 1926 models continue the distinctively three-paneled nickeled radiator shell, patterned after the latest trend in European practice, which was recently adopted by the Chandler company.

The Chandler chassis, already nationally famous for its hill-climbing performance, is constantly winning new laurels. On Labor day it won the world's highest automobile climb up Pike's Peak and established a new record, 17 minutes, 48 2-5 seconds. Early last spring, at Culver City, Chandler performed a phenomenal feat, running 1000 miles in 889 minutes, averaging 56.9 miles an hour.

Naturally, on such a chassis, there are properly no changes in basic design. The Pike's Peak motor, introduced in 1923, has been developed to high efficiency. Yet minor improvements have been made which insure smoother, more silent and more economical operation.

Larger Manifold Adopted.

The new enlarged manifold has had an impressive effect on the performance of the car. It eliminates power noises.

Changes made in the intake manifold have brought quicker starting, quicker warming up, less tendency to load, better distribution when cold, less loss of power in summer and much greater economy.

The new clutch is a great improvement. Women can operate it continuously with light pressure on the pedal and no fatigue. Friction surfaces have been reduced from four to two. Clutch-throwout rollers have been replaced by a new type of throwout with inserted steel blocks, eliminating tendency to rattle.

The new flexible Chandler steering gear, developed for four-wheel brakes and balloon tires, has a patented flexible coupling in the steering column that gives greater ease of steering and obviates road shock from the steering wheel.

A new type of spring suspension involves new spring specifications. A patented device on the spring shackles takes out annoying chassis rattles and has an automatic take-up.

The traffic transmission, introduced by the Chandler company two years ago, has been perfected until it is practically wearproof and breakproof.

Attention was directed by J. D. Perry Lewis of the Lewis Automobile Co. to the Chandler system of four-wheel brakes. "The action is smooth at all times, regardless of the amount of pressure," he said. "They do not grab on a soft application, nor chatter on a severe one. The braking operation in no way affects the steering, nor does the steering compromise the braking."

FORD RUNABOUT IS GREATLY IMPROVED IN APPEARANCE

ONE of the most notable changes in the Ford cars is in the improved runabout. The streamline body, which includes, in one sweep, the radiator, hood, cowl, tonneau and gracefully sloping rear deck, gives the lines of a sport model. The entire effect of the runabout is low, an effect accentuated by the low windshield, the bottom line of which conforms to the shape of the cowl. Fenders are wide and hung close to the wheels.

Riding comfort is insured by specially designed low seats and back rests. A door is provided at the driver's left, permitting easy entry or exit. The gasoline tank, which is under the cowl, may be filled without disturbing driver or passenger. The sediment bulb is under the hood and easy of access. The transmission brake drum and bands have been increased in size. The rear wheel brake also is larger. Storm curtains open with the doors and are held in place by rigid uprights.

How the New Hup Six Looks

The sedan model of the new Hupmobile six line which has just been announced by the Weber Implement and Automobile Co.

NEW GENERAL MOTORS CAR TO BE BUILT AS COMPANION TO PRESENT OAKLAND SIX

GENERAL Motors is planning a new automobile which will be produced and distributed by its Oakland motor car division as companion to the present Oakland six. The space for building this new car is available in the Oakland factory at Pontiac, Mich., because the Fisher Body Co. has erected a $2,000,000 building in Pontiac in which to build all Oakland bodies. The program with regard to this new car has not advanced sufficiently for General Motors to make public at this time prices and specifications, it is stated. The Oakland six is distributed in St. Louis by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., of which E. A. Hatfield is president.

NEW STUDEBAKER SIX SEDAN MODEL ARRIVES IN ST. LOUIS

A NEW Studebaker Big Six sedan, with 120-inch wheel base instead of the standard 127-inch, and priced at $2365 delivered, is being shown by the Weber Motor Car Co., Studebaker distributer here. The new model is the five-passenger type and the lightest built by Studebaker on the big six chassis. Woodwork is in walnut, inlaid with holly around the doors, and the upholstery is mohair, while hardware is in silver. Balloon tires are standard, and the sedan comes fully equipped, including motometer and bumpers. According to the Studebaker factory, the new sedan was designed with special reference to ease of handling in traffic and parking.

NEW BODY TYPE OFFERED IN LATEST VELIE COUPE

A THREE passenger coupe in duotone blue Duco is the third new body type to be introduced by Velie Motors Corporation of Moline, Ill., and the Benjamin Motor Co., local distributer, during recent weeks. It is mounted on the standard Velie chassis of 118-inch wheel base on which hydraulic four-wheel brakes and balloon tires are standard, and is powered by the Velie-built full-force-feed lubrication motor.

The new coupe is low hung and symmetrical in appearance. Curved steel visor is built integral with roof. Laundalet bow in black, nickeled at the imitation joint, contrasts with the black leatherette of the top. Windshield is of one-piece ventilating type. Cowl ventilator is opearted from beneath the dash. Automatic windshield wiper, rear vision mirror and transmission lock are standard equipment.

Upholstery is of grained blue Spanish leather with headlining of matched broadcloth. Instrument board is in black with garnish rails to match. Speedometer, ammeter and oil gauge are under glass in a single panel of satin silver—indirectly lighted by a lamp concealed within the panel.

Finish is of duotone Duco, light blue below a black molding running from radiator shell to lower edge of rear deck, and above a black molding which encircles the body at bottom of superstructure from windshield pillar to windshield pillar. Space between the molding, top of cowl and hood is in dark blue. There is a stripe of imitation gold below the upper and above the lower molding. The new coupe lists at $1425 at Moline. First shipments began on Sept. 15.

NEW SEDAN TYPE TAXICAB HAS A SLEEVE VALVE ENGINE

RATIFICATION of the merger between the Yellow Cab Manufacturing Co. and the General Motors Truck Co., brings announcement of a new and radically different type of taxicab, designed in response to general demand for more luxurious taxicab service. This vehicle is in production and deliveries are being made. Changes in the new type O-5 Yellow Cab, which is known as the "Mile Merchant" model, are a fully enclosed driver's compartment, giving the vehicle the appearance of a sedan, and a larger, roomier passenger compartment seating 6 persons. The cab is powered with a 4-cylinder yellow Knight sleeve valve engine, manufactured in the company's plant at East Moline, Ill. The wheelbase has been increased from 109 to 114 inches, although turning radius remains the same. Rubber shock insulators, adopted more than two years ago, are continued. Other improvements include balloon tires, air cleaner and throttle controlled oil pressure.

NEW HUPMOBILE SIX SHOWN IN ST. LOUIS HAS VIBRATION DAMPER

THE new Hup six, whose advent has been awaited for months by the automotive industry, has arrived in St. Louis and is being shown by the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., Locust and Nineteenth street. The Hup six, which is to be a companion to the Hup straight eight, is made at present in sedan and touring car models. It embodies the 17 years' experience of the Hupmobile organization in building automobiles, and is a stylish, powerful, smoothly performing car, priced at $1497 for the sedan delivered and $1437 for the touring car delivered. Both models come fully equipped with motometer, bumpers, bumperettes and extra tire.

Unusually speedy and powerful acceleration is said to be a characteristic of the new Hup six. The car is described as follows: "Smooth power is a fundamental goodness of the Hupmobile L-head six-cylinder engine with its 2¼-inch bore and 4¼-inch stroke. The combustion chambers have been designed to produce the highest degree of power that can be combined with utmost smoothness, and cylinder heads are machined to the precise limit of .005-inch. This means that the combustion chambers are of uniform size and that each, taking the same fuel charge, delivers a uniform explosion, which means exceptional smoothness.

"A special intake manifold of Hupmobile design also contributes to the engine's smooth power. Other factors are the heavy and balanced crankshaft, the accurately balanced reciprocating parts and the vibration damper.

"This damper, mounted and driven from the hub at the extreme front end of the crankshaft, consists of two steel discs fastened together, enclosing friction and pressure distributing plates. Clutch-like springs between the plates allow the discs to slip slightly if there are any minute deflections or 'shivers' in the shaft when it is rotating at high speed. This slipping action, however, is counteracted by the friction between the plates, which immediately compensates for or stops any vibratory motion of the shaft, and thus forestalls any tendency toward whip or distortion that might develop. Pistons and connecting rods are balanced also. The pistons are of special, permanent mold, light cast, of gray iron and each weighs only 19 ounces.

The cylinder block and crank case are cast in one piece of good grade of cylinder iron. The four bronze-backed, babbitt-lined, removable, main bearings of generous size are machined in one operation to insure proper alignment. All pistons and connecting rods can be removed through the bottom of the crankcase. The cylinder head is detachable. Removal of two plates on the right side of the engine exposes valves and valve lifters and permits examination of the cam shaft. The cam shaft is driven by silent chains.

Details of Construction.

Fuel mixture is heated by a hot spot at the "Y" of the intake manifold, and passes through large passages with square corners that break up fuel particles, delivering a highly turbulent and combustible mixture to the cylinders. The water pump is on the front of the cylinder block and is driven by the fan belt. Its shaft is of stainless iron. Lubrication of the engine is pressure to the bearings, and spray to camshaft, cylinder walls, valves and pistons. The oil pan and strainer can be cleaned swithout removing the part.

The clutch is single plate. The wheel base is 114 inches, and the semi-elliptic springs total 91 inches in length, while the rigid frame has been further strengthened by a channel cross member and four tubular cross members."

Four-wheel brakes and balloon tires are standard, as are rebound snubbers on front wheels.

The Hup six sedan—a four-door model—is finished in green Duco and upholstered in gray brougham cloth, vision, ventilating windshield. The touring car also is in green Duco.

The Weber Implement & Automobile Co. reports that it already has orders for 60 sample Hup sixes and 34 retail orders, all sent to it before anyone outside the factory had seen the car. One of its Illinois dealers has 16 orders for the Hup six "sight unseen."

ELLS PART SERVICE PLAYS IN AUTO SALES

Edward Weber Addresses Service Station Managers Bureau in St. Louis.

Edward Weber, president of the Weber Motor Car Co. and a director of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Service Managers' Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association at the Claridge Hotel Thursday.

Mr. Weber went into detail as to the real duties of the manager of service for an automobile concern, indicating his belief that the principal function of a service manager was to keep the customer pleased with the service and with the firm that sold the automobile. He said more sales of automobiles were made through the back door than through the front, as it was the back door of an automobile establishment that kept the customer satisfied with his car and a booster for it.

R. D. West of the Wagner Electric Corporation told the service managers how to keep in repair and working condition the new hydraulic brakes, particularly the Lockheed now used on a number of cars.

Fred H. Strupe of the Burnham-Kington Co., explained the mechanisms and purposes of the oil filter and strainer manufactured by his company.

Richard I. Taylor, chief adjuster for the American Automobile Insurance Co., said that most delays in the settlement of insurance policies for collision claims were due to the fact that owners of cars attempted to make the insurance company pay for reapirs that were not incident to the accident to the car. He said the insurance companies checked bills for repairs minutely and refused payment of unfair claims.

He cited as an instance a car whose right front wheel was broken against a curb, but the owner attempted to make the insurance company pay for grinding the valves and putting new parts in the carburetor.

He said insurance companies were prompt in settling claims when just, but just as prompt to fight them if unfair.

Thirty-eight service managers attended the meeting, representing a number of automobile firms. J. O. Lowell of the Vesper Auto Co., presided. Weber was introduced to the meeting by Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association.

Advises Against Cutting Off Ignition on the Hills

Paige Engineering Staff Declares Engine Should Be Left Running and Car Be Put in Second or Low Gear.

"To take a steep descent in safety, shift to second gear, but do not cut off the ignition," engineers of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. advise. They also counsel ignoring official signs, posted by some state highway departments at the top of bad hills, instructing motorists to switch off ignition. Cutting off the spark, the Paige company asserts, is detrimental to the engine and a real source of danger, besides being of no advantage. The advice is sound, declares H. Claude Merry, manager of the Wilson Motor Car Co.

"If you take a long descent with the spark off, the fuel mixture passes through the engine unexploded," the Paige company says. "The engine cools rapidly, and the fuel mixture condenses in the cylinders. The result is liquid gasoline in each cylinder, which not only removes the oil from the bearing surfaces, but dilutes the oil in the crankcase. Furthermore, when the spark is turned on again, an explosion in the muffler, with resulting damage, is probable.

"The actual danger from cutting off the spark is that the driver cannot instantly avail himself of the engine's power should occasion arise requiring quick acceleration to avoid accident. In an emergency, the driver has no time to reach for the switch, even if he remembers that the spark is off, and his instinctive use of the accelerator fails to give that quick increase in speed needed to avoid a mishap.

"There is no advantage in cutting off the ignition in descending hills. The additional braking power it gives the engine is negligible, and it does not save gasoline, though some drivers labor under the delusion that just because the engine is not working, it is not using fuel. Of course, as long as the engine is turning over, it is drawing gasoline mixture into the cylinders, but with the spark off, the gasoline is a source of damage instead of power.

"The braking power of the engine, due to the inertia of the moving parts and to the compression, is sufficient to control the speed of the car in second gear on steep hills, while in low gear it will hold the car on any highway grade."

VISITING FORD TOUR FLIERS USE RICKENBACKER CARS

Ten Rickenbacker cars, from the Rickenbacker St. Louis Co., were used by aviators and passengers of the 16 airplanes in the Ford commercial reliability air tour during their stay in the city last Thursday. Following the arrival of the planes from Kansas City and luncheon, the aviators were taken to hotels in the Rickenbacker cars. Owing to late arrivals of the planes, a scheduled auto tour of the city was not held.

BRIGGS TO BUILD APARTMENT FOR FAMILIES WITH BABIES

Walter O. Briggs, president of the Briggs Manufacturing Co., of Detroit, one of the world's largest manufacturers of closed automobile bodies, plans to erect a 16-family apartment building to cost over $500,000. These modern apartments are to be rented only to families who have babies under five years old. Also this unusual real estate venture is to be operated on a nonprofit producing basis for the owner.

The new apartment is the outgrowth of Briggs' experience a few years ago when he found it almost impossible to rent a high grade apartment because there were some small babies in his family.

EXCEPTIONAL RIDING COMFORT

The riding comfort of a motor car is not dependent upon its length, weight or cost, any more than the comfort of a home depends upon its size.

If the seats are deep enough and the proper distance from the floor; if the seat backs are correctly pitched for relaxation; if the upholstery is sufficiently stuffed and there is plenty of leg room; above all, if the springs are rightly designed and of proper length, you will have exceptional riding comfort. Otherwise, you will not.

Dodge Brothers, with characteristic thoroughness, studied and experimented with these details for years. Their findings were ultimately incorporated in the design of Dodge Brothers Motor Car—without question now a vehicle that ranks with the first in this vitally important feature

AUTO TAXES IN 1924 WERE $636,442,336

A. A. A. Compiles Federal, State and City Figures in Campaign for Repeal.

Federal, State and municipal taxes totalling $636,442,336 were paid in 1924 by automobile owners in this country on the purchase, ownership and operation of their cars, according to figures compiled by the American Automobile Association in the campaign to obtain relief for motorists through abolition of the Federal excise tax in the next session of Congress.

The figures are based on returns by the Internal Revenue Bureau, and computations made by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Bureau of Public Roads, the National Grange and the A. A. A. That 1925 totals will be even higher is the opinion of officials of these organizations.

The following table shows the division of taxes paid by the automobile owner among three taxing agencies:

HUDSON-ESSEX EARNINGS IN YEAR LIKELY TO EQUAL ITS MANUFACTURING ASSETS

Production of More Than Quarter Million Cars in 1925 Appears to Be Certainty.

The extraordinary effect that volume production and low prices can produce is unusually well illustrated by the fact that third quarter earnings of the Hudson Motor Car Co. totaled $4,926,554, and bring the net for the nine months ended Aug. 31 to $16,722,260. As a result it is predicted that earnings for the year will exceed the assets employed in the car manufacturing end of the business at the beginning of the year. These assets on Nov. 30, 1924, amounted to $20,700,000, after deduction of outside investments. The Hudson-Essex plant now seems certain to show net profits in excess of this figure. In other words, Hudson will make more than 100 per cent this year on the capital involved in its operations.

The company has produced more than 200,000 Hudson and Essex cars to date in 1925, the highest output for any year in its history. Production is at the rate of more than 1200 cars a day, and it is probable that production for 1925 will be double the 1924 figure. September production will run between 27,500 and 30,000.

NEW HANDLE LIFT FOR AUTO WINDOWS BUILT

A new model combination door closing and window lift will be introduced by the Rawlings Co. and is to be fitted on the Lincoln, Locomobile, Marmon, Flint and Sterling-Knight cars. The device is operated by a handle, which when raised causes the window to rise and when released causes the window to stop.

ALL CHEVROLET DEALERS IN ST. LOUIS VOTE TO USE G. M. C. FINANCING PLAN

The new General Motors retail time payment plan for selling automobiles, which is said to offer the lowest financing rates in this country, was unanimously adopted by the Chevrolet dealers of St. Louis at a meeting Tuesday night at the Chevrolet plant.

The meeting, which was called by Frank A. Flint, president of the St. Louis Chevrolet Dealers' Association, was addressed by W. A. Blees, who has charge of the workings of the plan for the Chevrolet division of General Motors. Blees discussed use of the plan, told how it should help to sell cars, and explained how it covered fire and theft insurance as well as financing charges.

Incidentally, a buyer of a Chevrolet also can get liability and collision insurance through the financing plan, which already has resulted in large savings to car purchasers.

H. K. Bragle, regional sales promotion representative, discussed plans for the fall Chevrolet selling campaign, especially the October drive which will include placing in every Chevrolet dealer's showroom of a display of photographs which take one through the Chevrolet factory, showing every step in the production of a Chevrolet car. The plans invloves invitations to everyone in the city to see the display at the dealers' places of business.

INDEPENDENT REPAIR SHOPS ARE DEFENDED

Manager of Associated Auto Service Companies Bespeaks Co-Operation.

It occurs to us that some reply should be made to the statements made by Mr. E. T. Ustick Jr., president of the Rickenbacker St. Louis Co. in your edition of Sunday, Sept 27, on the subject, "Supposing In Repair Shop Costly."

There would have been no occasion for replying to this article if Mr. Ustick had qualified his remarks somewhat, or had completed his story so that if, perchance motor car owners' attention was called to this article, they would not be misled by the subject matter.

First, Mr. Ustick might truthfully have said the same kind of an accident which occurred to the motor which he described is just as likely to happen in the service station of the dealer or distributor as it is in the independent repair shop, under all conditions, except where a man thoroughly trained and familiar with the details of design and construction has immediate personal supervision over the work.

Discusses Mechanics.

Any implication that the car owner receives the services of experts in the service station of the dealer and distributor is based either upon ignorance of the actual situation, lack of experience, or an attempt to mislead the reader. Automobile mechanics are secured by the distributor and dealer service stations from the same sources that mechanics come from who are employed by the independent service companies. They are not specially trained, nor specially qualified, except in rare exceptions, to work with greater efficiency on one car than another. If they concentrate on one car for a considerable length of time, then they do become expert. Such of these mechanics as stay in a service station throughout a considerable period soon pass to the position of foreman or inspector, and do not often engage in the actual mechanical work in repair operations.

Quoting from Mr. Ustick's article, "Nothing like this could have happened if the owner had taken his car to a Rickenbacker service station." This statement merely speaks well for the author's confidence in his own organization, which we hope is entirely justified. All of us know that there are just as many "bulls" made in one shop as another and instances could be recorded without number where dealers service stations have been guilty of all of the things described.

Automobile machinery is so well standardized these days that a qualified automobile mechanic has no material difficulty in diagnosing troubles in practically any type or model of car. Having located the trouble, there may be times when the work can be done in less time in a dealers or distributors service station because of some items of specialized equipment. It is not fair to conclude that because this is a fact the work is always done better.

Urges Co-operation.

Accurate statistics indicate that of the total amount of motor car maintenance in the United States, in the neighborhood of 70 per cent is being done by independent automobile repair shops. By independent we mean having no cars for sale and no alliances with car distributors, except for the possible friendly relations in the extension of trade courtesies. The independent automobile repair company is, and, in the writer's judgment, will continue to be, a permanent factor in the automobile industry.

The automobile distributor or dealer with his service station and the independent automobile repair shop have one common problem, as to how best the motor car may be taken care of so the owner, through greater motoring satisfaction, may be influenced to spend his money more graciously and in increasing amounts. It would seem logical, therefore, that an automobile dealer and distributor should follow the interests and activities of the car owner to the point of establishing co-operation with the legitimate independent service company. Through this policy there would develop a mutual interest directed toward the most efficient service to the car owner.

The writer, who has personally directed the work of both a retail and wholesale sales agency for more than 15 years, during which time contracts have been held with leading manufacturers of both popular and high-priced cars, speaks from a reasonably accurate knowledge of actual conditions in the trade. He has long since lost the illusion that there is any separate plane of business life for any particular branch of the trade interested in either the sale or maintenance of automotive equipment. The manufacturer, distributor, dealer, repair company, battery station, radiator shop, tire shop, grinder, welder and all factors in the trade should strive toward one common objective—that the owner of automotive equipment shall secure the most satisfactory return from his investment.

In conclusion, the writer would recommend that Mr. Ustick, and others of like thought, first disabuse their minds relating to the perfection of the dealers service station and the imperfection of the independent repair company; second, understand and admit that neither now nor at any future time will the automobile dealer be able to service all of the cars of all his owners all the time; third, realize that there is a common point of contact between all the factors legitimately engaged in the automobile trades that should be developed in the highest possible standard of service to the car owner, and fourth, realize that the greatest pleasure and profit in business will, in a large measure, be determined by general trade co-operation. Yours truly,

J. C. THORPE,
Manager, Associated Automobile Service Companies.

RECORD TRAVEL TO EAST AND FLORIDA

Tourist Traffic to Canada and Southeast Feature of Season, Touring Bureaus Report.

An unexpected swing of tourist traffic from St. Louis to the East and Canada has featured the 1925 season, according to George Drummond, head of the touring department of the Automobile Club of Missouri. Even more pronounced has been traffic to Florida since the realty boom there.

"More motorists than ever before have gone East this season," said Drummond. "Travel north to Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota has been of about the same volume as in past year. There has been little travel by automobile westward.

"The surprises have been the travel to Canada and Florida. Last year we started the season with 250 maps of Canada, and had some left. This year we have routed more than 2300 cars to Canada.

"Since Aug. 1 fully a third of all routings outside of Missouri and Illinois have been to Florida."

BUS TIRE RUNS 21,032 MILES On ST. LOUIS-FARMINGTON LINE

A Mohawk pneumatic bus tire that ran 21,032 miles over the trying roads traversed by the St. Louis-Farmington bus is being exhibited by the Pie-Merrill Tire Co., Mohawk distributer. The tire, a 32x6-inch 10-ply, stood the pounding over the rough gravel of the bus route until it had worn down to the last two plies of fabric. The same type Mohawk tires are being used on the busses to Washington, to Pacific and to Chicago, and on the Creve Coeur and County Bus Co. lines. These buses also are using on their front wheels a 34x7.20 Mohawk balloon tire with six plies that was first tried out in St. Louis. These special balloons can not be used on the rear wheels at present because of the way the rims of the wheels are built and the fact that dual tires would be necessary. But the rear wheels of one of the busses are being fitted to take two of them.

BALLOONS ON DODGE CARS.

Balloon tires are standard equipment on all the new Dodge Brothers models, both standard and special type, except commercial cars. Each special type car at the new price includes five balloon tires.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER DRIVE HERE FROM SEATTLE

Mrs. J. C. Herbsman and daughter, of Seattle, stopped at the Spalding Motor Co. in St. Louis Thursday en route in their Flint "55" sedan from the coast to Miami, Fla. They reported no mechanical trouble whatsoever, though they encountered mud in Nebraska so deep and thick that Miss Herbsman had continually to dig it from between fenders and wheels so that the car could proceed. Alternating at the wheel, they came over the Oregon Trail to Salt Lake City, the Lincoln highway to Lincoln, Neb., then to Kansas City and through Missouri to St. Louis.

ORDINANCE PLANNED TO TAX AUTO REPAIR SHOPS

The Associated Automobile Service Companies of St. Louis are preparing an ordinance to be introduced in the Board of Aldermen, providing for payment of a license tax by automobile repair shops in the city. The organization hopes to limit the number of such shops and to assure better service and profits.

Less than a dozen of the 500 repair shops in the city are making a proper profit and are adequately equipped to give first-class service, according to J. C. Thorpe, manager of the Associated Automobile Service Companies of St. Louis. A movement to license repair shops would eliminate so-called alley shops, benefit both the industry and the automobile owner, and cause mechanics to retain their employment until they had sufficient capital with which to go into business for themselves on a proper scale, he said.

CROSSROADS STORES GAIN BY AUTO AND GOOD ROADS

Coming of Highways Brings Prosperity to Enterprising Rural Merchants Who Supply Immediate Needs of Farmer.

BY EDGAR WHITE.

With the coming of good hard roads system throughout the State, and the auto ready to take the family anywhere on short notice, it seemed certain that the crossroads storekeeper in Missouri would soon be out of a job. Who would take the trouble to go to Bluebells for supplies when he had a hard smooth road in which to travel to the city 40 or 50 miles away, select what he wanted at the big commercial establishment and get back easily in time for supper?

The little store had had its day. So reasoned almost everybody—except the little storekeeper himself, who hadn't gone to sleep while the mercantile captains were planning for a new day.

Merchant Sees Benefit.

He, too, was seeing that good roads and the auto were going to land him in prosperity rather than into the bankruptcy court.

If the auto was a good thing for the customer to get about in so would it be for the village merchant, he reasoned. Getting out a county map he figured how many miles he might cover in a day picking up country produce, butter, eggs, chickens and the like—anything the farmer had to sell day by day.

The buzz-wagon was sent all around this territory and returned loaded with farm truck. For this the merchant paid cash or gave the customer credit for goods at his store. Some of the little merchants developed an amazing trade this way. As a tremendous convenience to the farmer, it saved him from driving to town when he had a small lot of stuff to sell. Having increased his circle of trade the cross-roads merchant was enabled to carry larger stocks and always could be relied upon to have important staples needed on the farm.

"How badly has the auto hurt our business?" repeated Harry L. Roebuck, junior member of J. P. Roebuck & Son, storekeepers at Cox village, a crossroads in Macon county. "Not so long a ago the store was doing a business of about $6000 a year. Now we're running easily $36,000 a year cash, and carry some good credit accounts in addition. We're handling business now we couldn't touch without the auto. Our truck goes to the city regularly for fresh bread, ice cream and other things we have to sell qcickly, and we have developed a good many steady customers for those things.

Movies Draw Trade.

"On Saturday nights, in the summer time, we've been running an open-air movie back of the store. We get the best pictures, seat the people comfortably and get the crowd. Instead of paying as you go in the patron drops in a jar as he goes out what he thinks the show's worth. The receipts break even with expenses, but nearly everybody who comes to the show patronizes the store. People who have cars come from quite a ways off. We couldn't get that business without the auto."

Mr. Roebuck explained that since he and his father purchased the store at Cox 13 years ago they had increased the stock from $2500 to $10,000.

"Of course we foresaw then the general use of the auto and the growing demand for good roads, and while a great many people told us those things spelled the doom of the country merchant, we figured it just the reverse," said Mr. Roebuck. "Our experience has justified our judgment."

"We felt sure that if we put in the goods the farm home needed, and sold them at reasonable prices, the people of the countryside would rather buy close at home rather than go to the distant city.

"Our store furnishes a good cash market for the farmer's produce and naturally he patronizes the merchant who patronizes him. If we run short of certain goods because of an unexpectedly large demand our auto truck stands in front and is always ready to make a quick run to the wholesalers in some large town for new supplies.

"Later on, we're going to work along another line by which we expect the auto to add considerably to the store's revenue. That is the retailing of chickens and fresh products of the farm, nuts and berries to the people of the towns, who will drive out for them for the purpose of enjoying an early morning spin through a beautiful country and to get things fresh from the farm. In a way it will be like 'foraging for food,' and will appeal to the sporting instinct in most healthy people."

Despite the Roebucks' experience, many country merchants have put up their shutters, convinced that the new orders of things means the end for them. They don't consider the big advantage they have in small expenses, the big territory for buying country produce and the certain profit on it, and that farmers will stay with them as long as they keep the stuff really needed—fencing wire, cream separators, a good line of shoes for every member of the family and apparel for men and women to wear at their every-day work.

Towns Face Problem.

The towns, in a larger way, have the same problem that confronts the cross-roads merchant. And they will have to meet the situation in the same alert way the Roebucks met it in their locality, or more enterprising places will get the business.

The history of development in any section of any country is that improvements bring with them greater opportunities. There were communities in Missouri that bitterly opposed the coming of railroads. Instead of planning new business as a result of better methods of transportation, the short-sighted objectors tried to block the building of the steel highways. Of course they failed, and in most cases realized too late they had shut the door on an offered benefit.

How to Go

Post-Dispatch Travel Bureau—Please publish best route to Portsmouth, O. Are roads good, and what is mileage? Is it necessary to go via Dayton? About how long should it take to drive there? Anxious.

The best and fastest route from St. Louis is to cross the Free Bridge, and go via Collinsville, Marshall and Indianapolis to Dayton, O. Then take Ohio Route No. 11 via Washington Courthouse to Chillicothe, O., then south on No. 4 to Portsmouth. Good roads, virtually all paved. Distance is about 470 miles and the drive should take two days.

AUBURN 'WANDERER' WINS FAVOR OF TOURING MOTORISTS

Probably no other model ever produced by the Auburn Automobile Co. has met the instantaneous acclaim that greeted announcement of which more wide-awake communities took the advantage.

Today the live towns are encouraging the establishment of bus lines in all directions. The busses make as perfect a schedule as railroad trains, and run at more convenient hours for shoppers.

of "The Wanderer," the sixth model of the Auburn line, it is asserted. "The Wanderer" is retained on both the six and eight cylinder chassis. Everywhere it is seen it amazes at the remarkable desire of automobile owners to procure a "Wanderer" for use on trips and week-end tours.

Coming in the closed body, "The Wanderer" is readily converted into a full-sized, roomy bed by removing the rear seat cushion and laying it on the floor in back of the front seats, the backs of which are then laid horizontally. The front seat cushion makes the comfortable bed inside the car complete.

This Is The Age Of Performance

Time was, when folk bought motor cars on the say-so of the salesman and on mere outward appearance.

More recently, the better informed made their selections on mechanical points as they could see them by lifting the hood or examining a stripped chassis.

But this—this is the age of performance.

On the performance of the car itself the motorist of today discards many and chooses one for his own.

And you will demand a degree and a phase of performance greater than you have previously enjoyed.

You are entitled to it—for engineering has made wonderful strides since the war.

And one group of engineers has consistently held the leadership. Those are the men who have designed and built Rickenbackers.

As your standard for performance—as your yard stick by which to measure other cars you are offered, take the new—the latest Rickenbacker model.

Insist that under all conditions, the other car match this wonder-car in performance.

Accept no other argument—just remind them that the world is moving fast and that you intend to keep up.

This is the age of performance.

Having compared performance—and not till then—compare prices.

You will find that, at the new prices this new 4-door Coach-Brougham, is the world's most sensational value.

SEDAN DEMAND FACTOR IN WILYS-OVERLAND EXPANSION

Safety features, so desirable in the small family of one or more small children, are one of the reasons why the Overland standard sedan has won unprecedented sales volume at its new low price of $595, according to dealer reports at the Willys-Overland factory.

An unusually heavy chassis, strongly reinforced with heavy cross members, provides a rigid framework upon which the strong body is mounted. In addition, lack of rear doors in the standard sedan makes it an ideal car for the small family, dealers report, in that the children may be turned loose in the rear compartment without fear of injury because there are no doors to be opened by childish hands. Another feature is the one-piece windsheld and the small and narrow corner posts that permit unobstructed view of the roadway at all times and do away with the blinding separating strip between the usual two-glass sections.

Demand for the sedan is a factor in the decision of Willys-Overland to spend some $2,000,000 in the next 12 months in new buildings and improvements, increasing production from 1200 to 1350 cars a day and adding more than 1000 employes to the force now working.

New 90-Degree Cadillac

If the ovation accorded this new 90-degree Cadillac could be made vocal and articulate—a roar of applause would resound from one end of the nation to the other.

This extraordinary endorsement is being expressed in a demand that blankets the map of America. It is a demand that sprang up spontaneously the moment the new car appeared—and has swelled steadily in volume ever since.

On the one hand, the most impressive exhibition of confidence and approval the American people have ever accorded even the Cadillac—on the other, the still small voice of other-car salesmanship endeavoring to explain it away.

Twenty-two times the same thing has happened—the penalty of leadership repeats itself each year—and for the twenty-second time, with more emphasis than ever, the public confers the crown of greatness and supremacy upon Cadillac.

If you would share the feeling of delight which is crossing and recrossing the country—just ride in this new Cadillac.

SPECIAL SOCKETS FOR NEW TYPE TUBES

Holders Eliminate Jamming and Twisting and Insure Perfect Electrical Contact.

Recognizing the fact that the electrical contact between the socket springs and the prongs of the tube bases could be improved, tube manufacturers have changed their signs slightly. The new tubes have longer prongs and in this respect resemble the construction followed abroad. It is no longer necessary to provide sockets with metal or composition collars having slots for pins whereby the tubes are held in position. There need be no more twisting, jamming and forcing of tubes to get them into sockets when the "fit" is not exact.

Instead of the usual pressed contact between the end of the tube prong and a spring strip in the socket, the "side-wipe" contact is to be employed. Here the four prongs for grid, plate and filament connections slip into holes in the socket, wherein contact is made on the sides of the prongs. The electrical area of contact is thus much larger and contact more certain. Besides, the tube is held rigidly and doesn't have to be twisted and forced into place.

In making the transition the manufacturers of tubes and sockets have not forgotten those still having old-type tubes, nor those who own sets using old-type sockets. Therefore tubes with side pins still are to be produced and likewise sockets in which both old and new tubes may be put are included in the newer designs. Thus every condition is being met.

The omission of the supporting collar simplifies the socket and the new method of insertion permits of much improved appearance as well as the elimination of excess insulation. Therefore, the new socket becomes more efficient electrically as well as mechanically. In making a selection of new sockets the purchaser should examine those offered in several ways:

1. Electrical contact.
2. Quality of insulation.
3. Method of making connections.
4. Ruggedness and appearance.
5. How tube fits and is gripped.
6. If suited to intended use.

There are four distinct sockets made in one new line, each of which has its own particular field of usefulness. Two of them may be employed only with the new tubes, while the other two are adaptable to both new and old tubes without the use of cumbersome adapters. In general the sockets are similar, those made for both types of tube having a skeletonized supporting collar attached. Geometrically the socket is shaped like the frustum of a cone, having embedded slots wherein the contact springs are held and side tongues for the mounting screws and collar support.

A tempered phosphor bronze strip forms the contact member, shaped to make stiff contact with the prongs on the tube base, making double contact in the case of the new tubes. This strip extends outward from the case of the socket and is provided with a hole to facilitate the soldering of connections directly to the strip. By way of re-enforcement another shorter spring strip is fastened beneath the mounting screw or rivet.

Hollow rivets replace the binding posts in fastening the contact members. The binding posts are of nickel-plated brass, having hexagonal nuts that may be tightly fastened with the modern radio wrench. These sockets are provided with skeleton-frame collars, split for the admission of the tube pin for guiding the prongs into the proper holes. There are two holes for mounting screws.

This offering of new sockets takes care of any requirements. If one has a number of old tubes, but is replacing them gradually with the new, he will need the combination socket. When he has used up all the old tubes he may easily remove the collars if he so desires. For building a new set, as for those just beginning in radio construction or others remodeling their equipment for new tubes only, the sockets without the collars are to be preferred.

And as for binding posts and soldering lugs as against soldering lugs only, the choice is made according to the intentions of the set maker to use the sockets experimentally or to leave the completed set in its finished form indefinitely.

The improvements in tube sockets and tubes are certain to aid the radio builder materially in his work through the elimination of poor contacts, infirm tube mounting and difficulty of connection.

Regeneration.

A regenerative set has the ability to oscillate. It generates power and radiates it, thus acting as a small transmitting set whose wave length shifts with each adjustment of the dials. The result is neighboring sets are bothered with interference from the radiated energy.

NAVY DAY ON THE RADIO

Navy day, which will be observed on the 27th of October, will be broadcast through a nation-wide hook up of stations which will enable the entire country to listen in, according to officials of the Navy Department. Plans are being laid for radio broadcasting with a view of getting information before as many people as possible. The plans also contemplate programs of national significance from several large independent stations as well as a multiplicity of local programs arranged between the district commandants and the smaller stations.

Care of Tubes.

To protect vacuum tubes from injury, slip a section of a mailing tube over the glass bulb. A hole can be cut in the side of the paper shield for a clear view of the filament.

RADIO EXPOSITION ON SOUNDER BASIS

Extravagant Promises Are No Longer Made by Dealers and Service Is Better.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—An outstanding feature of the fall offerings of radio receivers noted in the East is the extent to which the manufacturer (this year is standing back of his product and guaranteeing service to the purchaser.

With few exceptions, the larger radio manufacturers and distributors apparently have checked up on their dealers and are doing business only with those merchants who will guarantee to provide the purchaser service for his set as long as he uses it. This is very different from the haphazard method of sales which flourished at the outset of the radio boom, when dealers knew little more about the inside of the sets they sold than did the buyers.

Another interesting departure from previous methods of sales is seen in the almost total absence this fall of advertisements of sets which are "guaranteed to get the Pacific Coast," or which are boosted by other extravagant claims. On the whole, the radio advertising that is making its way into print this year is extremely conservative, stating little more than the type of set, the quality of workmanship, the design of the cabinet and the price.

From the prevailing prices of the new models of standard sets and the extent to which advance sales are being made, there is reason to believe that the overstocked shelves of last spring have been pretty well wiped out during the summer months.

NEW CALL BOOK OUT

The fall issue of the Citizens Radio Call Book is just out and contains many new features, including a photographic directory of the principal broadcasting stations' announcers in the United States and pictures of the entertainers of some of these stations; also a complete list of all the broadcasting stations of the United States and the world, together with wave length, kilocycle, transmitting schedules, station slogans, and a world of other information.

There are 10 complete construction articles in this issue on everything from a two-tube receiver to a nine-tube impedance coupled superheterodyne.

Use Lead-in Insulator.

If the aerial lead-in must be suspended over the roof eaves, drop it through an ordinary porcelain lead-in insulator that has been secured in a hole bored in a stick fastened to the edge of the roof.

Five tubes for performance
Three dials for precision—
Medium price for satisfaction
IN RADIO, performance comes first. You want to know that at will you can reach any station on the air—that you can do so in spite of strong local stations—that you can depend upon reception as free from disturbances as uncontrollable atmospheric conditions permit.
After all, it's a matter of what you want to pay for the privilege of owning a radio set.
To obtain these things, you need the range and selectivity of A-C Dayton. You need five tubes, for the sensitive response needed to reach through strong local stations to the ones a continent-width away. You need the precision and flexibility of tuning such as only three-dial control provides.
In areas where the strongest stations are most thickly grouped—in regions of strong local interference and far-from-favorable conditions—A-C Dayton sets by the hundred have performed as many more costly sets never have. And they have done so with such consistency that the demand for A-C Dayton receivers has ever kept abreast of production without price cutting or artificial stimulus of any nature. With such performance, A-C Dayton involves no great investment. A medium priced set, it is the logical receiver for the buyer who wants radio for the enjoyment of it without excessive cost.

RADIOGRAMS

There are 550,000 farms in the United States equipped with radios. Illinois leads with 46,000 farm sets.

Because of the many high-tension power lines in Switzerland, cheap receiving sets are practically useless.

Canada now has 47 broadcasting stations. Of this number 10 are operated by a Canadian railway and five are owned by newspapers.

Radio amateur transmitters in Germany are forbidden to broadcast news items, general information, advertisements, lectures or concerts.

Two hundred applications are on file in the Department of Commerce in Washington, D. C., for licenses to operate new broadcasting stations.

A special ground crystal, the size of a half dollar, will hereafter be used to keep KDKA, Pittsburg, Pa., on its assigned wave length at all times.

While the average receiving set in the United States is said to be superior to that in England, the quality of British radio transmission is better than American.

England is planning a new high-power radio station at Winthorpe, near Skegness, on the east coast. This station, when completed, is expected to be used for communication with Australia and India.

Causes of Swinging Signals.

Swinging signals are caused, in most cases, by the aerial at either the transmitting or receiving station being loose and swaying, sometimes grounding or coming near enough to affect the capacity of the aerial. Inductions and capacity make wave length and when either is affected, it is bound to change, and when the aerial circuit is not in resonance with the oscillating circuit at the transmitter or with the input to the detector at the receiving set, the transfer of energy will be less, with fading the result.

BIG RADIO SCHOOL OPENS NEW TERM

Kansas Agricultural College Has Ambitious Educational Program for Fall and Winter.

Station KSAC the mouthpiece of the Kansas State Agricultural College, pioneer institution to harness radio for disseminating higher education, goes on the air tomorrow, with an educational program, a prediction of which would have appeared visionary a few years ago.

A rural schools program is scheduled at 9 o'clock each morning. It consists of opening exercises, a music lesson, talks on nature study, travel, lives of great men, books to read, and current events. Five minutes are devoted to an agricultural primer, discussing in turn poultry, crops, dairying, horticulture and livestock. Calisthenics concludes the program.

The housewives half hour starts at 10 a. m. with a story serial and backyard gossip. General discussion on household management, health and sanitation, clothing problems, household decoration and child care are discussed by home economic experts. A question box, planing tomorrow's meals and today's news, are other features.

At the noonday program the farmer's questions are answered and timely information is broadcast by agricultural specialists.

Matinee programs provide specialties for enriching the club meetings of both town and rural women. High school credit courses are broadcast regularly, in addition to a football lecture course. Lessons in color and design are a Friday feature.

A year's college credit may be earned through the courses, which include general psychology, business English, community organization, educational psychology, economics, English literature, journalism, sociology, vocational education and educational sociology. Radio lectures are supplemented by home study, and regular examinations are taken by the students under the direction of county superintendents.

Another new feature on the KSAC evening program is designated as "Opportunity Talks." They include book reviews, current events, travelogues, brief lectures on etiquette, business, better speech, speaking in public, inventions, science, art and sports.

Forty extension courses, covering the fields of agriculture, engineering, home economics and general science are given without college credit. The daily market review is sandwiched into the evening program, which is closed with a radio-telephone question box. Lecturers answer questions phoned to the station. Telephone exchanges have agreed to give their subscribers a certain number of free calls and the complete telephone conversation is broadcast.

Artists on KSD Programs This Week

KSD to Broadcast World Series

STATION KSD, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, will broadcast the world series, beginning with the first game, next Wednesday. This station will have the complete service of the Associated Press, not only the play-by-play service, But the running story of the event, including the introductory features.

The games will start at 1 p. m. Central standard time, and broadcasting by KSD will begin shortly before that hour.

Listeners will receive practically instantaneous information as the plays are wired direct from the ball field. A noiseless telegraph sounder will be used by the Associated Press operator and a noiseless typewriter will type matter as it comes in on the wire. Thus no noisy instruments will intrude upon the voice of the KSD announcer, who will read this matter as it is typed on the paper in the visible typewriter.

STATION KSD STARTS ITS FALL ACTIVITIES

Features of Week Will Be Veiled Prophet Festivities and World Series Games.

A notable week in the matter of broadcasting programs will be that on the calendar of Station KSD beginning tomorrow. With activities at this station will start full blast with much longer broadcasting hours than for the last few months, beginning with studio recitals given by Carl Baum, pianist, Mrs. Mildred Doland, soprano, and assisting artists, all St. Louisans who have delighted KSD listeners previously. The week will include also, the broadcasting of the Veiled Prophet carnival in toto, and an interesting artist recital in the "Commerce Hour" Friday evening. The latter will be presented by John Kiburz, solo flutist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and recognized as one of the foremost American flutists. Mrs. Kiburz will assist at the piano.

Tuesday night, following the dinner concert at Hotel Statler, KSD will for the fourth successive year broadcast the music and other jollity of the Veiled Prophet street carnival as the parade passes the Post-Dispatch Building on its way up Olive street. The broadcasting of this event will start about 7 o'clock. The parade is scheduled to pass the Post-Dispatch Building at approximately 9:30 and there will be many interesting features picked up by the microphone during this half hour. There will be 11 bands in the parade and each will play while passing the Post-Dispatch Building. A microphone suspended from the KSD studio window will get all this music and the announcer in the studio will, by a new device just installed, be able to describe everything as it is taking place without depriving the listeners of the pleasure of hearing the music, on the outside. This will enable radio listeners to completely visualize what is taking place in the crowd at the busy corner.

Wednesday evening the same service will be used at the Veiled Prophet ball at the Coliseum. A running description of the magnificent spectacle will be given by the announcer while this spectacle is in progress, and not a single note of the music of the Symphony Orchestra will be lost to the listeners. This broadcasting will begin about 8 o'clock and be continuous until midnight or thereafter.

Another notable feature of the week will be broadcasting, play by play, hot off the wire, the world series ball games. KSD will have the complete service of the Associated Press in this broadcasting, a special wire being run into the studio, and the announcer then will give everything to the listeners direct from the wire. This will include the preliminary story, all the sidelights of the games, and the actual play-by-play description of the contest. Listeners will thus be in a position to enjoy the games almost as much as if they were sitting in the grand stand at the ball parks.

"Ifs" in the Set.

If signals are weak, look for dirt and dust inside.

If the set will not oscillate, reverse the plate and phone leads of the tickler.

If a tube vibrates when the set is operated, mount the socket on felt or soft rubber.

If there is a cracking sound when the coupling is increased, decrease filament current.

If there is a steady sound like a motor running, look around for a loose or broken connection.

If a constant clicking noise is heard, like the dripping of water on a hot stove, vary the grid leak and watch the grid condenser.

If a set howls when tuning, or the signals fade when the hand is taken from the controls, shield the panel and ground the shielding.

If the signals stop and go and the set is functioning properly, inspect the antenna. It is probably swinging and grounding periodically.

The Efficient Aerial.

The antenna should be as high as possible and unshielded from surrounding objects. The feeble currents from long distance stations will never reach the receiving set if the aerial is strung too close to surrounding objects that tend to absorb the energy.

Be sure of the vacuum

Radiotron UV-201-A, standard high-vacuum tube for storage battery sets.

UP TO a few years ago, a MAZDA lamp, with a vacuum one millionth of the density of air, was considered a remarkable achievement. But that wouldn't do for Radiotrons. A way had to be found—and it was found in the laboratories contributing to RCA—to exhaust the tube to ten million times less air than in a lamp! Even the metal and the glass itself have been forced to give up air bubbles hidden inside their very substance. And no one even knew before, that metal and glass held hidden air bubbles.

If the air isn't all out—the electrons that carry the radio signals can't jump across as they should. The tube wouldn't last long—it would use more current and do less work. That is why this new perfected series of exhausts makes the RCA Radiotron so remarkable. And the series of ingenious tests during and after exhausting, insures that every RCA Radiotron is exhausted to the fullest possible degree. To be sure of getting fullest service out of your set, you must get the most completely exhausted tubes. The one way is to find the RCA mark on every vacuum tube you buy.

BROADCASTING STUDIO AT THE RADIO SHOW

Local Stations to Participate in Programs and Southwest Exposition in Coliseum.

The problem confronting the management of the Southwest National Radio Exposition, which will be held in the Coliseum the week of Oct. 12, is lack of space and the lack of exhibitors. All available exhibit space has been taken and assigned.

The exposition as arranged will be both educational and entertaining. The crystal studio, from which the local announcers and guest announcers will broadcast, will be on the elevated platform, 15 feet above exhibits, thus affording a perfect view of the announcers and artists. The studio will be 20x30 feet, inclosed in glass, artistically furnished and equipped with the latest radio apparatus. Beneath the studio the Western Electric Co. will install an exhibit which will clearly demonstrate to the public just what takes place after the voice enters the microphone.

The local announcers of the various stations—KSD, WIL and WBBM—will have charge of the programs. They will arrange and announce the programs, giving way to the guest announcers. Among the guests will be Harold Hough, "The Hired Hand" of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, station WBAP, Fort Worth, Tex.; Nate Caldwell, Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corp., station WBBM, Chicago, Ill., and Gene Mittendorf, Kodel Radio Corporation, hotel Alms, station WKRC, Cincinnati, O., and Lambin Kay, station WSB, Atlanta Journal. Station KSD will have charge of the Crystal Studio Monday afternoon and evening; Tuesday afternoon, Wednesday afternoon and Friday afternoon.

Station SBF will arrange and direct the programs Tuesday evening, Wednesday evening, Thursday afternoon, Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon.

Station WIL will be host Thursday evening and Saturday eevning. Harold Hough will announce Monday evening.

Nate Caldwell will be the guest announcer Wednesday afternoon and Wednesday evening.

Lambdin Kay will be on the program Saturday afternoon and Saturday evening.

Conley-Silverman orchestra will give concerts each afternoon and evening, both from the broadcast and from the Crystal studio.

RADIO IN SOUTHERN SPAIN

The radio development in Southern Spain has been more sluggish than in many other sections of the country, consular advices to the Department of Commerce state. The people of this section are more conservative, less affected by foreign influences and less inclined to take up imported innovations. However, radio is now becoming more firmly established in the Seville region and interest is increasing satisfactorily.

Connections that are simply tightened down do not last long and generally corrode or become loose, but a soldered joint will last forever if properly made.

Tube Tips.

For the protection of vacuum tubes make the battery wiring inside the set as right as possible, and keep the "A" battery wires away from the plate battery wiring. Use spaghetti or rubber tubing on all battery wiring. A "tube fuse" can be attached to the pins on the bottom of the base. These are unusually excellent protective devices, and are worth the cost. The theory of such fuses is the same as for the fuses used in house wiring. When the current gets up to a certain point a further increase will cause the fuse wire to melt, thus breaking the connection between the battery and the tube.

A set should be placed where it will be as free as practicable from shocks, jars and vibrations.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. Please tell me how long an aerial should be from a Freshman five-tube set to make it tune sharp? W. H. T.

A. Sixty to 125 feet long would be the limit for the set you have. An antenna 125 feet long would give you the maximum strength of signals, while the shorter aerial will permit sharper tuning, with a slight decrease in the strength of signals. Count the total length of the antenna from the set to the far end of the aerial wire. It should be understood, however, that this is a general answer. The only accurate way to determine which antenna is best is to try out the different lengths until you have found the one that seems to work best. It is advisable to consider the instructions received with the set as the construction of the coils in the receiver have some bearing upon the length of the antenna to be used with it.

Q. Please advise me what to do. I am bothered with some amateur every evening at about 8 o'clock. O. H. K.

A. Nothing, unless you know who he is. However, if you know where he lives, go and meet him and have a talk with him. Amateurs do not cause interference intentionally, and if one is giving you trouble, he probably doesn't know it. If, after talking to him, he fails to correct his transmitter so that it will not interfere with your reception, and you are sure that your receiver is not at fault, write to the Supervisor of Radio, Federal Building, Chicago, Ill.

Q. I have a one-tube radio set using a single circuit regenerative receiver with a .0005 mrf. condenser. KSD comes in good and loud while the short wave stations below 300 meters do not come in at all. Will a low loss variable condenser remedy the trouble? I also have difficulty in separating the stations on the short wave lengths. V. S.

A. If you are using a single circuit regenerative the antenna inductance is too large. Take turns off of the coil until the set tunes to the lower wave length stations. The tuning of the short wave stations can be improved by the use of a straight line wave length condenser or a straight line frequency condenser. The latter would be best.

Q. I have a De Forest reflex five-tube set which uses a loop. Would an inside aerial help? F. H. M.

A. We are not sure that the design of your receiver would permit the use of an antenna. If provision has been made for the use of antenna an inside aerial would improve your reception and an outside aerial would be still better.

Q. I have built a three-stage neutrodyne radio with three stages of resistance coupled amplification and have no end of trouble in trying to neutralize the radio frequency amplifiers. Will the use of a doughnut coil in the first stage of radio amplification make the set easier to neutralize? J. C. T.

A. No. Doughnut coils in all three stages might help. Just one would be of little value.

Q. I wish to construct the most efficient 33-foot aerial. How many wires should I use. Should they be connected together at both ends? What should be the distance between the wires? B. J. M.

A. It would be better for you to use an antenna longer than 33 feet. One with a total length of between 80 and 125 feet would be best. However, if you are limited to space and can only put up a 33-foot antenna, make it of three or four wires spaced two or three feet apart. Connect them together at one end. The end to which the lead-in is attached, It is best to make such an antenna as high as is practical.

Q. Will KSD broadcast results of world's series games? H. S.

A. Yes, KSD will broadcast the reports from the games play by play, beginning at the exact time when the first game starts and continuing until the last out of the last game is called.

Q. I have built a frequency changer intending to connect it to a Dayton set to make a superheterodyne out of it. What is the best way to connect this to the Dayton set? Do you think the frequency changer worth while? G. B.

A. Obtain copies of the last few issues of Radio Broadcast and Radio in the Home. These two magazines have covered the subject in detail. Limited space prohibits our describing the arrangement. The frequency changer used to make a super out of an ordinary receiver is more or less of an experiment. If built right and connected to the receiver in the proper way the resulting receiver would be a little better than a straight radio frequency amplifier, but not as good as a superheterodyne built as such. In other words, the frequency changer is an imitation of a super and we are inclined to believe that only a few who attempt to build them will be successful. It is a more difficult job than building a straight super.

Moisture-Proof Insulators.

A porcelain insulator that is not glazed becomes useless in damp weather, because moisture penetrates below the surface and forms a conducting path for the energy in the aerial. Various materials, marble, fiber, slate and wood, are unsatisfactory unless their pores are filled. The best way to treat such materials, to make them better insulators, is to immerse in hot paraffin. Hard rubber and bakelite are suitable insulators for panels, and are used for sockets, tube bases and other parts.

John P. Buckley, scientist of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, has constructed a crystal radio set which he claims can be built for 49 cents. The set is principally composed of two small boards around which are wound the tuning coils.

The New Pfanstiehl "Single Dial Six".

Having six tubes and but one dial

MODEL 10—Overtone single-dial 6-tube receiving set. Price $155 (less accessories)

AFTER all the complicated radio receivers people have had to contend with, it is a pleasure to operate the new Pfanstiehl. There is nothing like it. You do not have to adjust or fix anything. A child can get as good results as a technician.

The Pfanstiehl Overtone receiver has the simplest radio frequency circuit we have ever seen. It dispenses with the adjusting and neutralizing devices found in other sets. They are not needed. No stray radio energy can "spill over" between circuits. Hence no devices are required to correct it.

You Tune with a Single Dial

It is so simple you can tune in the dark. You do not have to grope around adjusting dials. You turn at once to the wave length desired. The illuminated station finder is a great convenience. It facilitates the tuning in of stations. It also acts as a signal to show whether the power is on or off.

A Perfect "Overtone" Receiver

The matchless tone of the Pfanstiehl Overtone receiver is of course due to the overtones. They are perfectly reproduced because the pattern of vibrations which make them is kept intact, unmarred by stray energy between circuits—an exclusive Pfanstiehl accomplishment.

The radio panel is of walnut, swept clean of all non-essentials. It is rich looking. The tuning dial is of wood. All exposed metal parts are gold plated. The soft amber glow of the station finder adds a brilliant touch to the panel assembly.

American Girlhood Most Beautiful, Artist Says

Haskell Coffin, Painter of "Outdoor Girl," Finds Charm in Mixture of Races.

One British Girl of 400 who applied was selected by Florenz Ziegfeld in London recently for his "Follies." The "institution glorifying the American Girl" could not find among her English, Scotch or Irish cousins a single lass to rival that girl in beauty. The one to be chosen was by birth Australian.

"The American Melting Pot," says Haskell Coffin, the portrait painter, "has produced in beauty its own distinctive type. She is not English, Scotch or Irish, she is neither Teuton, nor Latin, nor Slav, Levantine or Oriental. And she is the most beautiful girl in all the world." He ought to know for he is the husband of Frances Starr, the distinguished actress, whose charm and beauty and intelligence made so great a success of Eugene Walter's play, "The Easiest Way."

A Southern Type.

In New York picture galleries a representative of the Post-Dispatch New York Bureau was cited to Haskell's "Outdoor Girl" to illustrate his theory. Perhaps he had painted the Southern type of beauty in these luminous dark eyes, in the brown hair that escapes from the tam o'shanter, in the high-bred patrician features which are reproduced with this issue of the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

That would not be surprising, for Mr. Coffin is a South Carolinian. He was born in Charleston in 1877 in a house where the high tide flooded a portion of the back yard he played in.

A Series of Eight Pictures.

His experience wasn't limited to Southern beauty. His mother, seeing his talent, encouraged her boy at every step. He studied at the Corcoran School in Washington, and at the Art Students' League in New York. There he won a scholarship which took him to Paris and to Julien's. Jean Paul Laurens was his master.

There he studied the feminine types of Europe. But he returned to America to find the greatest outlet for his gift in portraying ideal American womanhood.

In the autumn shows of the New York galleries the Post-Dispatch correspondent found a score of portraits that cast light upon Mr. Coffin's theory. Special arrangements were made to have eight of them reproduced that readers of this newspaper might judge for themselves if he is right.

Some of the most popular of the nation's portrait painters and illustrators have contributed their opinion in a symposium in paint.

"The Outdoor Girl" is the affirmative of Mr. Coffin's argument in pigment. The reproduction in this Sunday's Post-Dispatch is a triumph of the printer's art, and by use of a special paper and the "offset" printing process reproduces the painter's statement exactly as his brush would say it.

Is the Coffin theory fact? In "The Debutante," which will be reproduced next Sunday, the same artist may have something to say on the other side of the question.

Nerves On Edge? ---Look Out For Chronic Fatigue

When a man or woman is continually cross and irritable, easily upset by trifles, jumps at unexpected noises, complains and criticises unjustly, worries about every little thing, and is always tired, weak and ailing—it is almost a sure sign they are suffering from nerve force exhaustion, due to chronic fatigue.

Don't confuse chronic fatigue with the ordinary fatigue—the kind of "healthy tired" you feel after a long hike or any vigorous exertion. Ordinary fatigue is perfectly natural, and nothing to worry about. But chronic fatigue—the serious kind—comes from within. Your nerves and all your body tissues have become debilitated and cannot function properly.

In such cases it is simply foolish to take mere stimulating nerve tonics and drugs which merely whip up the fagged nerves temporarily. To conquer chronic fatigue you must go to the root of the trouble.

Your nerves and all your body tissues get their nourishment from the blood. Doctors have found that it is almost invariably when the blood is thin and pale, lacking in sufficient strength-giving organic iron, that the system—especially the nervous system—becomes run-down, and you are a victim of that fearful tired feeling, weakness, nervousness, dizziness, poor appetite, headaches, sleeplessness, and numerous other tortures, both physical and mental. This condition, if not corrected, may easily lead to far worse.

What you need is to strengthen and build up your exhausted nerve cells, incidentally rebuilding your entire system, by getting more organic iron into your blood. Don't take the mineral iron medicines used in the past, which many doctors now say do little good. Take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the organic iron in the blood, and like that in spinach and lentils. Nuxated Iron is entirely different from the older mineral iron medicines—does not injure the teeth or disrupt the stomach. It is promptly assimilated into the blood and begins at once to revitalize worn-out nerves, muscles and organs, and give you new strength and endurance.

Take Nuxated Iron for just two weeks, and you'll be astonished how much stronger and better you feel, how your disposition improves, and life becomes a pleasure instead of a constant series of irritations. Results are guaranteed or money refunded. At all good druggists.

Twelve Works, New to St. Louis, to Be Played By Symphony Orchestra

Many Novelties as Well as Old Favorites in the Program for the Coming Season.

By HARRY R. BURKE.

As the war-horse of Job that "saith among the trumpets Ha, Ha," and "smelleth the battle afar off" the music lover, with October's turn of the year, looks eagerly forward to what coming programs will disclose. Weary he may have been of music when the May came on. Then—in Paul Rosenfeld's thought if not his image—the jaded one could not be lured into orchestral halls to hear the Angel Gabriel play a concerto for the trumpet. Now the music hunger is aroused again. Even the phonograph next door becomes by some autumnal magic an appetizer.

So one scans the digest of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra's programs as announced by Conductor Rudolph Ganz to learn their promise. Fourteen Symphonies and suites he has announced, nine overtures and a score of miscellaneous works of which four are by Americans. Forty-three in all, of which twelve will then be heard for the first time in St. Louis. Evidently Mr. Ganz has spent a busy summer aside from his visitations to the New York Stadium and the Hollywood Bowl as guest-conductor; apart from his essay as an Alpinist on Mt. Rainier.

New Offerings.

They are the slopes of Parnassus he now would climb. Some of the paths are well defined and clear. But real musical adventure promises in some of the new things to be done, and "new" does not of necessity mean "modern," though the authentic modern note may be as welcome to one's ear as to another's it is distasteful. For there are novelties here—works new to St. Louis—which are two centuries old. Two hundred years have passed since Johann Sebastian Bach composed his Toccata in C major for the organ. But it was this year that Alexander Siloti—who endeared himself to St. Louis by his arrangement of the Fifth Brandenberg concerto heard with the orchestra some two years ago arranged the adagio from that toccata for the orchestra.

It is characterized by a long, ornate, rhapsodical melody in which the violin of Michel Gusikoff and H. Max Steindel's 'cello will be heard, before the exquisite song is taken up by the other strings. Almost as old is the Handel Grosso Concerto in B, yet it is to be heard for the first time here and most probably heard here for the first time in America.

Interesting as a group, and individually, are the four American works which will be played. The list is headed by Ernest R. Kroeger's "Mississippi," a tone poem written of the great river on the banks of which the composer has spent a busy life. The Father of Waters unwinds in the music-picture as it might unwind before a pilot's eyes—the clear stream of the north, the mingling with the Muddy Waters, the sweep to the Southland. His sensitive appreciation of both its poetry and its might are in Mr. Kroeger's musical impression of the river.

Tone of the Sea.

"Saragossa," by Edward F. Schneider, a San Franciscan, tells in tone of mysterious currents that sweep old Father Ocean's breast, and of that great sea of weeds into which the lost ships drift, as the fables say, lured by the sirens' songs. It, also, is sensitive and poetical. First sketches of the work were seen by Rachmaninoff. "You must work on that," he said. A year later he returned to San Francisco and asked to see what had been done. "But I have done nothing," was Schneider's answer. "You are lazy," said Rachmaninoff, with an utterance as deep and final as the great chords of his C sharp minor prelude. The phrase marked a beginning, not an end. Schneider went to work. He began to fear that the Russian was right. Leo Sowerby, in his suite "From the Northland," essays a descriptive musical study of the Northern United States. St. Louis will remember the young composer as a man of promise for his concerto which he played with the Symphony orchestra here in the season of 1920-21. He was then about to set out for Italy as a student in the American Academy at Rome. That study-time served only to emphasize the American quality of his music as it sings in this "Northland" suite.

And St. Louis will remember also Ernest Schelling, who played his own "Fantastic Suite" with the orchestra on Feb. 10-11, 1922, and whose "Victory Ball" is the fourth American work on the year's programs. He had served with the United States Infantry as a Captain overseas, won promotion to be Major and received the French Legion of Honor. But disillusionment comes with the war's end and the high politics which followed. Alfred Noyes' verses "The Victory Ball" inspired the orchestral phantasy which we will hear this year and the final verse of the poem indicates the music's mood:

"Victory! Victory! On with the dance!
Back to the jungles the new beasts prance!
God, how the dead men grin by the wall,
Watching the fun at the Victory Ball."

New to St. Louis is the voice of Bela Bartok—the authentic voice of the Magyar—whose Suite No. 1 is a promised novelty. "Distinct through perfect novelty and unusualness of quality," says Paul Rosenfeld of the composer's work, and adds significantly that Bartok "remained uncontaminated entirely of the showy orientalics and superficial emotionalism of the Tziganes; cut away the parasite and laid bare the strong, sinewy idiom from which it sucked life." Bartok has done much for his own folk-song and this suite is based upon four Hungarian folk-dances. His is a polytonic music, and it was Bartok who first wrote a piano piece in two keys, a work with four sharps in the right and four flats in the left hand. He is one of the few moderns who follows no fashions, but is true to his ideal of beauty.

Youthful Composer.

Also, one will hear the "Nuschi-Nuschi" dances from the opera of that name by Paul Hindemith, who, not yet turned 30, is described in Riemann's Musiklexicon as "the freshest and most full-blooded talent among the younger German composers." The radicals rejoice that he is not a hopeless reactionary; the conservatives are glad he has not surrendered to modernity. "He seems able to write polytonally," says Lawrence Gilman, "or atonally if he chooses, but also to write—as the Academics might observe—as a gentleman."

Stravinsky's "Petrouchka" suite is listed—a musical tragedy of puppet life or a musical tragedy without that qualification as one prefers. The marionettes are the Ballerina and Petrouchka and the Moor who love her. The jealous Moor slays his rival, Petrouchka. In a carnival scene a hurdy-gurdy and a barrel-organ wage musical battle before the showman begins his ballyhoo, and the tragedy is introduced when the rivals and their beloved Ballerina begin a Russian dance. Tongues will wag, and some wag sadly when it is heard here. They will wag, too, perhaps, over the "Poeme de l'Extase" with which Scriabin celebrates the glory and the joy of creative artistic effort, transfiguring life by the white heat of his spirit. From music he had made himself what was almost a religion and was in part a ritual. If we do not see what we shall see, we will hear what we shall hear.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The habit of leaving theater seats during the intervals of a performance and walking about in the lobbies and foyers, a Continental custom hitherto looked down upon in England, is catching on in London. At a recent first night of a Pirandello play the main body of the theater was quite deserted during the intermission, and the foyer was filled with strollers and sitters-out, including many of London's prominent personages.

Mantell's Farewell Tour.

St. Louis is to have a one-week engagement of Shakspearean and other classic plays with Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper as the stars. They come to the American Theater on Monday evening, Oct. 12, with "King Lear" as the opening bill. "King Lear" will also be given on Thursday evening. Tuesday evening "Hamlet," Wednesday matinee, "As You Like It," Wednesday and Saturday evenings "Richelieu," Friday evening "Macbeth" and "Merchant of Venice" Saturday matinee.

WILL ROGERS AND DE RESZKE SINGERS COMING FRIDAY NIGHT

Will Rogers, cowboy, humorist, and former Ziegfeld star, comes to the Odeon Friday night to dispense some of his funny philosophy between appearances of the De Reszke Singers, a quartet of young Americans whose study with Jean de Reszke won them permission to use that master's honored name.

Sea chanties, negro spirituals and old English folk songs make up the greater portion of the singers' program, although German, French, Italian and Russian composers will be heard in its songs.

Rogers will talk on "All I Know is What I Read in the Papers" and "Great Men I Have Met at the Stage Door," according to the announced program.

The De Reszke Singers made their first American tour last year after their "discovery" by Mary Garden at Nice the previous summer, and this is their first appearance in St. Louis.

Organ Concert Next Sunday.

On Sunday, Oct. 11, at 3:30 p. m., there will be a dedicatory organ concert given in the chapel of St. Elizabeth's Academy. Several organists of the city will take part in this recital and the St. Anthony Choristers, under the direction of Mr. C. Hausner, will render special numbers.

Second Thoughts ON First Nights

By Alexander Woollcott

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.

WHEN, for the first time in his life, the veteran E. H. Sothern stood before an audience on the Belasco stage last Tuesday evening at the premiere of the importation called "Accused," his welcome must have been warming to the heart. But I suspect that in the bottom of that heart there was also a little pang born of the fact that he was not somewhere else, a little twinge of regret that another actor than himself was even then stamping furiously about the stage of the Casino down the street in his old role of the vagabond poet in "If I Were King."

It was, I imagine, a not unpleasant experience to return to New York in an active and eventful play by so eminent a dramatist as Eugene Brieux and under a management so painstaking and so solicitous as David Belasco's. But as he donned the plain, unexciting sack suit of Brieux's middle-aged and eminently legal hero, I suspect he was thinking ruefully of the picturesque tatters or the lustrous raiment or the shining armor presumably hanging at that moment in the Casino dressing-room and was murmuring to himself: "If Villon were the King of France and I were Francois Villon!"

FOR out of the old Sothern repertoire, they have taken "If I Were King" and fashioned it into a lovely and glamorous musical romance, with a stirring score by Rudolph Friml; with a great roaring chorus that cuts loose magnificently in the fine Friml "March of the Beggars of Paris;" with Denis King (you know his pedigree, of course—out of "Rose-Marie" by the hook or crook) playing brilliantly in the old Sothern role of the toss-pot Villon; with capital lyrics by Brian Hooker and with such a thrilling pageantry of costumes as were not dreamed of in the pre-Reynolds era of the American stage.

Some 18 new plays and musical comedies are coming to New York next week, creating a situation wherein the faithful dramatic critic invariably recalls to me the touching story of the little chameleon who was put on a piece of Scotch plaid and died trying to make good. Before this avalanche, there is just time for me to tell you how delightful an entertainment is this "Vagabond King." For that is the somewhat stale and stereotyped title that has been affixed to the musical version of Justin Huntly McCarthy's romantic play. I wish they had taken a hint out of its own fine text and named it "Roses and Rascals." It is the current custom of Broadway to say that "The Vagabond King" is just as good as "The Student Prince." After a week of meditation, prayer and some rough figuring on the back of an envelope, I have come to the conclusion that "The Vagabond King" is precisely 87 times as good as "The Student Prince."

"IF I WERE KING" was first produced at the old Garden Theater just 24 years ago this month, with Sothern as Villon, with Cissie Loftus as Katherine de Vaucellers and with Suzanne Sheldon as Huguette. To Daniel Frohman, as he brooded over the rehearsals, came a flush of embarrassment as he discovered young McCarthy out in the darkened auditorium and realized that he had thoughtlessly engaged for the role of Katherine none other than the former Mrs. McCarthy. He hurried backstage and, in a backstage whisper, flurriedly inquired of Miss Loftus if this situation would prove more trying than her nerves would permit. At which kindly question Miss Loftus went into gales of laughter.

"Why, we just had luncheon together. He's writing a play for me. Aren't you, Justin? Come up here on the stage and quiet the management."

IT was during the rehearsals at the Garden that the skeptical Frohman suggested a radical change in the plot of the piece which did make the play into a flagrant imitation of "The Lady of Lyons," but which also improved it almost past recognition. According to the tale as it is told in Sothern's reminiscences, McCarthy, some time after the success of the play was established, was heard to remark nonchalantly:

"That was a lucky thought of mine, that change at the end of the second act."

A woman who had been present at the dress rehearsal, laughed scornfully.

"Your thought!" she exclaimed; "why, the idea was mine!"

"Really," said Sothern himself then, it is immaterial, but in mere

WOOLLCOTT'S SECOND THOUGHTS ON FIRST NIGHTS OF PLAY

Justice to myself and in the cause of truth and history, I must declare that the suggestion was mine."

My own associations with "If I Were King" go back to a performance given one Saturday afternoon in the old Broad Street Theater in Philadelphia. It was at a time when I had already decided I must select whatever career would entail free theater tickets. But as that ambition had not yet been achieved, I saw "If I Were King" from the front row of the gallery. This was before the fearful catastrophe of the Iroquois Theater fire in Chicago had written drastic ordinances against overcrowding onto every statute book in the country. Wherefore, the very aisles were as crowded as a subway train at sundown. The simple act of rising from my seat (the brigands at the Broad Street used to charge 50 cents apiece for them) and walking (let alone running) to the nearest exit would have been a sheer physical impossibility. Even if assisted by assault, battery and a little murder, it could not have been managed. At this point the theater caught on fire.

As the smoke poured into the auditorium, we in the uneasy gallery could see the aristocracy quietly withdrawing from the costly seats below. We, however, could not move and the difficulty of our situation was intensified when Mr. Sothern came to the footlights, stamped his medieval foot and roared in his beautiful baritone voice: "Sit down!" For at that moment, 15 women in the front row of the gallery, overcome by smoke, alarm and the agreeable agitation induced by the sight of Mr. Sothern in his romantical costume being so splendidly fierce and masterful with them, complicated matters by quietly swooning away.

I remember we were all considerably soothed by the fact that, instead of fleeing to her hotel, Miss Loftus, who was not involved in the scene then playing, elected to walk onto the stage in the fine robes of Burgundy red she was to wear in that act and seated herself calmly on a stone bench near the footlights. Meanwhile the flames were being conquered somewhere backstage and as the smoke began to thin out, the remnants of the audience were persuaded that it had all come from a foolish blaze in the basement of the Hotel Walton next door.

I have seen Mr. Sothern and Miss Loftus many times and admired them much. I have even played with them. (For a whole week, a year or so later I was a rather dashing but wordless Scotch lord in McCarthy's "The Proud Prince" when that less fortunate successor to "If I Were King" came to the Chestnut Street Opera House.) But I never saw either of them appear to better advantage or play their roles with finer spirit and intelligence than they did during that panic at the Broad Street years ago.

WHEN Daniel Frohman attended the final dress rehearsal of "Accused" on Monday night, his own thoughts ran further back. He must have been thinking of the time when he was managing Mr. Sothern's appearance in "The Highest Bidder" at the Madison Square, of which comedy the director was young Mr. Belasco, but recently arrived from San Francisco and only just then promoted to the dizzying salary of $75 a week—a good $65 a week more by the way than was being paid to a minor actor in the cast named William A. Faversham, who has since gained offspring, fame and fortune, in exchange, apparently, for a mere middle initial.

SO "Accused" is in the nature of a reunion, all of which, you may be sure, is duly recorded in the neat program of the Belasco production.

"M. Brieux," says the folder, "began his literary career as a journalist but in 1880 produced his first play, Menages d'Artistes.' It was written while the public was still enthusing over Mr. E. H. Sothern's interpretation of 'Lord Chumley' and while David Belasco was preparing Mrs. Leslie Carter for her first professional starring engagement in 'The Ugly Duckling.' During the intervening years, this trinity—Belasco, Brieux and Sothern—have been drawn closer by the inscrutable working of Fate to the focal point of today where each has his part in the production of 'Accused.'"

This careless brochure somehow astoundingly overlooks the fact that on the night "Menages d'Artistes" was first produced in Paris, I was sound asleep in a crib on the third-floor-back of No. 419 Aldine place, Kansas City, Mo., little dreaming, if at all, that Fate was being so uncommonly inscrutable as to set aside D 112-113 for my use at the first night of "Accused."

TWELVE WORKS, NEW TO ST. LOUIS, FOR SYMPHONY PROGRAM

hands, we shall for the first time hear—a work which is not always inspired but is in authentic classic manner and is marked by unfailing style. Mr. Ganz has not yet given his reading of the Beethoven "Pastoral" which he includes in the season's plans, nor the Chabrier overture to "Gwendoline" which he has listed. For the rest he is depending upon a dirigental repertory he has been building in four years. There are the war-horses of the concert room, Tschaikowsky's "Pathetique" and Dvorak's "From the New World," with them Schumann's No. 4 in D minor, the Brahms first in C minor, the Caesar Franck, Rachmaninoff's Second in E minor. These we have heard him read before, as also the Rimsky-Korsakov "Scheherazade" suite. There will be the beautiful "Suite La Mer" of Debussy, also.

The "Serenade" which Richard Strauss wrote at 17 and which is Mendelssohnian in its strain, we are to hear for the first time in St. Louis, as also his "Burlesque for Piano and Orchestra" a little later in date and still not the authentic Strauss. But the "Don Juan" will be offered on that same program to show the composer at his zenith. That, with "Till Eulenspiegel" and "Heldenleben," Mr. Ganz has offered us before, as he has Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," Dukas' "L'Apprenti sorcier," the Tschaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet," the Weber "Invitation to the Dance," Liszt's "Les Preludes," the Brahms-Haydn Choral Variations, the scherzo from Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream Music" and Borodine's "In the Steppes." So, too, most of the Wagner concert numbers he has chosen. Here, then, are hors d'oeuvres and good roast meat. One awaits the rap of baton on the conductor's desk with an interest as if it were a dinner bell.

CZECHS ARE GETTING THIRSTIER

Consumption of Beer Per Capita Increased to 52 Quarts in 1924.

By correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PRAGUE, Sept. 10.—Either the Czechs are getting better or the beer is getting thirstier. Anyway the consumption of beer is increasing rapidly. In 1920 it averaged only 41 quarts per capita. In 1921 it increased to 47 quarts, but fell off in 1922 to 44. The next year was a very thirsty one and the Czechs averaged over 52 quarts each. In 1924 the average approached 60 liters and this year it is expected to be even higher. This increase is in spite of large exports.

According to estimates, 31,000,000 steins of beer were produced in the world last year—not as much, however, as was produced before the war. Germany led in the production, Great Britain was next and Belgium was third. The Czechs judge their beer by the consistency of the foam. It is considered right when the foam will almost support a "spekovy knedlicka," or bacon and onion dumpling. In Prague, beer and dumplings are almost as popular as tea and pastry.

COMMISSION TO PLAN ADVERTISING EXHIBITS

Representatives of Associated Ad Clubs to Meet in St. Louis Tomorrow and Tuesday.

The National Advertising Commission of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World will hold its regular quarterly meeting tomorrow and Tuesday at Hotel Statler, at which plans for the advertising exhibits at the next annual advertising convention in Philadelphia will be discussed and changes in the constitution and by-laws will be considered.

Business sessions will be held Monday and that evening members of the commission will be guests of the Advertising Club of St. Louis at its annual dinner dance and election of officers, to be held at Hotel Chase. R. King Woodbridge, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; W. The final busines sesion of the commission will be held Tuesday morning, and in the afternoon members will play golf. Reservations for the Veiled Prophet's parade have been made for those who remain here Tuesday evening.

Minister-Advertiser To Speak.

Among those who will attend the meetings will be the Rev. Christian F. Reisner of New York, chairman of the church advertising department, one of the first Ministerial Alliance at Hotel Statler, and will talk at a special luncheon meeting of churchmen at noon at the Missouri Athletic Association.

Arrangements for the meeting here are in charge of George M. Burbach, advertising manager of the Post-Dispatch, who is a vice chairman of the commission, and Charles F. Hatfield, manager of the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, who is secretary of the commission.

A Changing World

"We are living in a changing world. I never thought I could ever be cured of my stomach trouble. Medical science seemed unable to help me. But thank God we are progressing, and now Mayr's Wonderful Remedy has delivered me from all stomach symptoms. I am again able to eat anything." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. ## THE WILES OF A GONDOLIER

An Example of How They Evade Charging Fixed Tariff.

VENICE, Sept. 5.—Venetian gondoliers have been famous for centuries as at once the "toughest" and the "smoothest" specimens of humanity. The municipality of Venice has endeavored to oblige them to respect the official tariff for their services, but their wits and their wills are sufficient to circumvent all tourists and all the special gondola police the town can provide. Recently this correspondent devoted a quarter of an hour to trying to persuade gondoliers to take him from the Piazza San Marco to the railway station at the fixed tariff and finally found one who agreed. Victory! But out in the middle of the canal the gondolier observed calmly, "You are going to pay me for my return trip." The correspondent exploded in holy American wrath. "Quietly, quietly, my gentleman," said the gondolier with a benevolent smile. "We must all take life philosophically." The American was unphilosophically angry for an hour, but at the end the gondolier pocketed three times his fare with the utmost philosophic calm imaginable.

ACCORDEONS JAZZ KINGS

Now in Demand to Offset Brass Instruments in Paris.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Accordeon players have become the kings of jazz in France. Their once-ridiculed instruments are now much in demand to furnish a tuneful offset for the strident notes of the brass instruments. Paris is all the more enthusiastic about the accordeon craze, because it is not an importation, like the cult of the saxaphone, but appears to have originated here.

There is hardly a country fair in France where the accordeon player has not supplied for years a good part of the music, but until recently the sophisticated city dweller has smiled at the instrument, and the musical brotherhood of the nation has refused to recognize the output of the accordeon as real music. Few of the accordeon players, be it noted, read music; they play by ear. However, they have caught the popular fancy, and many blind and crippled war veterans have developed an artistry in this medium that has made them favorite street entertainers. Their hats or tin cups always get more sous than fall to the share of the mendicant players of other instruments.

Actress Tells Secret

Jolecy Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair, and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

Try this Shampoo

Lana Oil Soap does more than cleanse the hair. It invigorates the scalp, removes many of the causes of dry or falling hair. 10c at grocers and druggists.

MEXICAN BEAUTY IN MOVIES ASPIRES TO BE PEACEMAKER

Senora del Rio Will Attempt to restore Cordiality Lost Because of "Villians."

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 3.—Senora Doloras del Rio, wealthy Mexico City society woman, regards her work before the cameras of Hollywood as something of an international mission.

Senora del Rio, who became a motion picture actress at the suggestion of a Hollywood director who met her in Mexico, believes she will be able to help overcome prejudices created south of the Rio Grande by producers formerly in the habit of sending to Mexico films featuring Mexicans or Spaniards as villains.

Although the custom of making "Mexican" synonyms with "villan" has been cast into the discard, Senora del Rio points out that there still remains a slight coolness in Mexico because of it.

In addition to her acting, Senora del Rio is undertaking a series of articles on the films for publication in Mexican newspapers.

ITALIAN YOUTHS CARRY OUT CARDINAL'S DRESS EDICT

Two Women Held Virtually Prisoners During Mass Due to Immodest Attire.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

ROME, Sept. 15.—Various members of the Catholic Youth organization of Florence recently decided to interpret literally and militantly the proclamation of Cardinal Mistrangelow, affixed at the doors of all churches, urging the faithful to see that no immodestly dressed women enter Florentine places of worship.

When, during noon mass in the great cathedral, members of the organization spied two women who seemed to them to be disobeying the Cardinal's order, they whisked the women into a dark corner and kept them virtually prisoners until the mass was over. Then they hurried them to the door of the church where other members of Catholic Youth greeted them with cries of shame and derision, the women finally escaping in a carriage.

CANADA GETS BIG RETURN FROM AMERICAN TOURISTS

Government Officials Estimate Revenue in 1925 Season at $150,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 3.—Tourists from the United States brought $150,000,000 in revenue to Canada in the season just closed, according to estimates of Government officials. This sum is equal to a quarter of the value of the Dominion's wheat crop and approximates the values of the annual mining output of Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia combined.

More than 2,000,000 American automobiles, it is estimated, have crossed into Canada already this year. They carried approximately 9,000,000 tourists, or one tourist for every man, woman and child in the Dominion. Every province shared in the tourist business. Ontario received the larger traffic. Last year 1,376,988 cars from the United States entered Ontario, 163,878 of which stayed from two to 30 days, 1645 from one to six months and the remainder shorter periods.

125 NOBEL PRIZE WINNERS TO SHARE ABOUT $4,000,000

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 15.—Prizes of about $4,000,000 given to 125 winners, will be the record of the Nobel Foundation on the occasion of its twenty-fifth annual awarding of prizes at the end of this year.

Funds of the foundation now amount to slightly over $8,000,000, and the prizes to be given this year will be 118,165 kroner each or about $31,000. Besides the five regular prizes of 1925, three were held over from 1924, namely, the awards in physics, chemistry and the peace prize.

Of the prizes awarded during the years 1901-1924, nine have gone to America and seven to Sweden. Germany tops the list with 26 prizes, closely followed by France with 21 and England with 14 awards.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Written by a Woman

IT'S part of masculine vanity to pretend there are certain things men understand that women never can. (Men are all alike in this). And when the radio was first heard of, they thought they would have another chance to put us women in our proper place. They thought it would give them another chance to go off into a corner by themselves and smoke, and speak a language no female could ever comprehend.

But they missed their guess—from the minute the Freed-Eisemann Radio was put on the market—for the Freed-Eisemann is as easy to operate as a phonograph. And women take to it as they take to bargain hunting. Are they afraid of the radio terminology, "neutrodyne receiver" and such? Hardly. As one woman said, "Why should the word receiver keep me away from the radio? It doesn't keep me away from the telephone." And so she bought a Freed-Eisemann instead of a season ticket to the opera!

If the Truth Were Known

—plenty of men are puzzled by the radio—particularly men who are inclined to be literary and artistic rather than mechanical. But would they admit it to a woman? Not on your life! They love music and long for a radio, but when their wives suggest getting one they pretend they are not interested.

THIS is another instance where feminine tact can remedy the situation. All a woman has to do is say to her husband, "Let's get a Freed-Eisemann Radio. Everybody says it's so easy to operate. I know I can learn how."

"Get it, then," he'll be sure to say, "if you can learn to operate it, I can." (For no man will admit there is anything a woman can do that he can't).

—Betsy Anne Schellhase.

No cost or obligation while you give it a home trial

Our dealers are so sure you will like the Freed-Eisemann that this week they will gladly install a set in your home without obligation, so that you may give it a liberal trial. Telephone today.

300 MISSOURI EDITORS TO ATTEND CONVENTON

Annual Meeting of Association to Be Held at Hotel Chase Oct. 15-17.

More than 300 members of the Missouri State Press Association are expected to attend the annual convention of the association to be held at Hotel Chase from Oct. 15 to 17, inclusive.

Business sessions of the association will be held Thursday and Friday morning and election of officers Saturday morning will bring the convention to a close. Eugene Roach of the Carthage Democrat is the president of the association now.

Tentative arrangements for entertainment of the editors and their wives were made yesterday by the arrangements committee, meeting at the Statler Hotel. A luncheon will be given the visiting editors at noon Thursday by the Associated Industries of Missouri at which Prof. D. Dyer of Vanderbilt University and Harry Scullin of St. Louis will be the principal speakers. In the evening the visitors will be taken to see "Rose Marie," musical comedy showing at the Schubert-Jefferson Theater.

Friday afternoon editors and their wives will be guests of the Fairmount Jockey Club at the race track near Collinsville. A special race, "The Missouri Press Handicap," will be one of the features of the program. Those not visiting the track will have an opportunity to visit Shaw's Garden and the Merchants' Exchange.

The entertainment will end with a banquet Friday night at the Chase Hotel under the auspices of the Post-Dispatch. Several prominent speakers are expected to address this meeting.

HORSEMEAT EATERS REBEL

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Lovers of horseflesh, meaning what a French official pompously calls "hippophagoi," or horse eaters, and not followers of the sport of Kings, are up in arms. The city authorities of Paris, to raise additional funds, have put a tax on the "poor man's beefsteak" of about $1 for each 200 pounds.

As horsemeat is the only meat that inhabitants of the poorer quarters of Paris can afford, their representatives in the Municipal Council have introduced motions to have the obnoxious tax removed. However, the poor are not the only consumers of horsemeat. Minced raw and eaten in sandwiches, it is supposed to have great virtue in cases of consumption, and many consumers in the cheaper restaurants of the city eat it under the impression that it is prime beef.

HIS BAD HEADACHES SOON HEADED OFF

Sufferers from sick headaches frequently do not know that this symptom, with which at times almost every one is troubled, is often due to poisons in the body that have not been taken care of properly, on account of constipation or a torpid liver.

Such sufferers will be interested in the following story by Mr. Jeff Jervis, of Endicott, Ky., telling how he found relief from his own disorders.

"I began having severe headaches," says Mr. Jervis. "I can't tell just how they would begin, but soon my head felt like it would split open and I would be so sick I felt like I was paralyzed.

"I would have shooting pains in my neck and, if I turned my head, I felt like it would crack at my neck. My eyeballs were sore and I would vomit. I would be 'torn to pieces' for a day or two. I would take headache medicine and feel so queer afterwards I'd be scared. I didn't feel right—I felt numb."

In spite of these distressing symptoms, Mr. Jervis was soon to find relief through following the wise advice of a friend. To use his own words—

"I was telling a neighbor and he said, 'Get some Black-Draught and take a big dose when you feel a headache coming on.' I did it and took a few doses each night.

"Soon I had these headaches headed off. Now it is very seldom that I have one at all. I just keep Black-Draught and use it when I need it. I don't let myself get constipated."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been found to relieve sick headaches in thousands of cases that were due to constipation or a torpid liver. Containing no mineral drugs, it acts gently, helping the organs to drive out the poisons and regain a state of healthy activity.

Black-Draught has been in successful use for 80 years.

My Beauty Secret ## is internal bathing

MY skin is lovely—the despair of many girls who know me. It is clear and smooth—unmarked by flaws of any kind. It is never oily, never odorous. But it was, for years, unsightly and humiliating until a doctor told me Pluto Water was my need.

Would you be beautiful? Then do what I did. Wash internally! Take harmless, beneficial Pluto Water and see your skin grow soft and fresh and young. Tainted skins are tell-tale proof of noxious intestinal accumulations. You must flush away this source of mischief. Health, as well as beauty, is endangered if you don't.

Pluto works in 30 minutes to two hours after taking—gently but effectively. Unlike pills it thoroughly washes the bowel area—the first step towards that healthy condition of the system that is requisite for a healthy skin.

Pluto Water is bottled under ideal conditions at famous French Lick Springs. Physicians prescribe it. Druggists everywhere sell it.

DECIDEDLY THE BEST THING SHE EVER USED

ys Herb Juice Has Completely Reconstructed Her Stomach and Digestive Organs as Well as Relieved Her of Constipation.

MRS. EDWARD BALL

"Before I used your Herb Juice, though I had about as bad a case of indigestion, gastritis and constipation as anyone could have and still keep going," said Mrs. Edward Ball, who resides at 4725 Greer Ave., St. Louis, Mo., when she happened to see the Herb Juice man in Alton.

"I was in a terrible condition," continued Mrs. Ball. "I was just all run down and worn out and run down generally. No matter what I ate, it would not digest it. It seemed that no sooner than my food reached my stomach it would ferment, causing me to suffer great pain and that tight feeling from gas. I was dreadfully constipated, and had been for a number of years. Although I have taken practically everything I could hear of, I never seemed to get anything that gave me relief. Some time ago I began taking Herb Juice and I must admit that this medicine has given me more relief than I ever dreamed I would get. In fact I feel better today than I have in several years. My friends all tell me that I look like a different person. I feel now as though I never was sick a day in my life. My stomach is in excellent condition and I can eat most anything I want without it causing me any trouble. Those pains and the tight, bloated feeling from gas never bother me anymore, and my bowels are in good condition. I have found Herb Juice to be the greatest tonic-laxative that I have ever used, and through its mild and gentle action on the bowels, liver and kidneys it purifies one's whole system. In brief, Herb Juice has made a well woman of me and I am always glad to speak a good word for it wherever I go."

Druggists are now calling daily to see the Herb Juice man, who has established headquarters at Judge & Dolph Drug Co., 514 Washington Ave., making arrangements for publication and praising Herb Juice that their friends may be induced to try the great remedy which is relieving so many sufferers. Medical News Service of St. Louis Tuberculosis Society

No. 10 — Tuberculosis in Infancy.

This is the tenth of a series of articles on matters pertaining to tuberculosis which are being prepared by medical experts and distributed among St. Louis physicians by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. The others will be sent out every week, and will contain the latest medical information on the subject.

Tuberculosis is a common disease in childhood and occurs even in early infancy. Any organ in the body may be affected, particularly the lungs, glands, bones and meninges. Contrary to a common belief, the disease is not hereditary and is rarely ever present at birth. Even though the mother is in the last stages of consumption at the time of the child's birth, if the infant is promptly removed from the tuberculosis environment, it will not develop the disease. Infection occurs most often from exposure to another individual suffering from the disease, and less frequently from an infected milk supply. Children are very susceptible to the disease and even a brief exposure, such as a short visit to a friend or relative who has consumption, may result in infection.

Infants especially have very little resistance to tuberculosis and the mortality rate from tuberculosis is higher in infancy than at any other age period, three-fourths of all the infants contracting the disease under one year of age dying. Certain other infections, such as measles and whooping cough, further lower the resistance to the disease. The commonest form of tuberculosis in children is that involving the lungs and the tracheobronchial glands at the hilum of the lungs. Indeed, even when the disease seems limited to the bones and glands, it is a good rule to take an X-ray of the chest, as serious and easily overlooked lesions may also be present in the lungs.

Common Early Symptoms.

The commonest early symptoms of pulmonary tuberculosis is children are persistent cough, attacks of unexplained fever or afternoon elevation of temperature and asthenia. Later in the disease there may be anemia, loss of weight and more or less constant fever, but the child may appear to be well nourished and healthy and yet the disease be firmly established. Of special importance in the physicial examniation are persistently localized collections of moist rales, exaggeration in voice or breath sounds, or impaired resonance persisting beyond the duration of ordinary pneumonia.

In this connection, it must be remembered that the lesion in childhood shows little or no preference for the apices of the lungs—it may just as well be in the lower lobes. The X-ray and the tuberculin skin tests (von Pirquet and intradermal reactions) are of enormous help in establishing the correct diagnosis. Thickening along the bronchial tree and heavy hilum shadows so commonly seen in the X-rays of adults are usually absent in the healthy child and apparently slight changes in the X-ray shadow may be of great significance. In such cases the tuberculin test is often of great value and simple to perform. A positive von Pirquet test in a child under two years of age may be regarded as indicating active tuberculosis somewhere in the body, at three or four years as indicating an infection which is probably still active, and in older children the presence of a focus the activity or latency of which must be determined by other evidence.

At Age of 10 Years.

At ten years of age about one-third of all children in this part of the country give positive tuberculin reactions indicating that they have been infected with the tubercle bacillus but not necessarily that the lesion is still active or causing symptoms. Repeated negative tests with reliable tuberculin is strong evidence against such infection. Absolute proof of infection may be obtained by finding the bacilli in the sputum. Since young children swallow the phlegm coughed up, this must be obtained by special methods. A good way is to hold the tongue down with a tongue depressor in the left hand, then provoke coughing by irritating the pharynx with a cotton swab, when the coughed up mucus will adhere to the swab and may be examined in the usual way.

FOR SAFETY OF THE PUBLIC

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—London bus drivers are formally commanded not to eat buns while steering their cars through the crowded streets of the city. A circular to this effect has been issued from the offices of the bus company. "The front of a public service vehicle in crowded traffic is not the place for bun eating," it reads. "No driver can do his job properly and look out for passengers if he is half-choked with food."

Bus conductors have also been ordered to refrain from whistling and singing, and the conductors have made a protest, alleging that high-brow passengers complain because the men generally whistle or sing ragtime.

"If we preferred grand opera to popular music it would be all right with these long-haired folks with pale faces that can't stand to have real live folks enjoy themselves," one disgusted conductor explained.

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE FOR COMMUNITY FUND

Bert N. Lang Chairman of Drive; 4500 Workers Volunteer Services.

Bert H. Lang, chairman of the Campaign Committee for the fourth annual community fund campaign, which will be held Nov. 13-23, inclusive, announced his Executive Committee yesterday. With Lang as chairman, the committee includes the following:

Vice chairmen, Daniel K. Catlin, general chairman of the Community Fund; L. Wade Childress, Thomas N. Dysart, Thomas C. Hennings, Daniel N. Kirby, Samuel C. McCluney and A. Orville Wilson; J. Lionberger Davis, chairman special gifts division; Samuel B. McPheeters, chairman city division; W. H. Henby, chairman county division; Walter B. Weisenburger, chairman employe division; B. E. Chappelow, chairman publicity division; Christy M. Farrar, chairman speakers' division; R. King Kauffman, chairman foreign gifts division; Mrs. E. H. Steedman, chairman information division, and Daniel W. Bowles, chairman colored population division.

The same plan of campaign which has been used the last three years will be followed with a few changes. Lang's committee has enlisted 4500 volunteer workers, including 200 in special gifts division, 1800 in the city division, 500 in the county division, 250 in the colored division and 1800 in the employe division. Service will be given these various soliciting divisions by volunteer workers of the other divisions.

The special gifts division will be responsible for securing pledges from all former subscribers of $500 and over and of all other persons who, in the opinion of the Rating Committee, are able to give $500 or more. This division will be given a quota based on the amounts given by these people last year, with an additional necessary percentage of increase for reaching the campaign goal. Credit will be given this committee for all the subscriptions they secure.

All territory within the city limits will be the responsibility of the city division, except that which will be covered by the colored division. Solicitors will be asked to secure pledges from all former givers, as well as securing as many new subscribers as possible.

The county will be covered in the same way by the county division.

The same plan will be followed by the colored division among the negro citizens of the city. Employes of all factories, stores and offices, which employ 25 people or more, will be solicited by the employe division. Places employing less than 25 will be the responsibility of the city and county divisions.

The foreign gifts division will solicit by mail subscriptions from all corporations and individuals likely to give to the Community Fund that cannot be reached by personal calls. This refers especially to corporations doing local business, but with headquarters elsewhere.

An information service which will give information about the Community Fund and its member organizations will be set up by the publicity division. Speakers for all groups will be made available by the speakers' division. Division chairmen are working daily securing campaign personnel and they expect to be completely organized by Nov. 1—two weeks before the campaign begins.

POPULARITY OF VELVET GOWNS STILL CONTINUES

Henna-Colored Hats Also Are Numerous Among Women of Fashion Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Velvet continues its successful reign in the world of fashion, and has been seen worn by the most strikingly dressed women in the crowds attending the opening days of the Longchamps races. A wider silhouette and slightly molded line have been adopted by practically everyone except, of course, for the tailored suit, which remains severe and masculine in its lines. The races also displayed smart coats in broadcloth, and even some in light shaded tweeds.

One green velvet ensemble seen in the Jockey Club's inclosure had a coat full in the back, a sable collar and cuffs and a Russian toque of green velvet. Besides, it was a dark lavender blue tweed dress and coat. This coat had three box pleats on the sides, collar and cuffs of gray fox and a lavender rayon felt for a hat.

Another fur of grayish tones, resembling chinchilla, is popular this season. It is known as "susilki," and its origin is an American rat. Another novelty is a peroxided moleskin, in which a golden shade is induced by the same treatment the hairdressers use to lighten milady's tresses. Quite a number of women at the races wore henna-colored hats.

Of Course, OWNERS LIKE THE McHENRY OIL BURNER

They don't have to heave coal or lug out heavy buckets of ashes. Just a turn of the wrist gives a small flame or a roaring fire.
The McHenry Oil Burner makes no soot or dust; no ashes, dirt or coal in the basement. It uses no electricity and has no complicated parts to get out of order.
There is a size for any warm-air furnace, or hot-water or steam boiler, which will keep the home warm and comfortable in the coldest weather.
Wouldn't you like to be free from heating troubles next Winter? Just telephone our nearest branch and one of our heating engineers will call any day or evening.

Heat When You Need It Most

GENTLEMEN:
In the winter of 1923 you installed in my home at 1602 Goodfellow Av., one of your oil burners. This burner was so entirely satisfactory that I prevailed upon my mother to have one installed the following winter in her residence at 5583 Bartmer Av. Both of these burners have given complete satisfaction in the way of heating, comfort and convenience. Before using your burner the writer had previously used another type of oil burner and found your burner superior in every way.
The slight additional cost of oil over soft coal is more than compensated for by the uniformity of heat, convenience of operation and cleanliness of both basements and houses with the use of your burner.
We will be glad to recommend your burner to anyone who is in the market for an oil burner.
Yours very truly,
Signed: JNO. M. DOLAN.

Contributions and returns from benefit affairs added $107.90 to the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund during the past week, bringing it to a total of $5903.47. This lacks $1600 of the amount needed to pay the ice bills for the past summer's work.

The largest single cash contribution of the week came from the Sorority Circle, whose members sent $40, their second donation this year, through Mrs. David R. Smith, 5842 Bartmer avenue, treasurer. The organization, which has always been actively interested in the work of the Ice Fund, opened the fund last May with a $10 check. Other cash donations were $10 from Harriet F. Hall, 243 Bristol avenue, Webster Groves; $5 from Mrs. Emma D. Crane, Forest Park Hotel; $2 from "A Friend" and $1 from J. M.

A show at 1206 Walton avenue netted $13.45 for the babies' fund. The workers who promoted the affair were: Maria Golbart, Margaret Diedrich, Clara and Edith Golbart and Molle Bornstein.

Two sisters, Estelle M. Leabig and Erma L. Leabig, daughters of Mrs. D. M. Leabig, 1332A North Sarah street, have been among the most active friends of the babies this summer. Assisted by a playmate, Bonnie Heath, they sold lemonade on numerous evenings from their stand at Sarah and Easton, and have given the proceeds, amounting to $10.25, to the Post-Dispatch Free Ice Fund. Estelle, age 11, managed the enterprise, and Erma, age 9, served as cashier.

Another group of workers, this one in the 5700 block of Pershing avenue, also concentrated their efforts in behalf of the babies, on a lemonade stand. They cleared $9 for the fund. The names of the children follow: Jane Levy, Pearl Wolff, Betty Kissack and Ruth Levy.

Three boys gave a show at 4600 Evans avenue on Thursday, Sept. 17, and earned $2.20, which they gave to the Ice Fund. Joseph Gazeli portrayed a strong man of the world, while Edward Walters and Billy Hennisey took the part of clowns. Their interest in the work for the babies, as well as that of other boys and girls, is most commendable.

MALARIA SURVEY IN MISSOURI

State Health Board Takes Steps to Eradicate the Disease.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 3.—The Missouri State Board of Health is devoting considerable attention to the problem of prevention of malaria. In connection with this work a field survey of sections of the State on malaria conditions was recently completed, said Dr. James Stewart, secretary of the board, today. J. A. Le Prince, senior sanitary engineer with the United States Public Health Service, directed the survey. Le Prince was an assistant to Col. Gorgas during the eradication of the malaria mosquito in the Panama Canal Zone during the building of the canal.

Plans have been made for a continuation of the fight on malaria in the counties of Missouri where the prevalence is still high. Methods will be changed and new lines of attack started to meet new conditions. Draining of all mosquito breeding places or proper maintenance to prevent the breeding of germ carriers was urged by Le Prince. During the survey in five counties where malaria was formerly quite common, the investigation showed that it had decreased in sections where proper screening conditions were found. Where screening was not carefully observed more cases were found.

2-Lb. Mushroom Among Pumpkins.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Mushroom stories, of which there has recently been an unprecedented run in France, are supplanting the time honored fish story. The latest from a religious source, and, therefore, should be taken as unimpeachable. The parish priest at Thionne, near Moulins, recently gathered in his garden a mushroom which weighed 3 pounds. The diameter of the top was 17 inches and it towered 15 inches above the surrounding garden plot. It is pointed out that this giant among mushrooms grew in a patch of pumpkins. The idea is put forward as one for Luther Burbank to work on.

'WORTHLESS? THEN GIVE IT TO ME,' HE DID--NOW LAND IS WORTH $1,000,000

Mrs. Drusilla Carr's Story of Disgusted Stranger Wins Her a Squatter's Title to Tract Near Gary

For 49 Years, After Accepting Jess Bingham's Gift, She Clung to the Land Though Everyone Said Sand Dunes Were Only Fit to Give Away—When Land Became Valuable in 1908 Two Sets of Heirs of Former Owners Claimed It—But Mrs. Carr After 17 Years of Litigation Establishes "Adverse Possession" and May Use Income From Land Even Though She Probably Cannot Sell It.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MILLER, Ind., Oct. 3.

THIS stranger was a jovial, hearty fellow. "How d'ye do? How d'ye do?" he said to everyone in the town tavern. "My name's Bingham—Jess Bingham. I'm from New Yawrk state." Which made him a man of parts; few visitors from so far away came to Miller, Ind., those days. It was a good day and a half ride from Chicago along a beastly sand road. And what was there to see when you had arrived? Nothing but a blue lake and sand dunes.

"I've traded my farm back home for a farm hereabouts," announced Jess Bingham. "But danged if I see any farmin' country. Where's the land lie that belonged to the Injun Pocakauis?"

A tavern idler in return for a drink offered to show him the half section more or less he had designated. It lay along the shore of Lake Michigan where the Grand Calumet River runs into the lake. It consisted of a range of sand dunes shaded by a few scraggly trees. Jess Bingham took one look and slapped his boot-top.

"Hornswoggled, dad burn it, hornswoggled!"

"Stung, eh?" interpreted his Hoosier guide.

"Yep. Why I traded a good farm for this sand pile. What could a man grow here? Nothing but sand fleas."

"There's good fishin' in that there lake."

But Jess Bingham shook his head. He was a farmer, not a fisherman. He had been swindled. Sadly he walked back to the village and to a group on the street told his story.

"That land ain't wuth givin' away," he finished.

A young woman in the crowd pushed forward. She was about 20 years old and had a baby in her arms.

"If you're going to give it away, won't you please give it to me?" she asked.

Jess Bingham smiled, broadly. The idea tickled him. What could this girl do with 160 acres of sand? He questioned her. She said her name was Mrs. Drusilla Carr and that she was the wife of Henry Carr, a fisherman. They lived in the village.

The Gift

The man from New York walked home with her and met the husband. Carr was not so keen for the land as his wife. He made his living from the lake which was free, so why bother about these brush-clad piles of sand? But Mrs. Carr persisted. She didn't really suppose that Bingham would give the land away, but while he was considering it she wanted him to take her into account as an applicant.

"All right," said Bingham, finally, "the land is yours. It wouldn't never do me no good, but you can live on it and fish. When I get back to New Yawrk I'll send you the deed."

"Thank you for your kind favor," replied Mrs. Carr, in the mannerly way of young ladies of 1876.

Drusilla Carr was now a woman of property.

Jess Bingham passed out of her life the next day. She never heard from him again. He did not send her the deed he promised. Perhaps it was an oversight on his part. Anyway, she had his verbal contract made before witnesses. She felt that her possession of the land was assured.

It was a long fight to hold that land. First the Carrs had to make enough money from the white fish and sturgeon they caught to put up a log cabin. The cabin cost in materials perhaps $20 but in labor a good deal more. It was the young bride's first home of her own. A great many pounds of fish drawn laboriously from the blue and shining waters of Lake Michigan went into that home and its furnishings.

Even then, the Carrs had not much of a house. It was only a shack built upon the sand—a pleasant place in summer time when the breezes fought off the shimmering heat, but bitter cold in winter.

Yet to Mrs. Carr is was a grand estate. She had been reared on a small farm near Valparaiso, Ind. and had come to Miller to look for one of Henry Carr's relatives. He was a plain fisherman of little education and her hope of a career for him could not have been a very bright hope. Now, two years after marriage, they lived in a half-section. True, the land was considered worthless. But to her it meant a great deal. It was her own. She explored every part of it and memorized the boundaries. Her feet, those first few years, made patient paths over dune and across gully. Every yard of the land gave her joy.

She held to it tenaciously. In time the fishing along their water front became so poor that Carr could no longer make a living. He wanted to move to another part of the lake.

"No," said Mrs. Carr, "we'll not budge off this land. It is ours and we'll keep it."

She Holds On

When the powder mills were built near Gary, five miles away, Mrs. Carr sent her husband to work there. They must stay on their land and make money enough somehow to pay taxes. Did she dream that some day this stretch of sand dunes would be valuable? She did not. There was in her mind simply the urge most women have for a place on earth they can call their own. She was by nature a homesteader. She clutched the thought of land ownership desperately.

Even nature seemed willing to cheat her. The Grand Calumet River changed its course many times during those years. The sand dunes marched and receded. The lake itself crept up and stole little hills away in a night. But Mrs. Carr guarded her domain jealously. She never lost track of its boundaries. The topography of the land might change but she never changed. Always there was in her heart the intense pride of possession.

She had six children, two of whom died in childhood. It was for Fred and Henry and Nettie and Clara that she began to plan.

As she grew older and wiser doubts arose as to her title to the property. Jess Bingham had given it to her by word of mouth but he had sent no deed. Slowly she managed to piece together a chain of title. The first owner of the land had been Pocakauis, an Indian who had got it by Government grant. The grant did not give him the right to sell the land, but he sold it anyway to the Ewine brothers, Indian tradesmen, who paid Pocakauis $4, some whisky for his birthright. Thus, from the start the title was clouded.

The Ewine brothers sold it in 1836 to William Holliday of Chicago for $12. Then the land passed to George W. Ewing and then to a real estate firm in New York, which traded it to Jesse Bingham. At least, this was the series of succession as near as Mrs. Carr could make out. Most of the records in the case were obscure where they existed at all and matters were further complicated by lot designations which were hopelessly involved. These lot divisions made two parcels of the land, one containing 43 acres and the other 157 acres, approximately.

Yet Mrs. Carr seemed secure in her possession. For 32 years no one came forward to claim the land. The Carrs steadfastly maintained their residence and managed to scrape enough together to pay taxes. Mrs. Carr reared her children, giving them the best start in life she could. The elder son, Henry, became a locomotive engineer. Fred Carr worked for his mother at the beach resort she opened. The girls married.

Claimants Appear

In 1906 industrial Chicago started its march toward Miller. The city spread southward along the lake shore, pushing onward a hideous mass of red brick and painted steel and belching chimneys. Judge Elbert Gary established the main plant of the United States Steel Corporation near the western border of Mrs. Carr's tract. A town grew up around it, the present thriving city of Gary. It was no longer a lonely horizon for Mrs. Carr's eyes. The thunder of mills and factories rumbled all about. The Carrs, sitting by their cabin door of an evening realized that wealth had come to Miller, Ind.

These sandy acres took on almost overnight a miraculous value. What land that was not in use as factory sites might be sold to factory workers for home lots, or to the hundreds of vacationers who had found in the dune country a new playground. Mrs. Carr, tremulous with the thought of sudden riches, consulted Everett G. Ballard, a Chicago attorney. Ballard told her that she had a squatter's right to the land, even though Bingham's oral contract with her could be overthrown in court. She had by her years of perseverance and sacrifice established "adverse possession" of the land.

The theory of "adverse possession" in law rests upon unmolested and unchallenged occupancy of property over a long period of years. Claims of ownership by outsiders to such property become outlawed in 20 years. Attorney Ballard advised Mrs. Carr to bring suit to "quiet" title to her holdings. To do this she must publicly announce her claim to the land and stand ready to defend it in court.

In 1908 the first claimants bobbed up. They were Mrs. Jessie Philbin of New York and Mrs. Nettie Tyler of Washington, D. C., heirs of William Holliday, who had at one time owned the Carr tract. They possessed papers tending to show that Holliday had listed the tract as part of his estate and had never signed a deed or transfer of title to a purchaser. On this ground they challenged Mrs. Carr's right to the tract.

While this case was slowly grinding through the courts another set of claimants appeared. These were Mrs. Rose Hitt, Aza Hitt, W. W. Hall, Mrs. Mary B. Matthews and others of Chicago, who asserted that they were heirs of Congressman Robert H. Hitt of Illinois, who had owned the land under a Government deed. This deed, they contended, should abrogate the original deed to Pocakauis and should dispossess Mrs. Carr.

She had very little money at the beginning to carry on her legal fight. Ballard and associated lawyers helped to finance the first litigation. She was a widow, her husband having died in 1902.

For 17 years the law suits dragged on. Mrs. Carr's children helped her all they could. Her first victory was won when in 1913 the Appellate Court at La Porte Ind., disallowed the claims of the Philbin heirs on their merits as to one parcel of the tract. In 1915 at Michigan City the claim of the Hitt heirs to 157 acres of the land was overruled. There were appeals and the fight centered on the remaining 43 acres.

Mrs. Carr was able to finance the later skirmishing by leases on part of her property. She has leased building lots for more than 200 cottages at $50 each a year, giving her an income of $10,000 or more annually. With this aid she was able to carry her battle to the last ditch. Only a few days ago at La Porte a jury disallowed claims of the Philbin and Hitt heirs to the 43-acre parcel. The case was so long drawn that two of the jurors lost their jobs by being away for such a protracted period and a third was obliged to petition the Court for an advance on jury fees so he could buy food for his family.

Only a Squatter's Title

The verdict is by no means final. Although the presiding Judge ruled that Bingham's oral gift to Mrs. Carr should stand as a legal contract the Court did not presume to establish Bingham's title to the land he gave away. Mrs. Carr's title is as yet wholly a negative one. The courts have thrown out all claims by others to her land but they have not positively affirmed her own title. She is in possession and probably will continue so, but must be ready at all times to defend her occupancy of the tract. Both the Philbin and Hitt heirs announced intention of filing an appeal, but whether they will carry the costly business further appears doubtful.

So Mrs. Drusilla Carr today is in the position of one who has best claim to land worth $1,000,000, but not an incontestable claim. She may lease the land, yet it would be difficult for her to sell it. Her victory is not in the lump sum of $1,000,000 but rather in a lucrative tenure of this valuable property which yields her in rentals now at least $29,000 a year.

* * * * *

The correspondent called on Mrs. Carr at her bright, new cottage a mile up the paved road from Miller. It sits back from the pavement in a shady yard and no contentious neighbors press it close on either side. It is a pleasant place and peaceful, with a bank of flowers about the screened-in front porch and a canary bird in a sunny cage at one corner. A house for old age, a scene for dimming eyes, a calm for tired limbs.

She is tired, although her smile is brave and quite melts away the wrinkles in her face. Mrs. Carr is 69 years old now, a mother and a grandmother.

"We've been celebrating the end of the last suit," she explained, as if to apologize for the weariness in her voice," and it was a little too much for me. "Won't you sit down?"

A Grandmother Now

She brushed back her gray hair with uncertain hand and sank into a rocker. One of her grandsons came into the room just then—Edward, 19 years old, whom she has cared for since his mother died. Edward was impatient to be off somewhere on an errand of great adventure.

"You'd better run along and fetch it, Edward," said his grandmother.

She had bought a new Hudson coach for herself and Edward, she explained, as he flung out of the room. They had a Ford, but she wanted something better now that this last suit was settled. The truth was most apparent. Edward had teased her for that Hudson as he used to tease her for cookies.

"A big car, grandmother," he had said, over and over again. "A big car."

"That plaguey boy," grandmother had replied, "well, I suppose I'll have to let him have it."

Grandmother. It is her place now. She has 16 grandchildren, and they all live nearabouts. One of her sons lives next door. They are a loyal clan, the Carrs, who stood by grandmother before she was rich, and now she stands by them.

"What are you going to do with that $1,000,000," her visitor inquired.

She gave an amused, flustered, grandmotherly laugh.

"Dear me. Dear me. I haven't even got it yet, young man. I don't know that I shall ever have even half that much. I'm going to try and sell off some of my land now, but dear me, it isn't sold, you know."

"Well, if you sell it what will you do?"

She thought she was being teased, but was too polite to say, "Run along, off with you."

"Will you build a big house?"

No, she would not. Positively not. What would she want with a big house? Wasn't this house good enough for anyone, young man? The last, rather sharply.

"It's all I want. It is a good house and comfortable. What would I do with a big house?"

She Is Content

Her keen eyes ran over the furnishings leaving little stories of little prides. The new carpet on the floor. The radio set in a corner. The leather divan. The what-not near the brick fireplace. All to her were very fine, this woman who had lived years in a log cabin.

"Fine clothes?"

Lawsy me, what would she want with fine clothes? She wasn't much for going about anyway. Diamonds on those honest, toil-worn fingers? Sables against her grandmotherly wrinkles? Silks Satins. Laces? Not for her!

"This is plenty good enough for me," she said. "All I ask is to be able to do something for my children. They've worked nard and they've never had very much. I want to help them. And I will, of course—" this with great dignity—"contribute to any good charitable movement. I am liberal in such matters."

She spoke of the years in the law courts.

"I hope my days of worry are over. I don't think anybody will sue me again. The last trial was such a time. But we had a nice Judge and a good old jury. They were all old men and understood how it feels to be old without anything to live on. That is what worried me so. I didn't think about the millions—are you sure the land is worth that much? Yes? Dear me!"

She lives alone with Edward, doing most of her housework unaided. She likes, you imagine, to potter about with recipes and

The True Life Story of a Bank Cashier Who Lived Quietly Beyond His Mean

FRANK E. HARROLD OF DECATUR, ILL., ENDS LIFE AFTER CONFESSING THEFT OF $125,000 IN BONDS

He Had Been Trying for Years to Live Up to the Standard of a City Banker on a Small Town Salary—His Family Was Not Extravagant by Well-to-Do Measurements and No One Doubted but What Harrold Made Enough Money From His Various Enterprises to Afford It—Chose Suicide Rather Than Face Bank Associates Who Might Have Been Lenient and Allowed Him to Make Restitution.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 3.

THE bank examiner was checking the assets of the Farmers' State Bank and Trust Co. He had looked over the loans and counted the cash on hand. All this occupied him and Cashier Frank E. Harrold until noon.

"After lunch," said the bank examiner, "I'll check the bond box."

"Oh, yes, the bond box," agreed Cashier Harrold.

Did he speak listlessly? Did his voice indicate worry? The bank examiner happened not to notice. None of the employes noticed either. As far as they saw, this was only one of two dozen or more examinations of the bank which Harrold had gone through during his 12 years as cashier. Honest bank officials are not supposed to look worried or speak listlessly when the examiner comes. And was not Harrold honest? Oh, of course. That went without saying in Decatur.

Cashier Harrold sat for a few minutes in his office after the bank examiner spoke about lunch and the bond box. His eyes perhaps rested on the clock longer than was necessary to see the time. After lunch. After lunch. Tick tock. Tick tock. The bond box would be opened after lunch. Tick tock. Presently, he got up from his banker's chair and reached for the crutches he always used on long walks. His left leg had been paralyzed since he was a child.

"Well," said Cashier Harrold to no one in particular, "I think I'll go out"

He Leaves the Bank

They thought he meant to lunch. But he did not mean that.

Instead, he went to his handsome home in the best residence section of Decatur. To his wife and children he mentioned that he would need the family automobile that afternoon. There was a little discussion of the point, but in a few minutes Cashier Harrold drove away.

It was after lunch. The bank examiner would be waiting for him so they could go into the bond box together. But Frank Harrold did not return to the bank. He turned his car toward the country and drove for miles into De Witt County. When he had reached his farm near the town of Clinton he stopped the car beside a summer cottage in the yard

Homer Bishop, a tenant on the place, saw Harrold drive up but thought nothing of it. He and other members of the family, Bishop knew, often came to the cottage on one errand or another. So Cashier Harrold was thus able to avoid his appointment at the bank and come to this deserted farmhouse without question.

He went in and closed the door.

* * * * *

At seven o'clock that evening Homer Bishop chanced to pass the cottage. He saw the automobile still standing beside the gate but there were no lights in the house. This puzzled him. He decided to investigate. Going in he found Cashier Harrold dead, half slumped against a chair. Harrold had shot himself.

Four Letters

On a table near the body were four letters addressed as follows:

Mrs. Olive Harrold (his wife).
Francis Harrold (his oldest son).
John R. Pogue (president of the bank).
W. E. Turner (the bank examiner).

* * * * *

Meanwhile, at the bank, there was great excitement. The bank examiner, tired of waiting for Harrold to return had opened the bond box. He had discovered that $125 000 worth of the bonds were missing. A check-up had revealed that the bond box was in Harrold's charge, solely. He bought and sold the bonds and the directors accepted his accounting. Usually the bond account amounted to half a million dollars. Now it was $125,000 less than it should have been.

All afternoon Harrold's bank associates and Examiner Turner awaited his return, confident that he could explain the absence of the bonds. Directors summoned by President Pogue joined the anxious group. When anything goes wrong with a bank in Illinois the directors are liable for twice the amount of their stock to protect depositors.

Then in the evening came this telephone call:

"Mr. Harrold has killed himself."

"Ah," said the bank examiner.

The letters to Pogue and Turner were read. The exact wording has not been made public but in them Harrold admitted taking the bonds. He indicated that the bonds had not been appropriated to his own personal use, but had been loaned to business friends who wanted to use them as collateral for quick borrowings. Something had gone wrong, the men who got the bonds could not return them and Harrold was left holding the bag.

Examiner Turner decided that the bank must be closed. So Decatur awoke the next morning to learn that this institution with deposits of $1,663,756 would not open for business. A statement by President Pogue to the 8500 depositors announced that the bank's cash reserve of $45,000 and the stockholders' liability of $400,000 would amply cover any loss and that the bank would pay 100 per cent as soon as the examination was completed.

The town's amazement was chiefly concerned with Frank E. Harrold. Even in the face of his confession and suicide his friends refused to believe the worst. It had all been a ghastly mistake, they were sure. Harrold had used the bonds unethically but not dishonestly. When his plans for restitution miscarried he lost his head and could see only one way out. There was another way. He might have made a clean breast of things to his associates and agreed to make good the loss. There would have been no publicity, the bank need not have closed and public confidence in it and in Harrold would have remained loyal.

Such was the prevailing sentiment when the correspondent reached Decatur on the day of Harrold's funeral. It seemed a remarkable tribute to the man. The town felt as if it had lost a valued citizen through a trick of chance—a cashier from the bank, a teacher from the Methodist Sunday School, a husband and father from the list of Decatur's influential men. Frank Harrold's life had coursed evenly along a pleasant path for 52 years only to take a sudden and inexplicable turn into crooked lane at the end.

FRANK E. HARROLD.

Crowd at Funeral

A host of friends attended the funeral at the Harrold home. They literally filled the house with flowers. Streets in the neighborhood were barred by police guards against ordinary traffic. A goodly share of this display of sympathy was, of course, inspired by Mrs. Harrold and her children. Yet part of it went to the dead man. If his life had ended meanly after years of systematically robbing those who trusted him there would have been few mourners in the procession. But a different tragedy had happened to Frank Harrold. Decatur is not sure but what he was as much the victim as anyone else.

His letters, which might explain the mystery, have not been released to the papers because bank officials hope to trace the bonds and recover them.

However, to one not swayed by a liking for the man, it is reasonably apparent how he happened to end as he did. As is the case in many a small bank the cashier of the Farmers' State Bank and Trust Co. was chosen for character and steadiness rather than financial ability. Harrold came with his family to Decatur from Clinton, Ill., in 1913, when the bank was organized. He had been Circuit Clerk and Recorder of De Witt County and before that a school teacher. The bank position was considerable advancement for him. It changed him from rural to city life and altered entirely the type of man which he thought the public expected him to be. He had been a small-town dealer in figures; now he was a city banker.

He went about, in his quiet, methodical way, the business of becoming a white-collar man of influence. For him now there must be a handsome home, an automobile, good clothes for himself and family, college education for his children. He had inherited land near Clinton from his father. To this farm he added purchases from time to time until he held title to some 320 acres. But there was a $20,000 mortgage on it when he died.

His salary as cashier was wholly inadequate to the position in Decatur which he resolved to support. He must have sidelines. He must become a man of many interests. He went into life insurance for one thing and owned stock in the International Life Insurance Co. But that was not enough. He became a promoter and organized the Wonder Furnace Co. This enterprise, always of doubtful success, was a burden rather than an asset. After his death examiners from the bank looked at the books of the Wonder company and found them in such a jumbled order that it was impossible to ascertain its true financial condition.

On the surface of things Frank Harrold prospered in Decatur. He lived in a home reputed to cost $20,000. He was a power in the church, served for a while as superintendent of the Sunday school and in later years taught a girls' Bible class. He was president of the Wonder Furnace Co. and cashier of a stable bank. He owned a farm estimated to be worth $60,000.

No Gossip About Him

Judging from all this there was no gossip about the scale of living of the Harrold family. Harrold, himself, never splurged, was of exemplary habits and modest speech. He educated his children well.

Yet, it seems certain that Frank Harrold, unknown to anyone, was living quietly beyond his means. Quietly beyond his means. It was a paradox which his friends could not understand. If he had been given to wild extravagances, gambling, drinking and trips out of town, they might have suspected. But they could not conceive of an unwarranted inflation in the apparently solid, staid, conservative well-to-do existence of the Harrold family.

Looking back now Decatur people probably realize that it cost Frank Harrold a great deal year in and year out to maintain his respectable position in the community. His salary at the bank never exceeded $3600 a year. True, he had his farm, but it was mortgaged and incomes from farms have been surprisingly negligible of late years. The furnace company was not much help. With children to clothe and educate, an automobile and big house to maintain, a reputation for generous giving to keep up—is it any wonder that Frank Harrold found himself short.

It had worried him as he hobbled on his crutches back and forth. His heart was in bad shape and the day before his suicide he suffered several attacks. Some men go to pieces trying to find money for extravagance, other men crash in a desperate effort to provide the necessities of life on a scale they have set for themselves.

Quite likely he felt that he could go further. The struggle to be a city banker and live a city banker's life wore him out. In a desperate moment he went to the bank box.

* * * * *

The correspondent asked Francis Harrold what his father had written him in that letter. We were seated on the Harrold veranda, and the perfume of funeral flowers was still about the house.

"He told me," said young Harrold, "that he was sorry he had to leave us. He said that Brother and I were strong boys and could look after mother. He advised us to go away from disgrace and settle somewhere else.

"But we're not going. I don't think there was a disgrace. I don't believe Daddy did anything wrong about those bonds. When the truth of this affair comes out there will be other names mentioned. I can't disclose what my father said in the letters about the real story. But knowing it I can walk down the street and hold my head just as high as anybody."

"My father was not himself these last few days. Monday evening the day before he happened he had a severe heart attack. The worry over business affairs wore him out. His act was entirely needless. He didn't have to kill himself. Hundreds of bankers, they tell me, find themselves in fixes like his and their affairs are hushed up. Well it is done now and we are not going to run away from it. We feel that we have more friends today than we ever had."

Literary Work a Hazardous Game Financially, Says Writer

—From the Living Age.

THAT literature is a bad and unprofitable business is the not very original conclusion of a paper on "The Trade of Authorship" contributed to The Author by then English novelist W. B. Maxwell. He admits that there was never a time when a lucky writer could make more money than at present, but he very much qualifies his admission by the further statement that there never was a time when it was so sard to be lucky.

"There never was a period," he writes, "when the trade of authorship was so lucrative as it can be and sometimes is nowadays; but it used to be a very much safer trade, and every year its security would seem to grow less. Authors not only have to gain a reputation; they are forced continuously to fight for its maintenance. Nowadays a single very successful novel can bring its author a fortune—I mean, a fortune of respectable amount taking into consideration the changed value of money and the sharply graded subtractive force of the supertax. But with the possibility of these great and hitherto undreamed-of prizes for the lucky few there come instability of position and precariousness of reward for the less fortunate many. Almost one might say that the old adage, "Nothing succeeds like success" should now be amended to "Nothing succeeds but success."

"People drop out of money-making with terrible rapidity. One year an author may be, so to speak, be at the top of the tree, watching the sun-warmed fruit of the highest branches, and a year or two later he may be at its base, gnawing the bark to keep body and soul together in the hard frost of winter. In other and plainer words, he may be fully employed, well paid, well praised; and then quite unexpectedly may find that the good time is over. Although he is doing as valuable work as ever, the work is no longer valued, or the market for it has vanished. . . . .

"In the book market, as I have hinted, the tendency would seem to be to cut up all the money among a comparatively few success-

Swiss Family Mutrux--Adventures of 12 St. Louis Children Abroad

They All Live in a Big Chateau Near Lausanne, Switzerland, and Though School Has Started It Is a Strange Enough School to Be Interesting—Mutrux, an Architect, and His Wife Make Their Dream of 20 Years Come True—Long Trip With Their 12 Children Accomplished Safely and They Are Enjoying a "Honeymoon."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland.

LOUIS MUTRUX and his wife, and incidentally their 12 minor children, have reached the end of the rainbow.

That, figuratively speaking, is the way the 14 Americans, doing Europe on the 20-year-delayed honeymoon of the elder Mutrux, characterizes the spot where they have decided to call home for the next 12 months.

When Mr. and Mrs. Mutrux left St. Louis last June with their even dozen children, to materialize a dream which they had held since their wedding day, a score of years before, there were those who shook their heads sadly and predicted that their neighbor would return, sadder and wiser, 'ere many moons had passed. Travelling about Europe with a couple of trunks, let alone a couple of minor children, is bad enough. But with 12 children, two automobiles, and a half dozen trunks—impossible!

But according to Mutrux—no, according to Mrs. Mutrux, because she is the one who originally would have carried the hod—every minute thus far, and some three months have passed—has been a honeymoon in reality.

The party sailed from New York on July 4. With the four youngest children, one a baby of seven months, Mrs. Mutrux came to New York from St. Louis on the train. Mutrux, two automobiles and eight assistants, made the journey overland. The passage was "ideal" and on arriving in France, the family motored from Cherbourg to Switzerland.

Now they are located for a year in the beautiful Chateau De Renans, a 250-year-old pile on the main road between Geneva and Lausanne, which formerly was the property of Prince De Conde, son of the Duke D'Aumale.

"I don't know how we are ever going to be able to tear ourselves away from this spot," said Mrs. Mutrux, showing the correspondent around the huge estate. "It's ideal for the children and this is their honeymoon as well as ours."

The Chateau

The chateau comprises about 20 or 30 acres. A large part is in woodland, a miniature forest, with a sycamore tree that, according to the Swiss Journal of Forestry, is the largest in all Switzerland. From all sides of the spacious 15-room chateau, spread beautiful vistas. The long, blue range of the French Juras to the rear and the Lake of Geneva and Alps of Haute Savoie with the jagged Dent de Midi before. With the lake a short distance, so close that the Mutrux children can make it in a row boat is Territe and the castle of Chillon, made famous by Byron's "Prisoner of Chillon." Across the lake, within easy rowing distance, is Evians-les-Bains, a noted French watering place. And then Lausanne lies but 12 minutes' car ride away.

A huge garden furnishes fresh fruit and vegetables; a small dairy across the way brings fresh milk every day; two Swiss maids, employed at a sum that would hire a third of one maid in America, care for the children, and a cook—the best in Switzerland, says Mrs. Mutrux—keeps the table loaded with the food that has kept the family in perfect health since they arrived in the Canton of Vaud.

Besides having the lake and nearby mountains, the Mutrux children have rigged up tennis courts, a miniature theater in one of the dependancies, swings, etc., around the place. For pets they already have a small menagerie—cats, a pair of dogs, rabbits, birds.

At the time this is written—early in September—magnolia trees are still in bloom on the chateau and hundreds of rambling roses cover trellis and arbor about the house. In brief—a honeymoon rendezvous that one usually finds in books but seldom in reality.

According to present plans, Mr. and Mrs. Mutrux will continue their travels this autumn. With the four elder children they will take the larger of the two automobiles and tour Switzerland, Belgium, Holland and then cross to England for a run around Wales and Scotland.

During the past two months they have covered a large part of the surrounding territory—Haute Savoie, the Canton of Vaud, Gruyere, and Eastern Switzerland. With the exception of the two or three youngest children, all of the family have been on the trips.

Daily, when not otherwise engaged, Mr. Mutrux charters a small flotilla of row boats, appoints various members of his "navy" as commanders, and goes for a trip around the nearby lake ports. Or, if fancy strikes the group, and the majority is willing, it is a trip up some nearby mountain.

The villagers of Renens and Lausanne, at first awestruck at the spectacle of so large a family, for, despite stories of the contrary, families of three and four are the exception rather than the rule in most of Switzerland, have taken the Americans for granted. But many are still skeptical as to the family all being genuine blood relations.

During the trip through France the party encountered many amusing incidents. Outside Dijon the larger car broke down. Night was fast approaching so the entire 14 piled into the smaller—it was a Ford—and chugged into the outskirts of Dijon. Anyone who knows the French provincial, can imagine the commotion. The country side turned out to view the cavalcade—admiring the couple who had heart enough to adopt the entire war-orphan contingent of a village.

The Mutrux family awheel in their two autos. Mrs. Mutrux and eight of the children are in the Studebaker, while Mr. Mutrux and four more children sit in the Ford.

But the 12 Mutruxes are not the only children at Chateau Ronan. Mme. Helen Lapp, from whom they leased the estate, still occupies a few of the rooms, and being an exception in this part of the confederation, she has five children of her own. Counting noses at the end of the day consequently is often necessary.

Traveling according to Hoyle, should be expensive with a party of 14, but the Mutruxes have it down to a science. The passport bugaboo, for instance. All the children are under age—from 7 months to 18 years—so one passport has done for the lot. The visa through France was only $10—a technicality which made the frugal French control officer in New York groan when he stamped the document and saw a possible $140 towards paying the French war debt go glimmering.

The Swiss charge no visa fee—their theory being that it's easier to get the difference out of the tourist once he has crossed the border of their country. Gasoline, while more expensive in Europe than in the States, made no dent on the bankroll of $10,000 that the family carried compared with the toll that would have been taken had the party craved a wagon-lit. And for hotels, a spacious European bed, with the smaller children ranked cross-wise, easily accommodates five. The trip from Cherbourg to Lausanne took three days—idling along, and the Chateau Renan, leased in advance, was waiting when the wanderers arrived.

Another thing which has simplified matters, is the fact that the entire family, with the exception of the baby, speak French. Mutrux was born in St. Louis, of Swiss parents, and his wife is also native American-born, with German parentage. For the old folks' sake, and because they wanted their children to become international as well as 100 per cent American, they were schooled in a foreign tongue. Now, during their year's sojourn, they will polish off the rough edges.

To Stay a Year

Although it has not been definitely decided, the elder Mutruxes have an idea that they may spend a few months in Italy or Germany with their family before returning to America. The object is to give the older children more of an opportunity to gain an international viewpoint.

"I'm not interested in politics," admitted Mr. Mutrux, "but I know the value of international sympathies. I want my children to avoid the narrow nationalism that causes wars, to understand and appreciate the languages, customs, culture and feelings of people of countries other than their own. That is one of the reasons we are so glad to have them all with us on this honeymoon."

There is one thing, however, on which Mutrux has stuck to the land of his forefathers. That is, in naming his offspring. Despite their number, he has not yet had to pick a name that was not well known in the canton of Vaud—Edouard, Robert, Jean-Louis, Suzette, Philip, George, Louise, Ernest, Paul, Oliver, Richard and Elaine. American sounding, it is true, but nevertheless true Vaudois in origin.

The Mutruxes reside off Dielman road near Clayton in St. Louis County. Mutrux is an architect with offices in Clayton. They had been saving for 20 years to make the trip. Last February they decided it was time to start and were obliged to take all of the children through inability to persuade any of them to stay at home. The family traveled east in their two cars, loaded them aboard the steamer France and sailed June 28. Mutrux estimated that the trip would cost $6000 but he has revised this on an upward scale several times since arrival in Europe. When they left St. Louis Mr. and Mrs. Mutrux planned to remain abroad a year.

flowers and listen to the radio in the front room. She talks of a trip she made to California last year.

"Are you going to Europe?"

Well of all things. Young man, young man. Of course not. At her age? Besides, America was plenty good enough for her.

That expressed it all. This little house, this place as grandmother, this hope of freedom from worry over money were good enough for her. She asks no more in payment for those years of toil and desperate clinging to her ground.

She rummaged through a dozen drawers happily to find pictures, gossiped a bit about her neighbors, laughed again at the thought of two million dollars and said good-day. One knew, leaving her, that at night she would go to bed happy, secure from want under her own roof. That was all she had ever asked of life.

BUILDING AT 7TH AND ST. CHARLES STREETS IS SOLD

Lesser-Goldman Cotton Compress Co. Buys 3-Story Structure — Price Not Made Public.

OVERTURES FOR 12TH AND LOCUST CORNER

Site Is Considered for Office Building With Banking Quarters on First Floor.

By Berry Moore.

Overshadowing all others during the week and setting the pace, perhaps, for October, was the purchase yesterday by the Lesser-Goldman Cotton Compress Co. of the southeast corner of Seventh and St. Charles streets, improved with a modern three-story building. Negotiations were handled by Martin & Breitt.

The lot, which has 57 feet on Seventh street and 75 feet on St. Charles street, is the key to this quarter of the block, and is regarded as one or the best sites in this section for retail pursoses.

The consideration was not made public. Serving, however, as an index to values in this district, Colin H. Tate theatrical interests recently leased the southwest corner of Sixth and St. Charles streets, the site of the Columbia Theater, with a frontage of 125 feet on Sixth street and 155 feet on St. Charles street, through Martin & Breitt to the McCrory Chain Stores Corporation, at an annual net ground rental of $110,000.

Owned by Investment Firm.

The Cleary Investment Co., a holding corporation of the Cleary estate, owned the Seventh and St. Charles streets property, having recently acquired it at the instance of Martin & Breitt as an investment. The building, which is comparatively new, was erected by the holding corporation and leased to the Myles Salisbury Cloak and Suit Co.

While the figures at which the property was acquired and resold are not available, it is understood that through the resale the Cleary interests have realized a substantial profit on their investment.

About three years ago, the Lesser-Goldman Co. purchased the present seven-story fireproof building at the southwest corner of Seventeenth and Olive streets, leased by the George T. Budeau Real Estate Co. While the Lesser-Goldman Co. has made this building its headquarters, purchase in this instance was primarily as an investment, prompted by the specific advantages involved.

This is one of several recent large investing corner holdings in the district, including the southwest corner of Seventh street and Washington avenue, 77x135 feet, leased under a 99-year lease by Scharff & Kolb of Chicago with Skouras Bros.' project at Seventh and Locust streets, together with Loew's State Theater, at Seventh street and Washington avenue, manifestly has had a wholesome effect an realty in this part of the city.

Downtown Corner Sought.

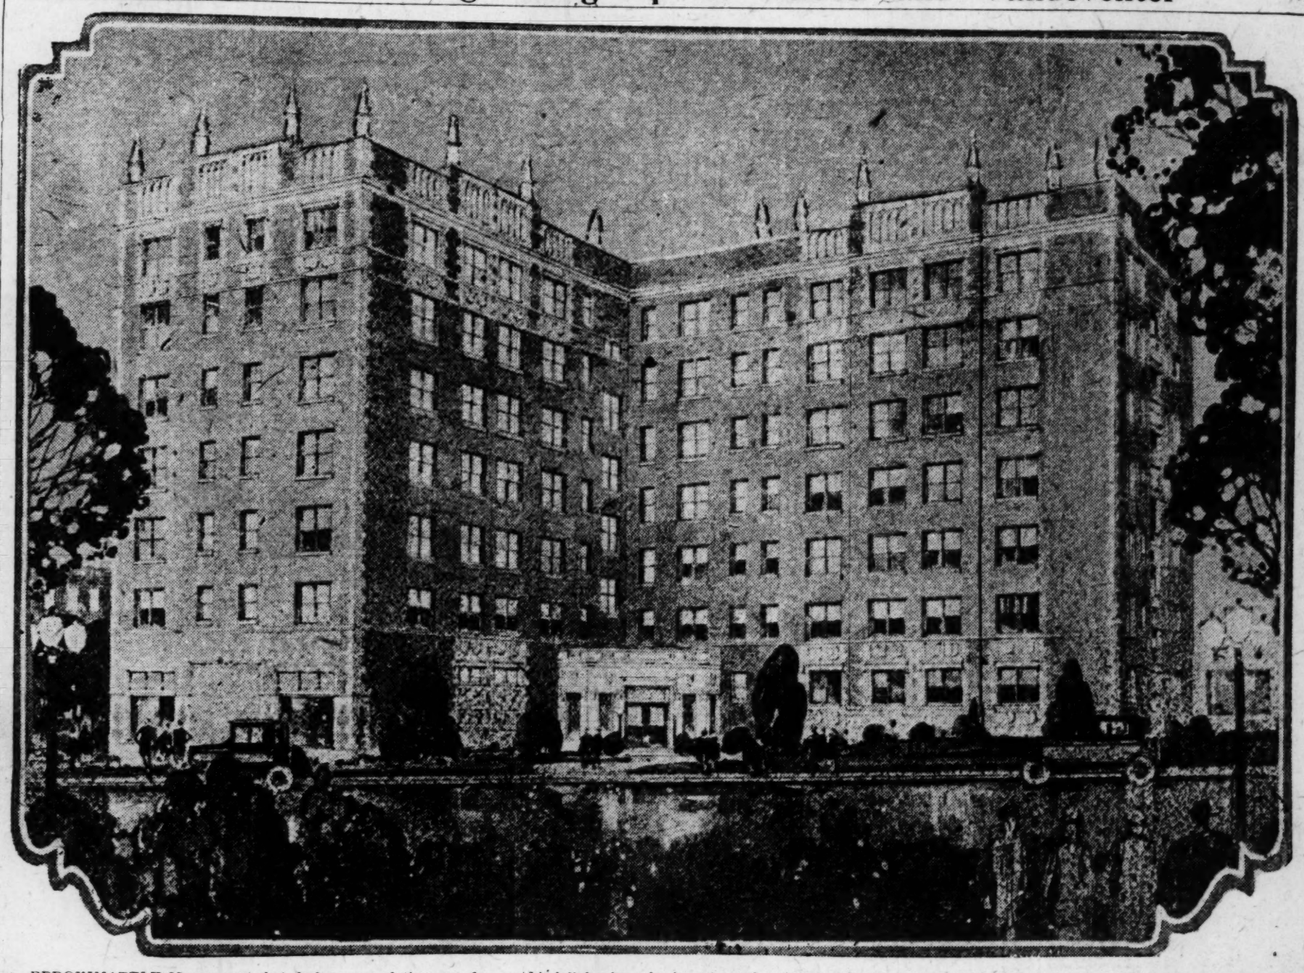
There has been no lack of overtures for the northeast corner of Seventh boulevard and Locust street, the control of which recently was acquired by D. F. Addison from the Essex Realty Co. under a 99-year lease. This site has received attention, it is understood, from banks and other financial institutions in the market for sites for an office structure with banking quarters on the first floor. Negotiations, however, have not taken tangible form as yet. This site, which is essentially suited for a building on a large scale, comprises the section of Locust street has been widened on a new front with the completion of the Roxana Petroleum Building at Thirteenth and Locust streets, the new 12-story office building under construction at the southwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets, following the erection of the new City Club buildings on this thoroughfare.

Apartment Building Going Up at Lindell and Vandeventer



APPROXIMATELY 25 per cent of the suites has been leased from the plans of the seven-story fireproof Kenrick Square apartment building, to be erected at the northeast corner of Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, opposite Kenrick Square. With absorption on this scale, the building will be entirely out of the market before completion, so far as renters are concerned. This is noteworthy as gauging the city's capacity for buildings of this type.

Excavation was started during the week for the new apartments, which will constitute the ultra in buildings of this type. Cost of the improvement, including the site, one of the most commanding on Lindell boulevards, is estimated at $750,000.

The site has a frontage on Lindell of 120 feet and on Vandeventer of 150 feet, and is essentially a site for an apartment or a hotel structure on an elaborate scale. It is just west of the $1,000,000 Coronado addition, financed by S. W. Straus & Co., and adjoins the site of the Medical Arts Building on Lindell boulevard, and otherwise is attractively situated.

Plans call for 100 two and three-room kitchennette apartments, with tile bath and showers. The building will have hardwood floors throughout, with carpeted corridors and will be replete with attractive features.

The building is being erected by Alexander M. Cornwell of the F. J. Cornwell Realty Co., 107 North Seventh street, who recently purchased the site and who erected the Melbourne Hotel at Lindell and Grand boulevards and numerous other outstanding structures in the apartment building field.

CHICAGO FIRM OFFERS $600,000 FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS HERE

Greenebaum Sons Investment Co., with headquarters in Chicago, and a branch office in the Tower Building, southwest corner of Sixth and Olive streets, St. Louis, is offering $600,000 first mortgage 6½ per cent serial gold bonds, secured by the Branscome apartment hotel property, 5364-72 Pershing avenue, just west of Union boulevard, in the Forest Park residential district.

Appraisal of the property, including the land, building, furnishings and equipment, places the total value at $1,012,50. Net annual earnings of the property total $118,349, which is over three times the maximum annual interest charges on the entire issue, which is reduced semiannually by serial payments of pincipal. Monthly deposits in advance with Greenbaum Sons Bank and Trust Co., are required to meet bond issue charges.

The bonds are offered in $100, $500 and $1,000 denominations, maturing in one to 12 years from Oct. 1, 1925, with 2 per cent federal normal income tax paid by the borrowers. Payments of principal and interest are personally guaranteed by Sam Koplar, owner of four other apartment buildings in the same neighborhood, and the builder of the Congress and Senate Apartments, now in construction, which will be the highest apartment building in St. Louis.

The Branscome, which was completed about five years ago, is an "L"-shaped building, eight stories high, of fireproof construction, occupying part of a site fronting 275 feet on Pershing avenue, with a depth of 225 feet on the east line and 181 feet on the west line. The building contains 88 hotel rooms, completely furnished, and 72 apartments of two and three rooms, 15 of which are furnished.

SOUTH ST. LOUIS ATTORNEY JOINS NETTLE COMPANY

Harry Nettle, South St. Louis attorney, is now associated with the Nettle Realty Co., in its new quarters at 1881 South Twelfth Street.

Harry Nettle was born and educated in this city. He saw service on the Mexican border as a Corporal and in the World War as a Lieutenant. He was graduated from Washington University Law School.

ST. LOUIS ADVERTISED IN MANY BIG CITIES OF U. S.

Special Emphasis Is Laid on the Exceptional Steady Growth and Building Activity.

Economic experts have debated for some time as to when the wave of the nation's expanded building program would break. S. W. Straus, who has financed more building than perhaps any other one man in the nation, has struck a new chord in our economic situation. It is his belief that the nation will not be adequately housed until her building program catches up with the higher standards of living of her people.

So much faith does Straus have in his belief that he has instituted a national campaign in the great newspapers of the country telling about the growth and development of leading American cities.

The advantages of St. Louis are told by institutional copy in the great newspapers of the nation. The story of St. Louis is being run in paid advertising in the newspapers of New York, Chicago, Boston, Detroit, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Seattle, Buffalo and Dallas.

Special Advantages Told.

To be sure the organization financing this campaign will benefit in this program. St. Louis, however, should gain more.

St. Louis and her special advantages will be told to millions of people. This campaign will fortify the local Chamber of Commerce. This campaign will advertise St. Louis without expense to the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

Such advertising bespeaks great vision and the faith in American cities. And there will be more general participation in the benefits that go with the so great accumulations of property. The profound problems of labor and capital, of employer and employee, of class and mass will be more easily solved if all realize the importance of loyalty to the American city, which as Frederick C. Howe has said, is the hope of American democracy. St. Louis would like to see more advertising like this S. W. Straus & Co. campaign.

Loans Total $17,000,000.

S. W. Straus & Co. have been prominent in the physical growth of St. Louis through loans advanced for building enterprises, aggregating $12,000,000 within the last three or four years. With its large resources it has made possible the erection of many large hotel and apartment structures, including notably the Coronado Hotel and Annex, Chase Hotel, Mayfair Hotel, University Club and office building, the new Skouras theater and office building under construction at Seventh and Locust streets together involving an additional outlay of more than $5,000,000.

This is noteworthy as demonstrating the faith of one of the foremost financial concerns in the world in the stability of real estate values in this city.

SEPARATE JUDICIAL ELECTIONS URGED BY MISSOURI BAR

State Association's Resolutions Advocate Choice at Times Different From the General Balloting.

'CONVENTION FOR HIGHER NOMINATIONS'

County and District Law Societies Asked to Vote Upon Fitness of Nominees for Bench.

The Missouri Bar Association, concluding its annual convention at Hotel Statler, yesterday, unanimously indorsed the following proposals radically changing the method of selection of the judiciary in Missouri:

First, to select the candidates for the bench in the Appellate Courts, comprising the Supreme Court and the three Courts of Appeal—by convention, as opposed to the present primary election system.

Second, to bring about the election of Judges, including Circuit Judges, at times different from the general election of State, county, or city officers.

Use of Initiative Urged.

The resolutions, which were presented by the Committee on Judicial Candidates, and signed by its members, former Supreme Judge Shepard Barclay of St. Louis, former Supreme Judge John I. Williamson of Kansas City, and E. A. Barbour of Springfield, empowered the Judiciary Committee, including the officers and Executive Committee, to formulate the desired amendments to the present laws, and to seek their enactment, if deemed advisable, by the initiative.

"Your committee and our membership generally take a just pride in the history and record of our courts," the resolutions stated, "and cherish a deep reverence and respect for the names and fame of many distinguished jurists, who adorn and have adorned the bench; but, in the progress of years, and with the mutations of time and circumstance, there appear reasons to scrutinize and review our system of administration so as to insure, for the future, continuance of the high standards of ability which have prevailed. With these purposes in view, we beg to suggest most respectfully these suggestions:

"First, whether it would not conduce to better results in efficiency and afford to worthy members of our profession a more attractive inducement to high judicial service, so to amend the organic and statutory law as to provide for the nomination of candidates and the election of judges of the Supreme, and the Appellate and Circuit Courts at times and dates different from those prescribed for the nomination and election of other state, county or city officers?

Would Educate Electorate.

"One effect of such change in the mode of selection of judges would be to direct public attention more closely to the merits of the several candidates, and by educating the electorate to regard fitness for judicial service as of the first importance, rather than other considerations, would, perhaps, invite a large number of qualified men into the arena of choice, and increase the probability of wise selection for such high duties.

"Second, whether it would not improve the methods of selecting judicial candidates now in vogue to provide for such choice of judges of the Supreme and Appellate Courts to be made by conventions, whose range of selection would not be limited to those who had put themselves in nomination, but might extend to any worthy and eligible candidate deemed by the convention most suitable for the public service in view.

"We are well aware that the latter suggestion lies within the domain of controversy, and is unlikely to command unanimity of acquiescence, at once. But, after we have experimented for some time with the method prescribed by our existing laws of primary elections, for candidates for those offices, we invoke the best judgment of the membership of our association to decide whether the older system of nomination by conventions, for the offices of Judges of the Supreme and Appellate Courts of our State, was not, and is not, inherently better, and productive of more satisfactory results; it being provided that such conventions comprise delegates chosen for the selection of judicial candidates only."

System Adopted in Other States.

The resolutions continue that "in such a memoranda, it is not practical to assign all the fact and reasons," but that "your own experience, your knowledge of the history of our courts and of our people," will "furnish you abundant food for reflection when you seriously consider the needs of today and for the development of our system of jurisprudence."

Concluding, the resolutions point out that "our sister states of Illinois and Wisconsin have been, for many years, following the plan of separate elections of judges of those high courts, with entire satisfaction. The people of Missouri look to us to point the way toward such development of our laws as will preserve untarnished for the future the fair fame and worth of our judiciary and insure its continued efficiency, high character and ability, and the sincere respect which it enjoys."

In adjourning, the Association approved a resolution adopted by the American Bar Association, calling upon county and district bar associations to vote upon the fitness of nominees for the bench, and to make public their choices. Details of the plan, which is similar to that carried out by the St. Louis Bar Association, were left to the Executive Committee to promulgate.

University Law School Building Held Up by State.

Dr. Stratton D. Brooks, president of the University of Missouri, guest of the Law Alumni of the university, at a luncheon yesterday at Hotel Statler, described the progress in the building of the new law school, to be known as the Lee H. Tate Memorial building. The edifice, half of the cost of which was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Tate of St. Louis, in memory of their late son, a former law student, has progressed within the limits of the $75,000 donation they put forward. The remaining $75,000, which was appropriated by the Legislature, has been withheld by Gov. Baker on account of a shortage of available funds, Dr. Brooks recounted.

J. P. McBaine, dean of the law school, described the high standards which the school was seeking to uphold, and mentioned the recognition recorded it by Harvard Law School in seeking Prof. Kenneth C. Sears of the faculty as exchange professor for a year.

Former State Senator Walter C. Goodson, president of the Missouri Law Alumni, presided. Addresses were made by former Chief Justice Barclay Shepard, who, though not an alumnus, was awarded the degree of LL.D. in 1897; R. B. Oliver of Cape Girardeau, Congressman Newton, George Willson, president of the St. Louis Bar Association, and others.

NEW CHARGES AGAINST TWO HOLLAND BANK OFFICERS

Action Follows Dismissal of Cases Pending Under Change of Venue to Henry County.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Oct. 3 — Charges against E. L. Sanford, former president, and E. N. Ferguson, former chairman of the Board of the Holland Banking Co., which failed here in January, 1923, were dismissed in the Henry County Circuit Court today. Immediately after the dismissals, new charges were filed in a justice of the peace court here by H. T. Lincoln, Greene County prosecuting attorney.

The charges involved the receiving of deposits by the officers when the bank was in a failing condition.

The cases were sent to Henry County on a change of venue from Greene County.

SIX WEEKS' REVIVAL STARTS TONIGHT

H. S. Williams, Mississippi Evangelist, to Conduct Services in Tabernacle on Delmar.

A regulation, old-fashioned sawdust trail will await St. Louisans tonight at the opening service of a six weeks' revival to be conducted by Howard S. Williams, lay evangelist of Hattiesburg, Miss.

The wooden tabernacle on the south side of Delmar boulevard, west of Hamilton avenue, erected for the occasion under the auspices of the University Presbyterian Church, was nearing completion yesterday, with the prospect of being done today. The floor is sawdust on earth, carrying the atmosphere of old-time revival meetings.

There are 2500 canvas seats, each accommodating two persons, and extra seats can be installed later if required. There are four aisles for access to the seats and down which converts may pass to the pulpit of the evangelist, which will be draped with the American flag. Canvas signs on the walls quote Scriptures. Stoves will be installed when necessary.

Choir of 300.

Behind the pulpit is a platform for a choir of 300 voices, which the musical leaders of Williams' group expect to build up from local church choirs. Flanking the pulpit are a platform on one side for an orchestra, to be similarly built up, and a platform on the other side for visiting ministers and others, also a press stand.

Mayor Miller will deliver an address of welcome to Evangelist Williams tonight, it was announced by Rev. Dr. James Hardin Smith, pastor of University Church. Mayor A. O. Cunningham of University City and Mayor Eugene Burks of Maplewood are expected to be seated with Mayor Miller. Mayor Burks, like Mayor Miller, ran for office on the principle of strict law enforcement.

Tabernacle Open Tonight.

The Executive Committee formed by University Church to have charge of the revival comprises: Charles A. Pearson, chairman; Walter A. Hays, W. K. Norris, former Supreme Judge James T. Blair, Prof. W. W. Hall, Charles C. Auten, James H. Harris, Henri Rush, Frank M. Schubert and the Rev. Dr. Smith. All churches of the city have been invited to participate.

The tabernacle will be opened to the public at 7 o'clock tonight. Services will be held nightly except Mondays. Williams, as has been told, is a former newspaper man. In recent months he has conducted revivals in Herrin, Harrisburg and Cairo, Ill., winning many converts.

WEEKS BACK IN WASHINGTON, SILENT AS TO RESIGNATION

War Secretary Luncheon Guest at White House But Does Not Visit Office.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Secretary Weeks' return to Washington today from the long absence necessitated by ill health served to strengthen the impression that he will retire from the Cabinet in the near future, although no information as to his plans was available either from Weeks himself or in any other quarters.

The war secretary was a luncheon guest at the White House. He did not visit his office across the street at the war department, however, and he put aside inquiries as to whether he expected to resume his duties there. He was compelled to give up active management of departmental affairs early in April when he suffered an attack diagnosed as thrombosis and has not been at his office since that time.

Weeks explained the purpose of his recent trip to Washington as having to do with the necessity of clearing out his home here, which was sold during his absence but which still contains paintings and other effects which will be shipped to his residence in New Hampshire.

He appeared to have improved in health since his visit to the President some weeks ago at Swampscott, but indicated that he was still lacking in strength.

Discussion as to Weeks' probable successor, revived by his visit, included the names of Acting Secretary Davis, Secretary Work and Charles D. Hilles of New York.

MAN KEPT $620 IN COFFEE CAN

It Was There When He Went to Work But Not When He Returned.

In an old coffee can Max Herfuth, who rooms on the second floor at 210 Clark avenue, kept the $620 he had saved. The coffee can he hid beneath a table in his room. It was there when he went to work Friday morning. It was not when he returned that night.

A thief climbed an outside stairway to reach a window in the room next to Herfuth's, pried off a screen, and broke a lock in the door between the rooms. Then he vanished with the money.

Also, late Friday, a prowler stole $300 in jewels and $7.50 in cash from the home of Miss Katherine Daisy Bell, 3002 Texas avenue, which he entered by forcing a window.

Irish Banners at Capitol Barred.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Irish Republican sympathizers attempted a parade on the plaza in front of the Capitol today as a protest against exclusion of Irish Republican delegates to the Interparliamentary Union Congress. Marchers carrying banners formed, but police informed them it was against the law to display such signs on the Capitol grounds, and after protesting, the marchers departed. One of the banners read: "Does America really believe in the freedom of small nations? What of Ireland?"

WIND AND SEA DRIVE RESCUE FLOTILLA FROM SUNKEN S-51

Body of Engineman Berk Recovered—Memorial Service for Dead Today.

By the Associated Press.

U. S. SUBMARINE BASE, NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 3.—After a week of rescue work over the sunken submarine S-51 the net result of which was the recovery of the bodies of five of the 33 men who went down with their ship, rear-Admiral H. H. Christie, returned to the base here tonight.

A choppy sea and a wind that threatened to reach gale proportions forced the suspension of diving operations at noon, and Admiral Christie ordered the entire rescue flotilla to port, some of the vessels going to Newport and others coming in here. When search for the bodies can be resumed depends upon weather conditions.

Only one body was recovered today, that of Paul D. Berk, of Shoemakerville, Penn., an enginemen.

Tomorrow the officers and men at the base, numbering more than 1,000, will do honor to their departed comrades. A memorial service will be held at the base theater. A navy choir and a quartet of enlisted men will sing.

MELANCHOLIA LEADS WOMAN TO END LIFE

Drinks Poison in Home and Husband Finds Her Dead in a Chair.

Mrs. Ida Lincoln, 56 years old, of 4128A Flad avenue, ended her life at 7 p. m. yesterday by drinking poison at her home. She was found, seated in a chair, in a semi-conscious condition, by her husband, George B. Lincoln, a packer. She died shortly after the arrival of a neighborhood physician.

A brief note to her husband, bidding him goodby, and asking his forgiveness, was found. Lincoln told police his wife had suffered a nervous breakdown recently and had been in a state of melancholia for the past several days.

HELD FOR ACCOSTING WOMAN

Youth Arrested in East St. Louis by Deputy Sheriff.

A young man, identified by two women as a man who has been accosting women pedestrians in the vicinity of Twenty-first and Bates streets, East St. Louis, for the last week, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff John Hubert yesterday after he had accosted Mrs. Louis Hubert, daughter-in-law of the deputy.

Nine reports of attempted attacks by a young man driving an old Ford coupe have been received by the East St. Louis authorities since last Sunday night, the man striking his prospective victims on two occasions when they repulsed his advances.

ADMIRAL COONTZ RELINQUISHES COMMAND OF U. S. FLEET

Navy Officers to Appear as Witness Before President's Aircraft Inquiry Board.

By the Associated Press.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Oct. 3. — Admiral Robert E. Coontz today hauled down his flag from the trucks of the cruiser Seattle and turned over the command of the United States Fleet to Admiral Samuel S. Robison. Full Naval ceremony marked the transfer.

As the last piece of prescribed etiquette was completed, Admiral Coontz disappeared over the side of the ship which has been home and headquarters for two years, piped by eight "side boys," and was rushed ashore in his barge to catch a train for Omaha, where he will address the American Legion convention. From there he will go to Washington to testify before the President's aircraft board. Admiral Robison also will leave for Washington for the same purpose tomorrow.

Admiral Robison, who relinquishes command of the battle fleet to become commander in chief, will be succeeded in the former post by Admiral Charles F. Hughes, who will arrive here tomorrow.

LEGION FLURRY OVER MITCHELL

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 3.—The political cauldron of the American Legion started to boil again today. The Col. William Mitchell phase of the discussion was precipitated when it became known that he had not been given an invitation to attend the convention as a distinguished guest.

His friends are bitter in Forty-and-Eight, the legion fun organization, and unofficially invited him to attend. This invitation in turn was condemned by Forty-and-Eight officials who said "it would embarrass the legion officials."

VISION OBSCURED, WOMAN HIT BY AUTO

Carried Umbrella During Rain —Son With Her Escapes Injury.

Her vision obscured by an umbrella, Mrs. Carrie Abernathy, 32 years old, of 716 Wyoming street, was struck by an automobile at Seventh and Wyoming streets during the rain late yesterday afternoon, suffering a fractured skull and lacerations of the scalp. She is at the city hospital in a serious condition.

Mrs. Abernathy, with her small son, Lester, was crossing from the northeast to the southwest when she was seen by the motorist, Robert La Mear, 3849A Missouri avenue, a merchant, driving north on Seventh street. He swerved his car sharply to avoid hitting the pedestrians, but skidded on the wet pavement, the rear end of the car striking Mrs. Abernathy. The son was not struck. Le Mear was arrested.

Mrs. Maude Chalmers, 25 years old, of 1621 Leffingwell avenue, suffered lacerations of the face and concussion of the brain at 2 p. m. yesterday when an automobile driven by her husband, Madison Chalmers, collided with a truck at Elliot avenue and Wash street. She was taken to the city hospital in a serious condition.

The truck was driven by John Timmerman, 40 years old, of 1116 Tyler avenue, a chauffeur for the St. Louis Iron Store, 700 Cass avenue. He was arrested charged with careless driving and felonious wounding, and Chalmers also was arrested on a careless driving charge.

Two men were seriously injured at 6:30 p. m., yesterday when an automobile cut out of the line of automobiles returning from the races and skidded from the wet Collinsville road to the East St. Louis and Suburban railroad tracks in front of a Collinsville car bound for East St. Louis.

The tracks run parallel to the road in Fairmount City. The automobile was overturned and dragged a few feet before the car could be brought to a stop. The driver, James Short, 30, suffered internal injuries, and Maurice S. Uhre, 21, a junior in the Rolla School of Mines, was not bruised. Both reside near City. A third man in the bile escaped without injury.

CONTENTED OWNERS

Altho not a daily occurrence we have noted in the latter years an increasing number of ancestors who bring the third generation into Conroys for a piano.

In analyzing this condition we cannot but conclude that these owners of former days not only realized that Conroys alone give Conroy values but also remembered—that their transactions with us were of such pleasant a nature, that introducing the third generation seemed quite the obvious thing to do.

It is perhaps unnecessary to state that this singular mark of public commendation is more than pleasing to Conroys, a musical institution that has not changed hands in almost half a century.

Readers of the Post-Dispatch will be glad to know that when the Pirates start to knock the Senators for a row of Washington Monuments—or maybe—when the Senators begin to slap the Pirates for a row of Pittsburg smokestacks—ANYWAY—WHEN THE WORLD SERIES STARTS Ring Lardner will be on hand getting the inspiration for his funny impressions which will appear in the Post-Dispatch.

Ring Lardner is one of the funniest men in the world anyway, and when he writes of baseball and baseball players he is at his best. There will be two preliminary articles before the games begin, and then a story on each game—whether they play or not.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may obtain a complete cure without operation, without loss of time. Eugene M. Pulliam, carpenter, 478 M. Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

ST. LOUIS, MO. — ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH — Oct. 4, 1925.

The Yellow Duck Likes Boys

I

Well I must say
That I like boys.
I like their thoughts,
I like their noise.

II

I like their fun,
Ambitions, too.
And what they have.
And mean to do.

III

I like to talk
To them and see
What each one thinks
That he will be.

IV

John is a boy
Of whom I'm fond.
He often comes
Down to the pond.

V

"Dear Mrs. Duck,"
He said one day,
"Do circus clowns Receive good pay?"

VI

"What? Circus clowns?"
"Good-gracious-me!"
But I was glad
To find that he

VII

Was just as firm
As firm could be,
And my surprise
Though plain to see,

VIII

Did not the least
In-tim-i-date.
He met my eye
Proud and se-date.

IX

And then he told
(With feeling, too)
The thing that he
Would like to do.

X

"I want to be
A circus clown,
And ride a donkey
Round the town.
I wanted to
Be one before,
But now I want
To more and more.

XI

"Because my father
Went to see
A great big circus
Once with me.
And he looked sorry
All the while
Until a donkey
Made him smile.

XII

"But mostly at
The clowns that made
Just all the fun
In the parade.
That's why I want
To be a clown
And ride the donkey
Round the town."

By L. Frank Baum

Shaggy Man Seeks His Stray Brother

"AND is he a Rose, also?" asked Betsy of the delicate Tea Rose, in regard to the Royal Gardener.

"Of course not; he's a man—a wonderful man," was the reply.

"Well I'm not afraid of a man," declared the girl, much relieved, and even as she spoke the Royal Gardener popped into the greenhouse—a spading fork in one hand and a watering pot in the other.

He was a funny little man, dressed in a rose-colored costume, with ribbons at his knees and elbows, and a bunch of ribbons in his hair. His eyes were small and twinkling, his nose sharp and his face puckered and deeply lined.

"Oh-ho!" he exclaimed, astonished to find strangers in his greenhouse, and when Hank gave a loud bray the Gardener threw the watering pot over the mule's head and danced around with his fork, in such agitation that presently he fell over the handle of the implement and sprawled at full length upon the ground.

Betsy laughed and pulled the watering pot off from Hank's head. The little mule was angry at the treatment he had received and backed toward the Gardener threateningly.

"Look out for his heels!" called Betsy warningly and the Gardner scrambled to his feet and hastily hid behind the Roses.

"You are breaking the Law!" he shouted, sticking out his head to glare at the girl and the mule.

"What Law?" asked Betsy.

"The Law of the Rose Kingdom. No strangers are allowed in these domains."

"Not when they're shipwrecked?" she inquired.

"The Law doesn't except shipwrecks," replied the Royal Gardener, and he was about to say more when suddenly there as a crash of glass and a man came tumbling through the roof of the greenhouse and fell plump to the ground.

This sudden arrival was a queer looking man, dressed all in garments so shaggy that Betsy at first thought he must be some animal. But the stranger ended his fall in a sitting position and then the girl saw it was really a man. He held an apple in his hand, which he had evidently been eating when he fell, and so little was he jarred or flustered by the accident that he continued to munch this apple as he calmly looked around him.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Betsy, approaching him. "Who are you, and where did you come from?"

"Me? Oh, I'm Shaggy Man," said he, taking another bite of the apple. "Just dropped in for a short call. Excuse my seeming haste."

"Why, I s'pose you couldn't help the haste," said Betsy.

"No. I climbed an apple tree, outside; branch gave way and—here I am."

As he spoke the Shaggy Man finished his apple, gave the core to Hank—who ate it greedily—and then stood up to bow politely to Betsy and the Roses.

The Royal Gardener had been frightened nearly into fits by the crash of glass and the fall of the shaggy stranger into the bower of Roses, but now he peeped out from behind a bush and cried in his squeaky voice:

"You're breaking the Law! You're breaking the Law!"

Shaggy stared at him solemnly.

"Is the glass the Law in this country?" he asked.

"Breaking the glass is breaking the Law," squeaked the Gardener, angrily. "Also, to intrude in any part of the Rose Kingdom is breaking the Law."

"How do you know?" asked Shaggy.

"Why it's printed in a book," said the Gardener, coming forward and taking a small book from his pocket. "Page 13. Here it is: 'If any stranger enters the Rose Kingdom he shall at once be condemned by the Ruler and put to death.' So you see, stranger," he continued triumphantly, "it's death for you all and your time has come!"

But just here Hank interposed. He had been stealthily backing toward the Royal Gardener, whom he disliked, and now the mule's heels shot out and struck the little man in the middle. He doubled up like the letter "U" and flew out of the door so swiftly—never touching the ground—that he was gone before Betsy had time to wink.

But the mule's attack frightened the girl.

"Come," she whispered, approaching the Shaggy Man and taking his hand; "let's go somewhere else. They'll surely kill us if we stay here!"

"Don't worry, my dear," replied Shaggy, patting the child's head. "I'm not afraid of anything, so long as I have the Love Magnet."

"The Love Magnet! Why, what is that? asked Betsy.

"It's a charming little enchantment that wins the heart of everyone who looks upon it," was the reply. "The Love Magnet used to hang over the gateway to the Emerald City, in the Land of Oz; but when I started on this journey our beloved Ruler, Ozma of Oz, allowed me to take with me."

"Oh!" cried Betsy, staring hard at him; "are you really from the wonderful Land of Oz?"

"Yes. Ever been there, my dear?"

"No; but I've heard about it. And do you know Princess Ozma?"

"Very well, indeed."

"And—and Princess Dorothy?"

"Dorothy's an old chum of mine," declared Shaggy.

"Dear me!" exclaimed Betsy. "And why did you ever leave such a beautiful land as Oz?"

"On an errand," said Shaggy, looking sad and solemn. "I'm trying to find my dear little brother."

"Oh! Is he lost?" questioned Betsy, feeling very sorry for the poor man.

"Been lost these ten years," replied Shaggy, taking out a handkerchief and wiping a tear from his eye. "I didn't know it until lately, when I saw it recorded in the magic Record Book of the Sorceress Glinda, in the Land of Oz. So now I'm trying to find him."

"Where was he lost?" asked the girl sympathetically.

"Back in Colorado, where I used to live before I went to Oz. Brother was a miner, and dug gold out of a mine. One day he went into his mine and never came out. They searched for him, but he was not there. Disappeared entirely," Shaggy ended miserably.

"For goodness sake! What do you s'pose became of him?" she asked.

"There's only one explanation," replied Shaggy, taking another apple from his pocket and eating it to relieve his misery. "The Nome King probably got him."

"The Nome King! Who is he?"

"Why he's sometimes called the Metal Monarch, and his name is Ruggedo. Lives in some underground cavern. Claims to own all the metals hidden in the earth. Don't ask me why."

"Why?"

"'Cause I don't know. But this Ruggedo gets wild with anger if anyone digs gold out of the earth, and my private opinion is that he captured brother and carried him off to his underground kingdom. No—don't ask me why. I see you're dying to ask me why. But I don't know."

FOLDING FUN

DIRECTIONS.

Cut along border and fold in half along dotted lines (.....). Starting with picture No. 1, by making one fold from the bottom up, where the dotted guides show, you can make a new picture. Make another fold from the bottom up and a third picture appears. Then return to No. 1 and fold from the top down, in the same manner, which will give you two more pictures. Last, returning to picture No. 1, make one fold from the bottom and one fold from the top and you will get a surprise.

THE WONDERFUL APPLE TRICK

This trick is astonishing—and so simple that any one in the secret can perform it. You take an apple and thread two tapes through it by means of a bodkin or long tape needle. You give the ends to your friends to hold, and to make all more secure you tie a knot with two of the ends. You then take the apple in your hand, give it a jerk, and presto! the apple is off the tapes and your astonished friends are left holding the ends.

The secret is shown in the drawings. The two tapes are prepared at A. A small piece of thread ties them together in the middle, shown at 5. Ends 1 and 2 are left free and ends 3 and 4 threaded through the bodkin, your hand covering 5 so that it appears as though you had two continuous tapes through the eye, whereas you have in reality both ends of one tape free and both ends of the other threaded into the apple. The tape is pulled through the apple till point 5 is inside, as in B.

Now give the ends to your friends to hold. Then say, "Wait a minute. We'll make this more secure than before," and, taking one end from each friend, you tie a simple overhand knot, afterward giving the ends back to the holders. By means of tying the knot each now holds the opposite end from the end he previously held (C).

That is all there is to it. Warning them to hold tightly you give a pull—and the apple comes off, leaving the bit of thread broken, safely hidden inside (D).

Try this on the crowd. It will keep them guessing for some time.

"But—dear me!—in that case you will never find your lost brother!" exclaimed the girl.

"Maybe not, but it's my duty to try," answered Shaggy. "I've wandered so far without finding him, but that only proves he is not where I've been looking. What I seek now is the hidden passage to the underground cavern of the terrible Metal Monarch."

"Well," said Betsy, doubtfully, "it strikes me that if you ever manage to get there the Metal Monarch will make you, too, his prisoner."

"Nonsense!" answered Shaggy, carelessly. "You mustn't forget the Love Magnet."

"What about it?" she asked.

"When the fierce Metal Monarch sees the Love Magnet, he will love me dearly and do anything I ask."

"It must be wonderful," said Betsy, with awe.

"It is," the man assured her. "Shall I show it to you?"

"Oh, do!" she cried; so Shaggy searched in his shaggy pocket and drew out a small silver magnet, shaped like a horseshoe.

THE MOUSEHOLE PUZZLE

Here is a little puzzle which is baffling if you do not start right. The cat is in the center of a circle of mouseholes. She wishes to catch all the mice, but these particular holes are numbered, and there are certain rules to be followed. If the cat starts at any mousehole she must go from there in the direction of the hands of the clock—around the circle to the right—counting as she goes. She counts the hole at which she started as 1, regardless of what number it may be. The next hole, also regardless of its number, is 2, the next 3, and so on. She must count till she reaches a hole having the same number as the one she counts. For example, if she started at 2, she would count 2 as 1, 19 as 2, 21 as 3, and so on till she reaches 9, at which time she would be at the hole actually numbered 9. This hole she can enter and eat the mouse. She must then start at the next hole and count that as 1 and proceed till once more the number of one of the holes agrees with the number she has counted. Holes already entered are to be skipped, and if the cat does not make a catch the first time around the circle she must go on until she does. Of course, as the holes are numbered only to 21, it is clear that if the count goes over 21 the cat has made the wrong start. If you start at the right mousehole you can catch all the mice. Mark off the "mice" as you catch them. Try it—it isn't so easy as it looks.

RETURNING to their home from a day's fishing at St Lambert's mill-pond one afternoon, Tom Lamb and Herb Jenkins were caught in a storm which suddenly broke. A high wind began rattling loose things and the boys sought refuge from the elements in an old ramshackle building known as the "Rats' Nest" because, often used for grain storage at harvest time, the house was infested by rodents.

The Double Scare at Rat's Nest

By FRANK A. SECORD

RETURNING to their home from a day's fishing at Si Lambert's mill-pond one afternoon, Tom Lamb and Herb Jenkins were caught in a storm which suddenly broke. A high wind began rattling loose things and the boys sought refuge from the elements in an old ramshackle building known as the "Rats' Nest" because, when used for grain storage at harvest time, the house was infested by rodents.

As the boys huddled in one of the tumbledown rooms of the place the wind, blowing through frames minus several panes of glass, banged doors, rattled boards and otherwise caused what might be called uncanny sounds.

"Say," muttered Tom, as he looked around every time a new noise was heard, "this is a creepy joint, is what I claim!"

"Look!" laughed Herb, pointing at a gloomy corner and nudging his companion. "There's a ghost, as sure as we're here!"

"Aw, keep still!" Tom growled. "I'm not afraid, but this old place gives me the shivers."

Just then, upstairs, a window that had been open suddenly dropped with a bang and both boys stared at each other.

"There's company in the shack!" Herb whispered.

"It's a crowd, for 'two's company and three's a crowd'!" the lad's chum said in an undertone. "There are sure three here and I'm going, I am!"

The boys started out in the rain and as they did so a board slammed on the rickety roof and a loose window-pane flew to the ground where it broke to atoms. "That's the story, then," Herb observed. "No use getting soaked to the skin, just because Old Man Wind is having a party!"

The boys remained until the storm let up and then. When the clouds allowed the sun to shine once more and the world seemed somewhat brighter they walked upstars, satisfied themselves no one was there and at once began hatching a scheme to fool the boys—and girls, too—of their town "on their ears."

"We'll have a ghost and work it right," Tom Lamb suggested. "When we get them ripe for the shock we'll have Mr. Ghost show up and—"

The plot was soon made up and the pair drew lots to decide which should do the "drag-on" stunt among the folks of the town, and which should be the "ghost." Tom did not notice that Herb was disappointed with drawing the lot of being "it" in turn. The former was happy over the prospect of jumping up and throwing a scare into his chums.

Herb consistently spread tales of strange doings at "Rats' Nest." He created a lot of curiosity; and on Saturday, when a crowd of young folks were at Si Lambert's pond fishing, both Herb and Tom suggested that everybody remain until after dark and investigate the spooks of the ramshackle.

"That would be fun!" gushed a girl, clapping her hands. "There are enough boys here to protect us," she added, with a curl of the lip.

"Indeed, yes!" another girl cried. "I couldn't imagine being afraid of ghosts, with so many athletes around."

"Correct, you are!" Tom Lamb shouted. "The first ghost that shows up will get popped right in the left eye, I bet!"

"You know it!" exclaimed Herb Jenkins.

Waving around the pond the young folks did not notice that Tom had later disappeared, until someone remarked that the lad must have found a good spot to fish and was doing a successful job of hogging it all to himself; to which Herb replied, "He's down yonder, around the point. I guess. That's where he generally hides out when he wishes to catch a good string."

This explanation was satisfactory and Tom was forgotten. In truth he had "made a sneak" and was even then yonder in the vicinity of the old shack, preparing for the scare he would give his chums; for there he had all the paraphernalia of a genuine spook.

Herb, mentioning that he'd walk over to the shack and see what Tom was doing, ambled from the crowd.

When the moon rose and outlined "Rats' Nest" against the twilight's gloom, its light shone ghostly through the windows of the old shack. The young folks at the mill-pond were just finishing devouring cakes and buns. Conversation turned to the subject of queer doings at the old house yonder. Some of the girls shuddered and all of them bunched close to the blazing fire when a boy began talking about what might happen before the party got back home. Said the lad, "I seem to feel it in my bones that we are in for a scare—the scare of our lives—tonight!"

Over the night air rang a series of yells, then the sound of an explosion

"Scares won't kill anybody!" sneered another. "If they could, I'd be dead long ago."

"Oh, dear; we don't want any scares and if you boys put up a job on us, we will never speak to you again!" one of the girls whimpered.

"There's no glory in scaring a 'fraidy cat of a girl!" the other grunted.

Glen Boyd picked up a hot wienie, it slipped into the fire and he, in trying to pick it up again, scorched a finger, which brought a yell from him. As Glen yelled, his face was turned squarely towards the old house; and his companions, not knowing what had happened, thought he had seen something unusual at the shack. Glen had seen nothing, but just as the last echo of his howl of pain died away and everybody was looking towards the house, a white form appeared at a broken window, waved two arms from which flowed ends of a robe, tapped ominously against a rattling pane of glass and threw something that glistened in the moonlight and which thumped upon the ground, rolled a distance and was easily made out by the watchers to be a skull.

In an instant the whole crowd at the mill-pond scattered, everybody for himself, and, except for the patter of retreating feet, no sound was to be heard.

Next, at the house occurred the banging of a door, the slam of a falling window and then the crashing of broken glass. Several members of the crowd of fleeing youngsters looked over their shoulders in time to discover the white-robed object at the window hastily crawl through and drop to the ground. This action on the part of the ghost sprouted wings on the feet of every member of the skedaddling bunch. No girls ever ran so fast as those in that party. It was afterwards declared; and no boys ever displayed such eagerness to put a few miles between them and "Rats' Nest" as the lads of the crowd from the mill-pond.

The apparition stumbled over the skull it cast out of the window, rolled over a time or two on the ground, gained its feet and began to frantically remove the covering of flimsy white that was wound around its body. It seemed the spook was swifter of foot than any of those in flight, as it soon gained upon the frightened young folks, all of whom imagined, and not without cause, that the thing was in pursuit.

"Scatter!" commanded Glen Boyd, as he struck out for a line of trees and bushes filled with shadows, where he hid. Everybody wished to at least throw the pursuing spook off his or her trail and when the matter became positively serious and some of the girls were upon the verge of fainting, the spook succeeded in freeing himself of his trappings and, to the astonishment of the frightened youths, they beheld—Tom Lamb.

Cries of indignation and sneers of derision greeted the appearance of Tom. The others turned upon him and some of the boys might have done him an injury, had not the former gasped, "Keep on going, folks! I'll tell you all about it later!" and with those words Tom started faster than ever, now and then casting a look of terror over his shoulder, at the shack in the distance.

"That's about all from you!" shouted one of the boys, while the girls, pale and indignant, gathered to vent their anger upon Tom Lamb, who was going just as fast as ever two good legs could carry him.

"Come back, you sneaking coward! Come back and fight; and I can lick you with"—a lad shouted, but before he finished his threat a girl shrieked and again the crowd started down the road.

At the same window from which Tom Lamb, fixed up as a ghost, had hopped, was now to be seen another awesome thing. This one stood there in a glare of red. It had a head of a beast and the same carried two horns. As the fleeing youngsters looked at the thing, over their shoulders, it lashed a long tail which flopped out of the window and hung over the sill. The new terror seemed to grin.

Glen Boyd, who had hidden among the shadows when he shouted for his companions to scatter, soon peered out of his hiding place, spied the second spook at "Rats' Nest" and was soon "beating it" about half a mile in the rear of the others. He only needed one glance at the window of the mill-pond house to discover why he should go—and go fast.

Over the night air rang a series of yells, then the sound of an explosion and a sheet of red fire belched out of the window where the awesome thing had made its appearance and the shack became dark, except for the pale moonlight shining through the old windows.

The fishermen passed the balance of the night some three miles from Si Lambert's pond, in an open spot of a meadow where surroundings were plainly visible—in the opposite direction from town—and did not venture past the place until sunrise. Even then some of the girls were afraid to retrace their steps and only on the solemn promise of the boys to stick close to them and never run, no matter what happened, did they consent to go back and on to their homes.

Several parents were found anxiously wandering here and there, searching for the missing fishers. There was a lot of derision and some relief expressed when all members of the party hove in sight and related that a sure-enough spook showed up at "Rats' Nest."

Tom Lamb, shame-faced and greatly puzzled, explained that he and Herb Jenkins planned a ghost scare; that he was "it" and played his part all right, but that a real ghost showed up and took the job away from him. "I was only going to give them a good scare and then 'expose' myself," Tom explained; "but an honest-and-truly spook chased me off."

"And who was the other?" one of the parents inquired.

"How can we tell?" cried several in the party. "We are all here and"—

"All?" the man asked.

Somebody began counting noses and of a sudden exclaimed, "Where's Herb Jenkins?"

"Well, let me tell you," the man continued. "About 11:30 last night a young fellow by the name of Herb Jenkins came to town and phoned some of us that a ghost devil with a cow's head had frightened all of you half to death. He giggled when he talked and that's all there is to it, I guess. A lot of silly young folks got it put over on them, so it appears."

"Ah!" gasped Tom Lamb, as he gritted his teeth and nervously opened and shut his hands.

Herb had simply put on a second ghost show of his own. With an old weather-beaten cow's head, a sheet and a piece of old hose, together with a stick of red fire and a firecracker, he did the trick.

THE THREE PRINCES WHO FAILED TO WIN MAFALDA.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN

THE love story of a Princess—it is not for stodgy pens. Happy subjects are toasting Mafalda in rare Italian wines, and who would dare match phrases against the bouquet of the draughts? To the beauty of Mafalda as a bride the flowers gave praise enough: those hosts of blossoms from Lake Como's summer garland. What use to call her the charming, the vivacious Mafalda while lilting violins still echo through palace corridors? Or say it was a romantic wedding, except to add that most royal weddings are not? All Italy is sighing. All Italy is gay. No words, no words! Let the champagne bubbles dance for Princess Mafalda; for her moonlight and music—a little laugh, a little quiet prayer; for her a long life and merry.

'Twas such a romantic wedding. Her parents, the King and Queen of Italy, were there. Premier Mussolini read the civil service. Verne Palace in the small mountain town of Racconigi had not seen a gathering like this in two hundred years. Italian nobility and visiting great ones crowded the halls. Gift tables were heavy with gold and silver. All was pomp and ceremony, befitting the daughter of a King. Yet what lent the blessing, where was the romance? Why, the bridegroom, the bridegroom. He gave the magic touch. Because, you see, he is a poor nobody. So very poor, so much of a nobody.

The wedding guests doubtless looked at him with shining eyes. "Prince Philip of Hesse," they murmured, so as not to forget his name. Well, he will have fame enough in Italy now. He has given this warm-hearted land new faith in the old story of the Princess and the pauper. Princesses do not marry poor men. Princess Mafalda did. Hail to Prince Philip of Hesse! He was one of the few bridegrooms who have appeared important at their own weddings. His presence transformed a royal show into a fairy play. A dream turned to life. Drop a rose or lift a cup to this bold, this magnificent young man. The list of student Princes who have won royal brides is not long.

Although it goes without saying, a few at the wedding doubtless said that the Prince and the Princess were a likely pair. Mafalda wore satin and lace made by her own people. She stood straight and slim at the altar, a little girl with dark brown eyes and wavy black hair and color in her cheeks like the glow of a firefly on a pearl. She had invited all her childhood playmates to the wedding, just like the fairy books, and among those who stood in places of honor was Vincenzia Stirpe, her aged nurse. Perhaps in some officer's uniform stood, too, a man who when a boy had torn the Princess' paper dolls. But not a word of this came by cable from Rome.

And the Prince? Oh, he was handsome. He marched down the aisle with his bride after the ceremony, tall and stalwart. A blond man who has a military manner and clanks a sword most delightfully. Handsome, but poor. Remember that. He will never sit on a throne. No bolsheviks will be tempted to blow him up and leave Mafalda a widow. He has a chance to be happy ever after. Lucky, lucky Prince.

"I DON'T want to be a Queen," said the Princess Mafalda before the wedding. Which shows the Princess has great wisdom. These are anxious times for Queens. What with looking after the King and being nice to the commoner who is bossing him and the country, a Queen has her hands full these days. Then a Queen's children are such a problem. Most Americans know a Queen who has been traveling all over Europe trying to find husbands for her daughters. A Queen, these days, is never sure that she'll be permanent in her palace. She might have to pack up and escape to Paris with her husband any day.

No, it is nicer for Mafalda to stay a Princess. The Prince is going to build her a little house—they are called villas in Italy—on the royal grounds of Savoia in Rome. After the honeymoon they will go to housekeeping like ordinary mortals.

It is becoming easier to think of a Princess as an ordinary mortal. A man named Molnar wrote a play called "The Swan" and failed to give it a happy ending because he couldn't imagine a Princess being ordinary. His Princess gave her poor tutor the go-by and married a Prince whom she didn't love. But Mafalda's story is different, because she is a flesh-and-blood Princess and lives in a time when Princesses are treated as such.

The world outside the Italian court circle has had few glimpses of the Princess Mafalda. A cable report now and then; a picture or two a year; casual mention in a magazine article. Yet, they have been enough to make her real. First, a group of children of the royal family taken on the beach at Bordighera, which is the Italian Riviera. In the group stands 9-year-old Mafalda, grasping a sand pail. Then a portrait at the age of 13—a demure miss all eyes, with her pigtails down her back. Next, the Princess with the King and Queen inside the royal carriage—she is 15 now—and ready for longer dresses. Now a succession of pictures: a girl on a horse, a girl in a party gown, a girl with fencing rapier, a girl with a violin. At last, the girl a bride.

The brief news dispatches have painted her sketchily but none the less realistically. When the Princess started learning four languages the world knew it and pitied her. When the Princess fell ill from scarlet fever, the world was sympathetic. When the Princess and her big sister, Yolanda, helped their father rescue some fishermen floundering in the Mediterranean surf the world applauded. When the Princess worked on embroidery while her mother made the royal cheeses everyone said: "What a nice practical little girl." But her romance, her decision to marry the man she loved and not the man the men of state selected, has not been so easy to follow.

THE whole thing began five years ago when the Princess was 18 and ready for the royal auction block. She had been trained for the throne-room and in all the arts deemed necessary to Queens. Besides five languages she possessed skill with the rapier to give her gracefulness, could ride a horse, played four musical instruments and knew whether the Bulgarian Ambassador takes precedence over the Minister from Peru at a reception.

Her elder sister, the Princess Yolanda, had first choice of all the matrimonial alliances which presented themselves. There was talk at the time that she might wed the Prince of Wales. This rumor probably was Mafalda's first introduction to the new freedom for Princesses. "But sister," she said, perhaps, "you couldn't marry him. He is not Catholic."

"I could if I wanted to," retorted Yolanda, "but I don't think he is ready to marry anyone. Besides, I shall marry an Italian."

"But, sister, you must be a Queen."

"Yes?"

The Princess Yolanda was in revolt. When a rumor started that she would wed Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium she denied it vigorously. She had fallen in love with Captain Count Carlo Calvi di Bergolo, a dashing cavalry officer.

It is not difficult to imagine the two Princesses discussing Yolanda's romance, with sighs and smiles. "You can take one of the Crown Princes, Mafalda"—did Yolanda say?—"but I shall marry my soldier."

And she did marry Count Calvi in 1923, to the great surprise of European courts. Princess Mafalda was one of the bridesmaids. What an object lesson in independence that wedding must have been to her.

But the traditions that hedge a Princess would not be denied. No sooner was Yolanda married to her Count than the court gossips said: "Yolanda was permitted to have her way, but the little Mafalda must make a marriage of state." So once more there were rumors. It was said that Mafalda's engagement to Crown Prince Leopold shortly would be announced. She was reported engaged, after an interval, to Prince Nicholas of Rumania. Still there was no confirmation from Princess Mafalda. And every dealer in chat-chat said "Ah!" when in 1924 the Italian court announced that Princess Mafalda and her mamma and papa were to visit London. They did visit London and were met by the King and Queen of England and H. R. H. the Prince of Wales.

Ah!

But although the Prince was as attentive to Mafalda as he was to American girls, nothing came of it. London admired the little Italian Princess and named a cherry color "Mafalda red" in her honor. Protestant England would never stand for a Catholic Queen, they sighed, dismissing poor little Mafalda as impossible. It is not of record that Mafalda grieved or that her heart was on her sleeve, or that it ever went pit-a-pat for H. R. H. Not a pit nor a pat. The Princess returned to Rome and H. R. H. went off to Africa to shoot lions.

Back in Rome another thing happened to strengthen Mafalda's sense of democracy. Her big brother, the Crown Prince Humbert, fell in love with a beautiful girl of untitled station. There was a pretty how-de-do in the Savoy palace. King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena told Humbert that he must forget romance. He is to be King of Italy some day, and while Princesses may marry commoners the time has not come when a Crown Prince can wed for love alone. Humbert was obdurate and got packed off on a mission to South America where his parents hoped he would forget.

May we not guess that Mafalda was on the Prince's side? Perhaps she stood at his elbow and egged him on with an "'Atta-boy, Humbert," or whatever a Princess says to a Crown Prince when egging him on. Perhaps the tragedy of Humbert's love affair determined her in the desire to marry only the man she loved.

A word must be put in here, too, for the men mentioned in the case. Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium is a most democratic young man who once visited America and went roaming about Yellowstone Park dressed in the uniform of a private soldier. Prince Nicholas of Rumania has studied at Eton and is not above boxing with professional pugilists. Both these young fellows are not to be forced into a loveless marriage. Nor is the Prince of Wales—not into any marriage.

Mafalda met them all and they met Mafalda and romance did not blossom. It must be admitted, too, that Mafalda's parents were very decent about her refusing suggested alliances. Queen Helena was a Princess of Montenegro, which had the most democratic royal family in Europe. King Victor has been taught by the black hordes of Fascisti that the day of royalty is done. Kings must rule by the love and admiration of their subjects. And what would Italy have said if its darling Mafalda were forced into a distasteful marriage?

So the times and the manners conspired to aid this rebel Princess. Mafalda's heart was safe in the palace, where so many royal hearts have been broken. She drove her own automobile and rode her own horses and waited for the man she could love.

HE CAME one day not so long ago. It was Saturday afternoon. Think of that! To be able to name the very day and time of day when Mafalda met her Prince. She met him at a garden party beside a handsome Roman villa. He had come to Rome to study architecture, the Prince business being very poor in Hesse, which is part of the German Republic. But because he he was Prince Philip of Hesse and no revolutions could change his royal blood he was invited to the garden party. And here, on the lawn, he met the Princess Mafalda, who wore a white dress and a picture hat, because that is what Princesses wear at garden parties. As for him, he may have had on Oxford bags, who knows? Probably she does not remember.

"They found they had many tastes in common," states the official court bulletin as an afterthought in describing the wedding. Even Premier Mussolini has a romantic strain. Many tastes in common!

"I like horses," said the Prince.

"So do I," said the Princess.

"I like music," he said, after a pause.

"I like music, too," sighed she.

And so the romance started. A lawn, a parasol, a royal wooing! He told her, probably, how he had left his simple Berlin apartment to come to Rome to study. She was interested. Here had appeared a young man who amounted to something. A Prince who had to work. A poor, studious young man. And handsome, so handsome.

"IT WAS the first of a series of meetings," states the court bulletin, further. A series of meetings!

She prevailed on her parents to invite Prince Philip to court. He was a German and Italy had fought on the other side. He was a Protestant and Italy is a Roman Catholic nation. He was a Prince without standing and the Princess Mafalda the daughter of a reigning house. But the King and Queen invited him.

Soon he began to speak of that little home he would like to build. Being an architect he could talk better about little homes than young men whose ideas are persistent but vague. He could describe just what sort of villa he believed a Princess would like. And draw plans, and give estimates. Oh, he was very practical.

The time came when the Princess Mafalda, who might have had a palace in Brussels or Bucharest or maybe London, was content with the prospect of a villa in Rome. Blissfully content.

But the men of state frowned when they saw how things were drifting. What would the King say? What would the Pope say? What would the world say?

The King said: "Daughter, your happiness is mine."

The Pope said: "If the young man will agree to rear your children as Catholics until they are 21, you may have our blessing."

And the world said: "Now that's a sweet little story about the Princess Mafalda marrying a poor man, isn't it?"

CRASHING With the Shenandoah

THE FIRST Complete Account of the Disaster

As told to the Post-Dispatch

BY THE SURVIVORS

The outstanding events in this great tragedy of the air have been told hurriedly in the news from day to day. A complete first-hand account of the disaster, however, was not forthcoming until Post-Dispatch Staff Correspondent Paul Y. Anderson obtained interviews with the Shenandoah officers themselves. The following vivid descriptions of the wreck constitute what is probably the truest account yet given to the public.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.

DAWN was slowly breaking over the high, rolling hills of Eastern Ohio. The daylight was arriving tardily, for it was a gray and dreary morning, fitful gusts of wind carrying a heavy drizzle of rain. Early risers at breakfast in farmhouse kitchens were forecasting a day of wet weather, and speculating upon the effect on the crops, when they became aware of an alien sound in the air, a hum that swelled and faded, mounting at times to a faint guttural roar. Hastily emerging to porches and yards, they beheld in the sky an awesome spectacle. Half a mile overhead hung a great silvery dirigible, shadowy in the imperfect light, but undoubtedly alive and real. The resonant roaring told them that all her motors were going, but she was making no headway. Something strange was happening up there, because the damp gusts which blew through the apple trees were not of a strength to trouble the progress of this mighty craft.

Now her nose gently inclined toward earth, as if she would descend. But no, she was rising. Heading downward, she was nevertheless going up. In that position of descent, she continued to mount vertically. Now she had reached an altitude of a mile and the ascent began to check. A moment later and she began to fall, slowly at first, and then with gathering speed, until she reached the level at which they had first seen her.

The farmers and their wives and children marveled at these queer maneuvers by the mysterious ship. It was not light enough for them to read the black-lettered name, "Shenandoah," on her sides. But they had seen airships, and they knew that these perpendicular movements were unnatural, and the defiant thrumming of five great motors bespake a mighty effort to drive her forward.

The quick descent had stopped. Above their wondering eyes the great ship banked suddenly, as airplanes do. She nosed abruptly upward—and broke squarely in two at a point about one-third way back from the nose. At that instant the forward car, largest of the six gondolas which swung from her under side, broke away and fell a sheer half mile to the ground, as a stone falls. The silent, shuddering spectators did not know that the car contained eight men, one of them her commander. But a frightful crash on a nearby hill signaled death to the eight.

While the ship had broken in two, the sections did not behave in the same manner. The larger, comprising the rear two-thirds of the craft, was falling. But it was not the plummet-like drop of the control car. The huge fragment pitched and circled and changed ends like an autumn leaf, only with far greater speed. Now it fell tail first, now the open end was down. It went in crazy arcs and curves like something whose heaviness was partly sustained by a considerable remaining buoyant force. Nevertheless, it was falling and falling fast.

IT WAS a minute, or perhaps two, before it crashed, jagged end foremost, on the very hilltop where the control car's sickening drop had ended. The impact was terrific. Metallic girders clanged and groaned and there was a ripping sound of torn fabric. Then the section bounced—like a sluggish football it bounded to a height of about 100 feet and slid lazily forward down across the treetops that hid the other side of the hill.

But the section was smaller now. Where it had struck was an indescribable mass of wreckage—twisted girders, shredded fabric, and under it all, ground into the dirt, what had been the two forward power cars. None knew just then that one of those cars had contained three men. From another part of the debris a member of the crew crawled out, then dragged at the feebly stirring form of another.

The reduced fragment of the rear section slid obliquely down across the hillside. The treetops caught at it, snagging great sheets of the fabric away and baring the metal framework inside; one sturdy limb tore away the dangling rear power car which fell thunderously through the foliage and rolled down the slope among the tree trunks.

The timber line did not extend to the foot of the slope. The huge piece slipped down through the edge of the trees and, when near the bottom of the little valley, veered and eddied whimsically—then settled to earth with hardly a shock. Nevertheless, it slid along the ground from its momentum for quite a little way. Even before it touched, men in dungarees were popping out through holes in the sides and bottom and dropping off. The foot of one was lassoed by a dangling strand of wire and he was dragged along the ground for several yards. The gusts which brought the drizzle had not ceased and it seemed that the great rounded hulk might roll over and crush the man who was being dragged; but he tore his foot free and scrambled out of danger as the wreck rolled over.

There were 19 who piled out of the shattered section, none seriously hurt. There was little shouting and less excitement. This may seem strange to ordinary civilian nerves, but these men were not civilians; they were members of the finest picked crew of lighter-than-air men in the United States Navy, and most of them had been in other wrecks. They assembled quickly around their senior surviving officer and awaited orders. The man who had crawled out of the ghastly litter on the hill came running down to get help for his injured comrade. But the three who had been in the power car, and two who had been inside the hulk, were beyond human aid.

What had happened to the other section of the ship after it broke in midair—the forward one-third of her? The answer was in plain sight. There, 7000 feet up, it floated serenely as if it were a complete craft in its own right instead of being a mere fragment with a nose at one end and a yawning hole at the other. Instead of falling with its sister section, it had righted itself immediately and after rising to a high altitude was now drifting lazily away—soon to disappear in the clouds. Those on the ground did not know that it contained seven of their comrades. It was more than an hour afterward when they learned how the cool and resourceful seven, navigating their mutilated derelict as a free balloon, had brought it down 12 miles distant with only a single casualty.

Having taken this brief and imperfect glance at the momentous tragedy as it was being enacted before the eyes of half a dozen Ohio farm families on the gray morning of September 3, let us turn back for a moment to get a better understanding of what had been happening and hear from the lips of the men who had participated in it the vastly closer and more stirringly personal details of the disaster. It was not an easy narrative to gather. Brave men are traditionally reticent about their parts in heroic events. Moreover, not merely the Shenandoah calamity, but the whole air policy of the nation have quickly become involved in bitter controversy, and while the wordy warfare rages the men who simply do and die are constrained to remain silent and let armchair Admirals do the talking. Nevertheless, we shall see.

SHORTLY after 4 o'clock on the afternoon of September 2, the gigantic ship left her mooring mast at Lakehurst, New Jersey, carrying Commander Zachary Lansdowne (the navy's most experienced lighter-than-air officer) and 42 men. In addition to the crew the number included Lieutenant Walter L. Richardson, head of the photographic section of naval aviation, official photographer on the trip; Colonel C. G. Hall, official army observer; Petty Officer Frank Master, who was to leave the ship at Akron, Ohio, by a parachute jump to see his newly born son, and Yeoman R. Wilson of Belleville, Illinois, who was going home. The ship was scheduled to pass over Columbus, Wheeling, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Des Moines and several cities and towns of Minnesota and Wisconsin, Detroit, and thence homeward. Here the narrative will be taken up by Lieutenant Richardson. As aerial photographer, he has had much experience in aircraft. His viewpoint is somewhat different from that of a member of the crew.

SURVIVORS WHO TELL THEIR STORY.

"We got away very smoothly," he said. "I remember that at Mount Holly, New Jersey, we dropped a flag in a little parachute. I made a lot of pictures over Philadelphia, working from the radio compartment of the control car. Fortunately, my plates were not smashed so that I have the picture record of that last flight. When it became dark I went up into the ship, making arrangements for my work the next day. The crew were very fine about helping me and I arranged with the engineer of the after power car to work from there the next day. Lieutenant Anderson, the aerological officer (literally, the ship's weather man), told me we were likely to have showers the next day, Thursday, but that on the whole I might expect fair weather for my work.

"I had supper at the officers' table. Commander Lansdowne was there, but I don't remember anything in particular that he said. He never talked very much. We had hot coffee and hot soup, carried in thermos bottles. There was plenty of good food. After supper I climbed up in the nose, where there was a platform with an open hatch. It was a fine place to watch from and I lay there quite a while looking at the lighted cities and towns as we passed over them. Our speed was about 30 or 35 miles an hour. I remember noticing an amusement park lighted up. Lieutenant Anderson told me that some friends in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, signaled him by turning their house lights on and off three times in succession, and he replied with three flashes of his pocket lamp. We were running at an altitude of about 2500 feet.

"My bunk was near the center power cars and I turned in about 8 o'clock but didn't sleep well, for I was very near the motors. I suppose I woke up twenty times. After midnight the ship began pitching and I noticed that the speed of the motors was being changed, which indicated that we were having a little weather. By 5 a. m. she was pitching badly. My impression, there in the dark, was that we were behind our schedule and were passing over the Allegheny Mountains. The air is always bumpy over mountains. I learned later that we had already crossed the mountains.

"I got up and went to the center of the ship for a drink of water. Feeling that I would be unable to sleep I intended to go on up to the control car and see what was doing; but the water made me feel so much better that I decided to go back to the bunk and try it again. That saved my life.

"The ship was pitching violently now, and was nosing downward more suddenly than upward. As my head was toward the nose I turned around so that the pitching wouldn't throw me against the end of the bunk on my head. I noticed the air was getting cooler. The speed of the motors was being changed often. I knew they were having a lot of trouble up forward, and in the next 20 minutes I became pretty certain that we were in for a wreck of some kind.

"It was just about 5:40 when a strong draft of cold air came in from the forward part of the ship. It was at least 10 or 15 degrees colder than the normal temperature and I can't describe what a shock it gave me. I suppose that was when the ship ascended to an altitude of 6000 feet. Then the air became warmer and no doubt that is when she went down to 2500 again. But these quick changes convinced me that something was about to happen.

"Suddenly the ship nosed up. She kept nosing up until I was holding to the end of my hammock to keep from falling out. When she got up to an angle of 45 degrees I knew we were gone; but she kept rising until she was almost standing on her tail. Then there was a terrible crash. I can't describe it—girders breaking, fabric ripping—I could feel the ship being broken in two. It was an awful feeling. The man in the bunk across from me said:

"'By God, we've got it this time!' That was the only word I heard spoken."

HERE it will be well to interrupt Lieutenant Richardson's narrative for the present and discover what had been happening up forward in the control car where officers and men on duty were battling to save the ship from the fate which overtook it. For this information we turn to Lieutenant-Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, second in command of the ship and (after Commander Lansdowne's death) her senior officer.

Rosendahl is a tall lithe sunburned hair-trigger fighting man from Cleburne, Texas. He will not relish having it said in print that he is a brave man and a modest one. In fact he will be very "sore" about it. The writer pursued him for a week before this story was obtained, and it was obtained only after the most solemn promise and admonition "that you won't make me look like a damned fool before the service by calling me a hero and singling me out from a crew of officers and men, every one of whom did his duty just as he was expected to do it." Faithful, therefore, to the promise and mindful of the admonition, we leave the reader to form his impression of the man from his actions and his story which follows:

"Hancock and I were the navigating officers (Lieutenant-Commander Louis Hancock who was killed). We were standing four-hour watches. I had gone off at midnight but was called about 3:30 a. m. I learned that we had been through an electrical storm. It had passed but we were bucking a terrific wind and were making no ground speed although all the engines were going. (Airmen distinguish "ground speed," or speed over the ground, from "air speed." Thus, in a high wind a ship might be making 60 miles an hour "air speed" and be making no "ground speed" at all.)

"Because of the situation Hancock did not turn in but stayed in the control car after I relieved him. If he had turned in he might be alive now. The Captain (Commander Lansdowne) had been called earlier and was there. We were drifting from side to side and were several miles off our course. Our altitude was about 2500 feet.

"When we saw that we could make no ground speed against the wind the Captain gave orders to the elevator man to descend to 2100 feet. (The elevator man was the one who worked the elevators or steering

PRINCE Seif-ed-Din

Makes His ESCAPE From England

Like the Prisoner of Zenda he has been kept, for the last 23 years, in a prison-asylum—apparently "for reasons of state." Now, by means of a desperate dash for freedom, he has won his liberty—and the peace of Egypt is at stake.

"WRAPPED in the garments of the harem and heavily veiled he made his escape."

PRINCE AHMED SEIF-ED-DIN, the most modern of all "political prisoners." He has just escaped from England after 23 years in prison.

KING FUAD I of Egypt, shot by the young Prince Seif-ed-Din.

LAW and diplomacy failed for almost 25 years. But money has just found a way to free the brother-in-law of King Fuad I of Egypt, Prince Ahmed Seif-ed-Din, who for nearly a quarter of a century has been a prisoner in an English asylum for the insane. In the midst of a golden shower the Prince disappeared last month from an excursion dock in an English seaside town. With him went one of the guards who had been his constant attendant for more than 20 years. They were gone as completely as though the sea had swallowed them.

Then began Scotland Yard's search. An insane man, said England, was at large. And England wasn't sure that the insane man was harmless. The countryside was scoured. So also were the capitals of Europe.

Meanwhile the Prince Seif-ed-Din, wrapped in the flowing garments of the harem and heavily veiled as if he were a Turkish woman was speeding by sea to Turkey to rejoin his mother, the Princess Nowd Jhan Hanem, who for a quarter of a century had been fighting for his freedom. Then, on the morning of September 15, the newspaper Ikdam, at Constantinople, announced that the Prince, in disguise, had safely reached the Golden Horn from Trieste. Turkish authorities and his relatives denied all knowledge of his coming. For the flight of the Prince might involve the destinies of Turkey and of Egypt.

Here is a latter-day "Hamlet," a drama of the Near-East and of England. Like his prototype in Shakspeare's tragedy, the Prince Ahmed Seif-ed-Din attempted to kill a King. And the gentlemen of the European press are seeking to determine now what Shakspeare's commentators have struggled to learn—whether the Prince was mad or merely pretending to be. It is a modern "Hamlet," but the tale is colored with the jewels, the glitter, the wealth and the mystery of the East. It is as well a new Arabian Night. An excursion ship, plying between Hastings and Boulogne, plays the role of the djinn, which whisked the Prince away. Instead of the fabled Roc it was a white-winged yacht that flew with him from the world of the West to his Eastern home. Through all the story runs a sense of mystery, like the woof of an Oriental tapestry.

If this Prince ever should follow the example of certain ex-royalties of Europe, who have sought vindication in the world's eyes and author's royalties by writing a book, what a tale he will have to tell, of bribery and disguise, flight, rendezvous and swift escape.

IT is 27 years since Prince Ahmed attempted the life of the Prince of Egypt who now is King Fuad. The intervening years have never told the reason for his act. King Fuad's harem holds the secret. It will not be disclosed to prying Western eyes. That was back in 1898. Prince Ahmed was only a mere boy. He had been educated in Constantinople and in France. He had acquired a flair for the things, the civilization of the Western world. He was 17, a thin stripling of a youth, with dark Semetic face and handsome features. A boy of medium height. He wanted nothing—so it seemed—for he was rich beyond a miser's dreaming. A member of the reigning family in Egypt, he had lands and slaves, gold and jewels, silks and all the treasures of the Orient.

Fuad I was only a princeling then. He was far removed, but yet in line, for the throne, on which his nephew, Abbas Hilmi, sat as Khedive, and upon which he would probably still be seated had he not plotted with Turkey to deliver Egypt to Germany in the World War. And, so long as he was a possible ruler of troublous Egypt, England kept a guardian eye on Fuad.

Happy in love as in life, it seemed, Fuad had married the beautiful Princess Chivekiar, who was sister to Prince Ahmed Seif-ed-Din. The world of Cairo, where they lived, believed that marriage "merry as a wedding bell." It was not. Was it jealousy of some other favorite? Was it some slight her husband put upon her? The answer has not yet been told. But the Princess Chivekiar whispered something to her brother, and that stalwart youth, with his European ideas, sought out Prince Fuad, to punish him.

THEY met in the Prince's club. The youth was scarlet in his anger, his eyes flashed fire as he called Fuad away from his table at cards and spoke to him. What was said was spoken in whispers. Hot and quick came the words of Ahmed. For answer, Prince Fuad laughed at the stripling and turned away with mocking laughter.

"Boy, go back to your nurse," he said.

Ahmed threw himself upon the older and more powerful man. They struggled on the floor of the cardroom; others rushed to separate them. Then a pistol's flash and the marble-floored room re-echoed with the detonation. Prince Fuad staggered back, clutching at his throat. The bullet fired by his brother-in-law had pierced it.

Prince Ahmed, of course, was arrested at once. A few weeks later he was brought to trial before an Egyptian court, which sentenced him to seven years' imprisonment. Also it was ordered that he should pay his brother-in-law's doctors' bills. Meanwhile the surgeons had been fighting for Fuad's life, and in the fight they won. Their bill was £1800 ($9000).

When Prince Ahmed was on trial for his attempt upon the life of Fuad, an effort was made to show that he was not mentally responsible. It failed. English influence is not warped in favor of the insanity plea. But it remained in the minds of those mysterious ones who were pulling the wires which made Prince Ahmed Seif-ed-Din a puppet in the game of empire.

IMMEDIATELY after he had been sent to prison the Government sequestered his vast estates. Egyptian officials were appointed to administer them—upon the theory that the young man was insane. Four years he served in prison. Suddenly he was released. But it was only a glimpse of freedom that he had. He stepped from the shadow of the prison gate into a carriage which took him to the docks. He was placed aboard a liner bound for England. Immediately after his arrival there he was imprisoned in Ticehurst House, a private insane asylum in Sussex.

To release him every force of law or diplomacy which could be brought to bear was used by his mother, the Princess Nowd Jhan Hanem. But in her appeals to the British Government she was always quietly blocked. She wrote Lord Cromer, then England's ruler in the land of Egypt. All the satisfaction she received from him was a statement that her son would not be interned for life. Each successive British Government was approached by the Princess, who had taken up her residence in Turkey, that she might be freer to work for her son's release than was possible under the watchful spies of Egypt. The last attempt was made during the Labor Government of Ramsay MacDonald. Djeleleddin Bey, former Turkish Ambassador to Rome, approached the British Premier. But the Egyptian legation in London heard of his effort and insisted that Ahmed be kept where he was.

In all this time, however, Fate had been hard at work in Egypt. Abbas Hilmi, nephew of Fuad, had sided with Turkey and the Central Powers when the World War was precipitated. England removed him from his throne. His uncle, Hussein Kemal, was named Khedive and not long after died. Fuad was a brother of Hussein Kemal. By British approval he ascended the throne, taking the title of Sultan. A few months later he was to proclaim himself King—the first King in Egypt since the Pharaohs.

Great Britain, meantime, was in the delicate position of developing an independent Egypt while at the same time safeguarding her own interests there. Fuad, of course, was under British influence. It has been hinted that the imprisonment of Ahmed was one factor in his friendliness. Friendly he stayed, while the Young Egypt party, infuriated at British influence, cried loudly for revolt.

"The charges," wrote the special correspondent of the Post-Dispatch in London of the accusations made by Prince Ahmed's friends, "are incapable of proof without an inquiry." The Prince's mother threatened to force that inquiry through the League of Nations. But when the Labor Government failed her the Princess Nowd Jhan Hanem pinned her faith to the power of gold. Even before Talleyrand said it, the Orient had established the dictum that every man has his price.

AS a smoke screen for her movements she filed a suit against the British Government, in August. She claimed from Great Britain the sum of £4,500,000—roundly $22,500,000—as damages for the detention of her son. She also asked $12,500,000 on account, as a part of the income from the estates of the imprisoned Prince, which are said to produce $1,000,000 a year. The basis of the suit was the discovery that Said Pasha, twice the Premier of Egypt, was short $200,000 in his accounts as administrator of the estates, a post from which he had just been dismissed and in which King Fuad had replaced him by Prince Mohammed Ali Ibrahim and the Minister of Finance as joint administrators. The English press hinted at the almost medieval mystery in Prince Ahmed's imprisonment and predicted there would be a finish fight. The Government moved to protect itself and the Powers which have made Ahmed a pawn in the empire game.

Meanwhile in the sanitarium at Ticehurst, Prince Ahmed was living his accustomed way. At his side constantly during the day were William Pilbeam, an old British soldier, who had been his guard for 20 years, and Alexander Bastone, another attendant. Day and night the two men were with him. Often he went for a ride in his motor car, a bearded, swarthy, foreign-looking man, was stopped before the shops to purchase books in French or English or new records for his phonograph. Reading and music—these kept company with his mind in the long years of imprisonment. Folks who saw him grew to say "Good-morning" to the stranger. He was a familiar figure of the countryside.

Then, in early September, Prince Ahmed was taken for a change of air to Hastings, where Ticehurst House has a branch sanitarium.

He went about the seaport in company with his guards. He haunted the waterside. One morning he went early to the docks, where the Devonia, an excursion boat, was sailing for Boulogne. Pilbeam and Bastone were with him. The Prince lounged about the dock listening idly to the ship's band as it played its concert. Suddenly to Bastone he said: "Get me a paper." The latter left his side for an instant on that mission. When he returned the Prince was gone.

BASTONE could see the Devonia putting out across the channel. It didn't occur to him that the Prince was aboard until he had searched everywhere about the docks. Then he reported that the man was missing. There was a hurried consultation with attorneys. Scotland Yard was called in. To the special branch which tracks down spies and handles other delicate tasks for the foreign and home offices of the Government, the case was given. They uncovered a melodramatic story of intrigue, so stagey, so crude, that only its very openness can be said to have prevented its discovery.

UNDER the smoke screen of the suit she filed the Princess Nowd Jhan Hanem had gone to Paris and then Boulogne. With her was the Turkish Pasha Ibrahim Feridoun, her confidant and adviser. They had traveled back and forth across the channel until all their plans were laid. The Princess was prepared to spend a fantastic sum to rescue her son.

There were midnight motor-car rides. There was an attempt to buy a yacht at Deal. To buy a yacht would have been as nothing to the Princess. The first plan had been to arrange a "fake holdup" with armed men to stop the Prince on one of his motor rides, "abduct" him and speed to Deal, where the yacht would wait. The high price offered for the craft they sought made its owner suspicious and he warned police, so that that plan was abandoned.

There were whispered conferences in hotel lounges, there were visits by a man of mystery who was surreptitiously handed secret messages. That Man of Mystery is said to have been an English professional man of considerable standing, who has a taste for adventure which is hard to satisfy.

Time after time the plans went wrong. Ticehurst House had been warned that "something was in the wind." The guard about Prince Ahmed had been increased. But the scheming went on—and the Prince was freed.

WHEN Bastone was sent for a newspaper that September morning the Prince and his keeper, Pilbeam, walked boldly aboard the Devonia. The former was very ill, it seemed, and a ship's attendant offered to help him, but his comrade said there was no need. By the time Bastone returned the vessel had left her berth. The Prince was on his way to France where, by this time, his mother waited for him. He was ill on the way, so Scotland Yard has heard, but Pilbeam took good care of him. The Devonia docked at her berth in Boulogne. An automobile whisked away the dark-bearded Prince and his companion. It took them to a retreat in the Brunoy Forest.

"THEN a pistol's flash and the marble floored room re-echoed with the detonation."

On that same day in Paris, Ibrahim Feridoun Pasha, Signor Folloni, an Italian lawyer, and a party of women registered at a Paris hotel. In accordance with the law for strangers they filled out the proper report blanks for the Government. These were no sooner in the hands of the clerk than they disappeared, taken through some sleight-of-hand by some one of the party, although the fact that they were missing was not known for more than a week.

Through the streets of Paris these strangers moved freely everywhere—all save one. One woman remained hidden, leaving her room but once. Always, the servants say, she was heavily veiled. They never saw her face.

For a week they stayed. At the same time the Prince Ahmed was in Brunoy Forest. At midnight on Sept. 11 he left his retreat in that hidden place. That same night Ibrahim Feridoun Pasha and his party took a midnight drive from their hotel. They met the Prince, Scotland Yard believes, in the Forest Senart, and they passed the night at a wayside inn. Next morning they were back in the Paris hotel. The veiled woman was with them. But her profile, beneath the veil, was strange.

Was the veiled woman the Prince Ahmed? French detectives think so. They declare in their reports that the Princess Nowd Jhan Hanem was the woman who never showed her face. That after that night at a wayside inn in the Forest Senart, her son was bundled in her robes and took her place. What became of the Princess? It is believed she sped back to Constantinople by motor and rail, to make final arrangements to welcome her son. For certainly she must be reassured that Turkish authorities would not at once deport him.

Another day in Paris and Ibrahim Feridoun Pasha with his entourage left their hotel by motor. Trace of them is missing. But England believes they went to some little port, where the yacht was waiting that carried Prince Ahmed home. For a high-powered yacht, which had been in the harbor at Boulogne for several days left suddenly on the night the Prince reached there, and probably awaited him, it is believed at some little port in the south of France, where the search was much less keen.

One would give much to know the thoughts of Prince Seif-ed-Din on that long flight. What things were uppermost in his mind as the party traveled back to the strange East from that England where he had lived so many years? Likely enough the danger of being arrested and returned to the asylum was enough to occupy him, for the arm of England is long. Night and day the members of the party had to be on their guard. The sight of each British warship they passed must have set anxiety to stalking remorselessly about their decks. If the party had been halted for investigation, it is hardly possible that the Prince's disguise would have saved him. To attract as little notice as possible, and go on and on as swiftly as possible, by land or sea but ever on—that was their need.

But moments came, perhaps, in which he recalled his schoolboy days beneath the towers and minarets of Constantinople—days when he was safe and happy and the future looked very bright. Now he was going to what perils of reprisal from King Fuad, to what pitfalls of plot by agents of strong governments? Indeed, he may have thought wistfully at times of the Ticehurst asylum, where he was a prisoner, indeed, but with every creature comfort supplied and where a large degree of liberty was allowed him. On which of these themes did he ponder most?

Back in Constantinople now is the Prince—and free. Law and diplomacy failed in the efforts of almost quarter of a century. Gold won.

PRISONER and PAINTER, Too

In Oklahoma's Penitentiary

Conrad Maas, life-termer for murder, has found his destiny in covering with striking paintings the grim walls of Oklahoma State Prison. His life story told here for the first time is the amazing Odyssey of an extraordinary man.

INDIANS. This is perhaps the finest painting Maas has executed. Examination of the figures will show the power in this convict's brush.

PASTORAL. Here is a memory from the artist's homeland—Germany.

CONRAD MAAS, today.

THE RACE. Maas has never seen an airplane nor an automobile save through the bars of his prison window.

THE grim walls of his cell bound the life of Conrad Maas, murderer, life-termer, in State's Prison at McAlester, Oklahoma. They do not bound his vision. For he sees with the eyes of an artist and if the walls of Oklahoma's prison do not open out to free him to the world, they let him bring the world within. They are the canvas on which he paints—the gray stone and the grim steel—these are his canvas. And he has painted through many dull drear days, during many silent nights he has lain awake with his thoughts of paints, of oils, of constructions, of perspectives. For Maas has been in prison for more than a quarter of a century—because the crime for which he paid the penalty was brutal. With an ax, in their dugout home in Oklahoma, in 1898, Maas killed his wife.

She was a beautiful peasant girl and he a high-born officer in the army of Prussia's war lord. His career he abandoned for love. Penniless he came to America. Love was buried in the drudgery of an Oklahoma homestead. Hate took its place. Then murder came.

His friends—for the man has friends who have toiled unceasingly through 25 years for his release—declare that Conrad Maas is mad. That was the decision of a Kansas board of examining physicians when Maas, with other Oklahoma convicts, was kept under contract in the Kansas Penitentiary. But the brutality of his crime had aroused the State of Oklahoma. Although the German Government, then in the friendliest relations with this country, used every influence to free the man and take him home, its efforts were a failure.

Then came a time, after many years, when Governor Haskell of Oklahoma decided to pardon Maas. Relatives were in Oklahoma City to take him home. But the old life-termer refused a pardon. "I am innocent of any crime," he said. "The State of Oklahoma has held me here in prison many years. If it pays me for my time I go, if not, I stay. I refuse to accept a pardon." Stay he did, and continued to decorate the prison walls, his own cell, the rotunda and the dining room.

YOU may see him there, if you choose to visit the prison at McAlester, a man of medium height, inclined to stoutness, with a tousel of black hair and a great bushy beard. His face is as seamed and ruddy as a frozen winter apple. A broad round Slavic nose juts out above the long scrubby moustache and is flanked on either side by pendulous cheek-pouches. Watery and staring are his small blue eyes, set off from a massive forehead by a tiny scrub of black eyebrow. He doesn't smile, yet there is something cheerful about the man. You may see him, but the sight most likely will be all. Maas doesn't like strangers. He is suspicious of everybody. And, except for discipline, he is independent.

Last year the present Governor of Oklahoma visited the prison. He noted Conrad's work. He asked to see the painter-prisoner. The Warden sent a runner for old Conrad, who was busy painting at the time.

"Tell the Governor I am busy," was his answer. "If he wants to see me he should come here."

Governor Trapp smiled and went. He paused behind the old man who stood painting on the wall.

"How are you getting along?" he asked cordially.

"All right," said Conrad. And not another word would the painter speak.

THE tragedy of Conrad Maas began when, as a Lieutenant in a swagger regiment in Berlin, he saw and met a peasant girl with whom he fell in love. He was not of the nobility, this youth, but his family rated high in social place and was very wealthy. He had been born in Charlottenburg, near Berlin, in 1865. He had been given a splendid education and after finishing the university went to art school, studying with Anton von Werner. Then came his term of military duty. The influence of relatives got him a commission. He was gay, talented, witty, handsome and his pockets were full of money. He was welcome anywhere.

This was the youth who met plain Gretchen Schmidt, who had come to Berlin as a servant and whose beauty bound him like a chain. Head over heels in love was he. What with another of his rank might have been a passing flirtation became for Conrad Maas a lifetime's love. His devotion was noticed. His family interfered. "You cannot marry her," they said. "Just think of your position."

It was a position. Besides his own career, which promised splendidly, there was his sister Charlotte, who had married Judge Reiss, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in Berlin. "Such a marriage is a suicide," said the Chief Justice.

But suicide was far from the thoughts of Conrad Maas. Apparently he accepted what the family thought inevitable. Meantime he was whispering to his sweetheart the hope of his happiness. "I have my art," he boasted to her. "Professor von Werner has declared that I have talent. We will go far, far from here. We will go to America, where rank does not count. And I will paint your beauty always."

They were vain and idle boastings, but how was youth to know?

SUDDENLY Lieutenant Conrad Maas deserted his regiment. He was on leave, but he overstayed it. Nor relatives nor friends knew where the soldier had gone. Search was made for Fraulein Gretchen Schmidt. Nor was she to be found.

With the money they had saved the lovers had quietly married and made their way to America. By chance rather than otherwise Maas picked on Scranton, Pennsylvania, to be his home. He opened a studio there. Scranton was interested in steel and correspondence colleges—it didn't order portraits. It didn't concern itself about his paintings. All through the day his brush was busy. He painted his wife a hundred times. Nobody came to buy. Nobody came to see. Beauty is not bread, they learned. Conrad Maas and his pretty wife who sat through long enduring hours in the barren studio as his model. The money he had saved was dwindling rapidly. Fame and fortune were passing the painter by.

Came a day when the reserve had vanished. They scarcely knew which way to turn for food. A landlord, pounding at the door, was threatening to take the canvases and turn them out. Yet faith held high. What they could they shouldered in two knapsacks. He carried his painting kit and they started West afoot. As they went West he painted. Pictures were sold for lodging. They were traded for a meal or two.

Yet they were happy. The long confinement, the torturous labor of the studio, the hunger that had been their lot, these had worn him, they had worn her; but they looked eagerly to the future. "You will be outdoors," Gretchen had told him. "You will get bronzed and strong again." That was true of both. They were meeting kindly people. They fed on country fare. Where no picture could be sold Conrad would work a day or two now in the fields. Down the Ohio River they went. On into Kentucky.

THEY came upon an old German farmer who laughed at Conrad's painting as "just foolishness." So the artist, penniless by now, went to work in the fields for him. Evidently the old man was impressed. That night he offered the young folks a chance to rent his farm. He had wanted to retire. "You would make a splendid farmer, my friend," he said, "but an artist—that is foolishness."

They talked it over after supper. "I was raised on a farm and I know how," Gretchen told him. "You can work and here you will grow quite strong once more. It is beautiful and there will be many times when you can paint." So it was determined. They arranged the lease next morning. Gretchen, who was sickened of the towns, could have kissed the cows, so happy was she on a farm.

But with Conrad Maas it was different. For him the farm was toil and drudgery. The odors of the stable disgusted him. From dawn to dusk he was at his work. What time to paint? More, he saw the beauty of his young wife fade as she toiled, too, and there came upon him a terrible realization as he saw her going slattern and happy about the farm, that this was the life she loved—and that the dreams of beauty which had brightened his existence did not exist for her.

Then harvest days and autumn. The crops were in and sold. The shoats, save two for his own butchering, were marketed. He went through the ordeal of killing the winter meat. A blow with the ax, a squeal, and it was done. He saw his wife—as it were in a dream—busy about the work, cutting up the meat. Like a blood-stained animal, it seemed to him, she reveled in the task.

Well, for the year he had $400. For a year of brutal, debasing toil. Neighbors thought the greenhorn had done well. Suddenly Conrad Maas did an inexplicable thing. The tax collector came to collect the county's bill. "He wanted to collect all I had made in one year," the old prisoner will say as he retells the story. "I made $400 and he wanted $40 taxes. So I left and went to Texas."

That is only part of the truth. The part, perhaps, that he remembers. There was a quarrel over the tax bill, although there is no record now of what the sum. In that quarrel Conrad Maas seized an ax. The tax collector fled, shouting that the man was mad. Who knows that he was not? It was enough to determine all the course of the painter's life. That night, packing what things he could in a wagon, he hitched up his team and he and his wife drove off for the west and south, for Texas. The Kentucky farm was left abandoned.

TEXAS, then, was Mecca for the cattle raisers. From the tales he had heard Conrad Maas pictured now a life in which there was more time to paint. His $400 and a little besides he invested in cattle and got himself a little nest range. Rustlers stole his herd. They drove him out. He turned north with his team and prairie schooner. Indian Territory was being opened up. Here was free land and fortune. He drove into what is now Watonga County, Oklahoma, took up a homestead in that fertile land and, following the method he had seen his neighbors use, built him a sod house.

There they lived, those two, while German toil and German thrift kept company with them. The burning sun and the insect pests, the dust that blew up across the newplowed lands, all these things they suffered—but slowly they got ahead. Yet all the time in his heart Conrad Maas rebelled at the fate that had placed him there. The beauty of his wife was gone. The golden hair was burned to a mouse gray, her pink cheeks were tanned and furrowed by wind. Her rounded form grew angular. The soft lines of her face grew hard. Her fingers were gnarled with toil. She went about in a loose and dirty wrapper. She was so busy trying to do a man's work on the place she had no thought of keeping house. This man, craving beautiful surroundings, looked about at the sod walls of the dirty shack which he called home. At the spotted unwashed table, at the grimy bed. At a chromo which his wife had found somewhere and had tacked up on the wall.

He grew to hate her with a hate that only death could quench. His eyes followed her about the room with sullen smoldering points of flame within them. "For this," he thought, as he sat silently in the gloom after a day of breaking toil, "I gave up Berlin, my army and my art."

She, pitifully, knowing she was broken, looked at him with the eyes of a beaten dog. There was animal hunger in her glance. She longed for the touch of a caress.

This was the setting for the tragedy.

A GRAY December day, cold and raw. Three of Maas' neighbors had been to town that day—to a characteristic Oklahoma frontier town. They had paid their bills. They had bought supplies. They had loaded up with whisky—the "rot-gut" kind that was guaranteed to kill at forty rods. They were happy and they were quarrelsome, too. They stopped, as they rode by his place, to see Conrad Maas. They wanted him to drink with them, though Conrad Maas wasn't a drinking man. Beer? That was something else again, but schnapps? Ugh! Whisky he abhorred. However, the three who stopped at his place at dusk that evening were persistent. He must drink. When he refused they threatened.

Three against one. Three men who were armed with pistols and whose whole demeanor threatened fight. The wife of Conrad Maas was all a-tremble. Shrinking into one corner of the dugout she pleaded with him to join their company. He stood his ground against their invitation and her pleadings until she began to cry. Then he reached for the bottle that was set before him. "All right then," he said. "Prosit!" And he wiped his mouth with the back of his grimy hand, calloused with uncongenial labor.

"Have another," said his visitors, as the bottle was passed around. He took another. And a third. And then they rode away.

So much is known of what happened in the Oklahoma sod house on that night. The rest of the tale no man has told. It would not be a pleasant story. The brooding man, excited by his drinks, the shrinking pitiful wife, the scene as he raised the ax and took her life—it were better left untold.

Neighbors, the day following, didn't see Conrad Maas about, nor for two days following. They noticed that his stock was "gaunting up." They visited the sod house. On the kitchen floor lay what had once been beautiful Gretchen Schmidt. The body was cold in death and rats had gnawed at the face that once had turned the heart of a German Lieutenant. On the floor beside her lay a bloody ax that told the story. The footprints of Conrad Maas were found in the crimson pools where he had stepped in his frantic hurry to leave the scene of the murder he had done.

OKLAHOMA was shocked by the brutality of the crime. Rough as were those border men they were not likely to forgive the murder of a woman. Posses went out to seek the runaway husband. Telegraph wires flashed his description everywhere. Within two weeks he was found. He had struck south—perhaps to leave the country. Brought back home there was talk of lynching. The case was taken to El Reno on a change of venue, so bitter was the feeling. The sentence was life.

Again and again efforts were made to free him. Dr. F. C. Rieloff, then German Consul in St. Louis, attempted to gain a pardon for the man in 1906. The best of attorneys were procured. But even the evidence of the Kansas physicians did not weigh against the determination of Oklahoma to exact life for life. "Germany may want Conrad Maas," wrote ex-Governor Fergusson. "Powerful friends may want him. But Oklahoma is no respecter of persons and wants him also. He has powerful and influential friends, but that should avail him nothing." Governor Franz heard the pleas in his behalf and denied them. Governor Haskell, several years later, was more inclined to leniency with the prisoner, whose brother-in-law and sister had come to Oklahoma, seeking to take him home. But Maas refused to leave the prison.

So he has stayed on. It is 26 years now since he entered prison walls. He has never ridden in a street car or an automobile; never, except when one flew across the prison above him, has he seen an airplane. When the prison installed a moving-picture machine he couldn't believe it. "Ach, Gott, I can paint a better picture," was the man's first comment when he saw the "movies." But the miracle of movement enthralled him. Today he is the prison's greatest fan.

He is old and his tasks are not heavy. In the dining room he serves as "flunkey." When that is cleaned up after the meals he is free to paint. And paint he does. Sometimes the work is a religious picture like his "Ascension." Sometimes a glimpse of Indian life that he has seen, perhaps a dream of some county fair with modern speed things brought into contrast with the racing horses. But more often it is a bit of landscape that he paints, and there will be cattle in the foreground—a pastoral scene. Thus he brings a bit of beauty from his happier years within the walls he has not left for a quarter of a century and cannot leave till death shall end his tragedy.

MASSACRE of the Conquistadores

"BRANDISHING the borrowed lances of the Spaniards as they would their spears, the Indians continued their frenzied dance. . . . Almost insensibly, as the Spaniards watched, the braves broke into little groups, each moving close upon the Spaniards where they stood upon their arms."

DISCOVERY of breast plates, bridle bits and arrow-heads, near Columbus, Nebraska, at last clears up the mystery of the disappearance of an adventurous band of Spanish conquerors, who were swallowed up by the wilderness two hundred years ago.

Curator E. E. Blackman, of the Nebraska State Historical Society, made the excavations and found the relics reproduced on this page. This find, together with the discovery of an old diary in Paris, throws the first light upon this strange story of old Nebraska. It is from Mr. Blackman's report of his discovery, from the Paris diary, and from what little has been known in the past, that the writer has derived this first accurate account of the Massacre of the Conquistadores.

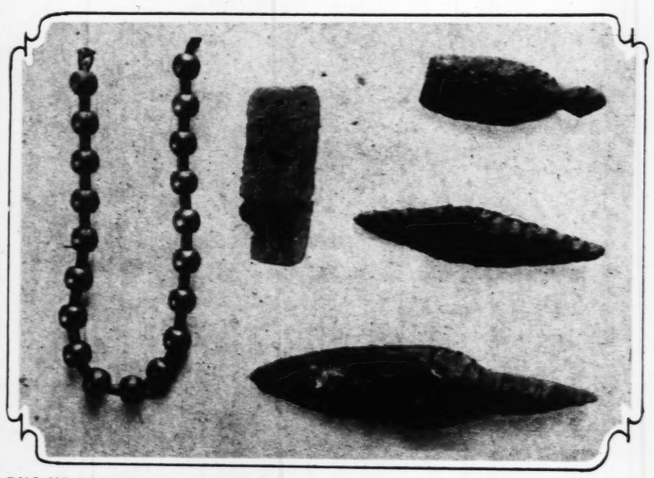
By HARRY R. BURKE.



DUG UP IN NEBRASKA. CHAIN (first from right) from a Spanish bridle. Second, segment from a Spanish breastplate, And samples of Indian knives found, together with many arrowheads, in profusion.

E. E. BLACKMAN, curator of the Nebraska State Historical Society, whose important discovery of valuable relics has cleaned up an age-long mystery.

UP from the Southwest they came with pennons of yellow and scarlet a-flutter from their lances, their armor flashing back the sun from burnished mirror - surfaces. Marching with them came their Indian allies, brave chiefs in war-bonnets, with copper bodies painted hideously. "St. James and Spain," they cried as they rode against the savage enemies that they encountered and put them to the sword. Visions danced before their eyes of mountains that were gold and silver—of boulders that were emeralds. And into a trap they fell, a trap almost of their own preparing—so haughty, so proud, so sure were they. With their own weapons they were slain—wiped out, all but one, in instant—by the Indians they had trusted.

Spain's hope of empire received a death blow in that massacre near what is now Columbus, Neb., at the junction of the rivers Platte and Loup. It was the heart of the wilderness then. Indians carried the tale from tribe to tribe. It reached the white man as a rumor. Some historians set it down, and by one, at least, it was colored like an old wives' tale. A breviary and some holy oil, had been found — that much was known—for the Spaniards brought their padres with them, just as they brought oxen, cows and sheep.

They had come to stay. And stay they did—as grinning skeletons.

One of their officers kept a diary, a page from which escaped destruction in the massacre. An Indian ally of the French brought it to M. de Boisbriant, who was French commandant, at Kaskaskia, of the Province of Illinois. He sent it to France and it was lost. Then, 200 years later, it was found in the archives of the Marine Department in Paris and translated by the Baron Marc de Villiers, and it confirmed the rumors and the tales chroniclers had told. Addison E. Shelton translated it for the Nebraska Historical Society. Now, in straightforward English, was set forth the place where the almost mythical "Spanish Caravan" had met its fate. Curator E. E. Blackman followed up the clew. He dug in the Nebraska cornfield and found History—and Romance.

IT WAS not the first, this expedition of adventurers and conquerors that pushed its way northeast from Santa Fe in 1720 to wrest from France Missouri's fabled mines. Coronado, in 1540, had penetrated to Central Missouri, seeking a new El Dorado. Humana, in 1594, got as far north, perhaps, as the Platte River in Nebraska. Onate, Vaca and Penelosa, between 1594 and 1664, had penetrated the Missouri country. But they made no settlement. Thirty-five years later French missionaries had placed an outpost at old Cahokia, just below what is now East St. Louis. The next year, 1700, Kaskaskia was founded. It was from there Lallement, the engineer, went prospecting the Meramec. He, too, alas, was the dupe of the fabled mines.

It was then that Santa Fe, City of the Holy Faith, sent forth to the northeast about 250 Spanish conquerors, with probably several hundred Indians, their allies, their captives, and their slaves. Beasts of the field they took as well as horses. There were trains of mules laden with every sort of tool to work the mines. You can see them riding in their pride, under the banners of Castile and Leon, bronzed and bearded men in shining armor, two chaplains with them, mounted on their mules, the allied Navajo and Comanche braves in war paint and their feathers, and the rout of captive Indians and slaves to serve their masters.

Desert and waste land. Then oceans of prairie. Great herds of antelope they see, and buffalo. They come upon the poor rancheros of the Indians. Some of these are friendly. The Spaniards had established an understanding with the Apaches, the Navajos, the Comanches, the Pawnees and the Omahas. The Pawnees were allied to the Spaniards, but the Omahas and the Missouri, Kanzas, Osage and Otoe nations were all friendly to the French. This the Spanish did not know. On they push: "For St. James and Spain."

IN THE territory of the Kanzas they strike more northerly. Enemy territory now. "On the way they defeated five nations," says Commandant Boisbriant in reporting the massacre to Paris. "Their commander believed after one splendid victory he was strong enough to withstand anything." But the numbers of the Spaniards by now have dwindled. Not less than three-fourths of the company have turned back. Of the 250 now there are but 60 of Castilian blood. They press on, undaunted—true conquistadores.

Captain Thomas Auiguin was commander of the little troop—a proud, undoubting Thomas. The unnamed officer, whose page of diary we have, gives the little roster. They are searching now for the Pawnees. They want to know the lay of the enemy land. St. James against the Lilies of France. For the glory of God and His Most Catholic Majesty! The padres offered up their prayers.

They came to a river, shallow and with many islands. Jesu-Maria they called it, by virtue of their faith. We know it as the Platte. Their scouts find the branches and leaves of some fresh sand cherries. An Indian band has made a meal not too long since. They come to a stream. It is but two days until the feast of St. Lawrence. They named the creek in honor of the Sainte.

Among the slaves is Francois Sistaca, "the savage of Don Christophe de la Serne." He knows the country well, he says, for he is a Pawnee, although he left it when very young. He, with others, is sent to scout. They find the Indians in a camp on the other side of the creek, "singing and dancing according to the custom of savages." Francois Sistaca is sent to see his nation. "May God and the Holy Virgin, His Mother, give him success," is the diarist's prayer. He returns at evening. He has seen the band, he says, but he feared them when they came to meet him, tomahawks in hand, and he fled.

Dawns the feast "of the glorious martyr of St. Lawrence (died August 10, A. D. 258)," reads the entry. They hail the savages across the stream and make signs of peace and friendship. The Spaniards are invited to the Indian village. Despite the fear he pleaded the day before, Francois Sistaca strips his clothes to swim across the stream.

"The Lieutenant-General," writes the diarist, "told him to tell his nation that we would come and visit them, with no design of doing them the least injury, as they could easily see. . . . That they might confer with us for peace and friendly union, which should exist between brothers and subjects of the same King. The Lieutenant-General gave tobacco for the savage to carry them, the usual custom of these meetings. . . ."

OF THE heart of Francois Sistaca there is no record. How shall we say he spent that day and the night which followed with those, his people? Did he tell them tales of brutal enslavement and tormented misery? Did he picture the wrongs done him by the White Man in New Mexico? Or did he trust, in ignorance of his brother Red Man's guile? Were some within that village indeed his tribal brothers, or did he know when he stood with them before the council fire that the braves confronting him were not Pawnees but warriors of the Otoes and friends of France? Certain it is the Spaniards did not know. On the morning which followed the conquerors crossed St. Lawrence Creek, now known as the Loup River. It was a Rubicon. They could not turn back—ever.

Undoubting Thomas Auiguin sought the chiefest chief. Were the French, he asked, on the Missouri River? He was told they were, and with the Otoe nation. This tribe, the chief continued, was a hated enemy whose scalps would dangle at the belts of the Pani-Maha (so these Indians now falsely named themselves) before two suns had set.

"You speak well," said Captain Thomas. "Deliver the French to me and I will give you many presents, for the King, who is my master as well as yours, will be glad at heart. And we will aid you with our mighty power to slay your enemy root and branch," he continued, his pride digging the pit for his own funeral. "Not one man shall be left among the Otoes."

"White Man says wisely," the old chief answered, and over the pipe they pledged him friendship, these guileful warriors, their features painted with devil faces as they gazed upon him through narrowed slits of eyes. "You shall be our Captain when we meet the French and the Otoe nation," they explained to him. "And in honor of our mighty Captain tonight we dance."

IT WAS the dance of war they danced. Great drums beat with an ominous rhythm, as though Death himself were thundering across the prairie. Red and blue and white and yellow the grim faces of the braves were painted, so that some of them looked like the heads of death, and some like devils to come after. They thundered with their feet, they raised sharp, piercing cries to curdle a white man's blood. By the flare of the fires they danced, their faces distorted with red glare and shadow into inhuman things, and the feathers of their warbonnets bobbed up and down, as in and out they wove their sweating way.

The stout hearts of the conquistadores pumped as it were water in their breasts, but an iron will held them firmly to their ground. Not so their allies, the Comanches. The dance was not half over before they, one and all, had stolen silently to distant shadows and sped away. They were gone —and the Spaniards were alone when the dance was ended. But the thing that they had seen that night left them almost sleepless. There was little need for the sentries Captain Thomas set.

Morning dawned. The conquerors would have pressed on toward the Missouri, but the Indians must propitiate their spirits with another dance. It was not yet time, they said. On through the day continued the menacing thunder of the drums. The sun stood high. Came the Otoe chief to beg of his friends their lances, that a new dance might be danced. Trusting Captain Thomas loaned the weapons. Brandishing them, as they would their spears, the Indians continued in their frenzy. No longer was their dance a close interweaving of painted warriors in and out among themselves. Almost insensibly, as the Spaniards watched, the braves broke into little groups, each moving close upon the Spaniards where they stood upon their arms. The Otoe chieftain stood before the Spanish Captain. With a ferocious yell he pulled a pistol and shot the conqueror dead. That was the signal. In less than a minute the tale was told.

LALLEMENT, who had been exploring for mines on the Meramec River, heard the story. "The savages all of a sudden gave a great cry," he wrote in his report, "which was the signal to strike them down, and they did this so well that only one remained. The mules took fright and fled on the run with their loads. The one survivor was a prisoner whom the Spaniards had captured—a monk of San Juan de Dios. He escaped a little later, when the savages were foolish enough to let him have a horse to show them how to ride. His shrewdness had been too smart for them and he fled with all speed." What was his end historians do not tell.

Before this Fort Orleans had been planned. Now it was hastened. The French must have an outpost on the Missouri, in the country of the Comanches. M. de Bourgemont was commissioned Captain of the Missouri and hurried to America. It was spring in 1723 before he finally arrived at a village of the Missouri Indians, presumably nearly opposite Malta Bend, in the neighborhood of Wakenda, Carroll County. By the terms of his agreement he might return to France after two years, and return he did, taking four Indian chiefs and a daughter of the great Chief of the Missouris with him. Chief Chicagou of the Illinois, Chief Mamatuensa of the Kaskaskias, an Otoe chief and an Osage were of the party. They were welcomed and feted in France. They were presented to the King and his court. They hunted deer in the Bois as they hunted in the forests of their homeland for the court's amusement. They danced their dances in the Italian theater that nobility might applaud.

France garbed them in latest Paris fashions. For each chief a blue coat with silver buttons and buttonholes, a scarlet waistcoat, embroidered with silver; red breeches and hose, with a silver-laced hat and red feather, while six frilled shirts were given each. As for the "Princess of Missouri," they decked her out in a damask gown of flame color, trimmed with flowers of gold, an under petticoat of the same, a panier, two pairs of bodices, six laced shifts, ribbons of gold and silver and a pair of silk stockings. In that garb she was baptised in Notre Dame. And in that garb she was married, for her dignity and beauty had quite won the heart of a Sergeant Dubois. Marriage for him was the way to advancement. He was made a Captain and Commandant of the Missouri and sent back to Fort Orleans.

GREAT was the rejoicing of the Osages and Missouris to see the friends they had given up for lost return in riches such as these. There were games and dances. Now more strongly than ever was cemented the friendship of the French and Missouris. All augured well. The escort from Kaskaskia left the happiest sort of garrison in Fort Orleans when they pushed back down the river. Winter passed. With the spring, traders ascended the Missouri from Kaskaskia. They reached Malta Bend. Where the fort had been was a charred and blackened ruin. No single Frenchman was left to unriddle the mystery of what befell. And Madame Dubois, when the traders found her, with her own people, having renounced Christianity and returned to savage life, could not or would not tell. Nor did she later, even after her second marriage with a Captain Marin, who was in the service of the French.

A scrap of paper, bits of Spanish armor, a bit, some arrow-heads . . . These, found in a Nebraska cornfield where once stood an ancient Pawnee Indian village, already have unraveled one of history's mysteries. To the unriddling of another they may provide a clew. The massacre of the Spanish caravan by the Otoes robbed the Spaniard of his hope of empire, but did it, as Baron de Villiers wonders, deprive him of his hope and opportunity for revenge? Perhaps the way is cleared to know what happened at Fort Orleans.

"I'll Find That Valley of Ivory!"

SAYS

The Duke of Orleans

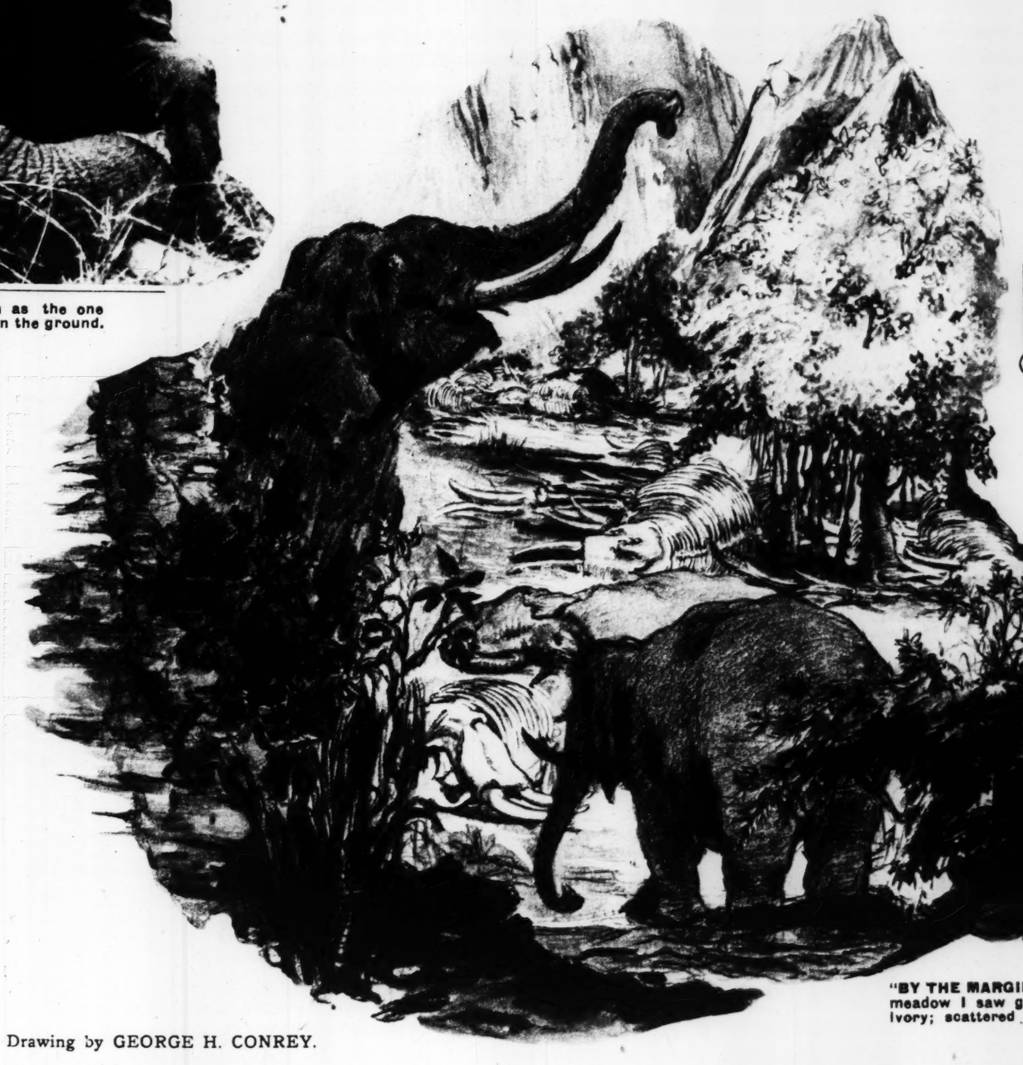
IT IS A RARE SIGHT—a dead elephant. With the exception of those shot—such as the one above, killed by H. A. Snow—even the natives rarely see a tusker stretched lifeless on the ground. Where do they go to die? The Duc d'Orleans is going to find out.



Drawing by GEORGE H. CONREY.

THE DUKE OF ORLEANS, Louis Philippe, pretender to the French throne, who is on his way into Africa to find "The Elephants' Graveyard in the Valley of Ivory."

"BY THE MARGIN of the lake and dotting the green meadow I saw great piles of elephant bones and ivory; scattered everywhere were dead and dying elephants."

The man who should be (he says) Philippe VIII of France is going into Africa to track down the story that there is a graveyard to which the elephants, after a century or so of life, direct their ponderous footsteps in search of a secluded place to die. Naturalists and big-game hunters in all parts of the world are watching with interest this unusual expedition.

IF LOUIS PHILIPPE, Duc d'Orleans, and pretender to the throne of France, finds the elephant graveyard he is to seek in Africa on the expedition which has just left England, he will have smashed the ivory market of the world. If he fails in his search he will have exploded a curious and most persistent nature myth, the most curious of which two continents can boast. For Africa, and Asia, too, believe as they have believed from immemorial time, that the aged elephant, when about to die, retires to some hidden place—perhaps a secret valley in the mountains—and having gained that "Ivory Valley," lays him down to give up his elephantine ghost.

"Did you ever," demands the native of the doubter, "see a dead elephant?" The natives swear they never did unless it be an elephant killed by themselves or a white hunter. And the white man to whom the question is propounded must answer them with: "No." For half a century at least big-game hunters and scientists have tried to find an answer to the riddle: "What does become of the aged elephant?"

The African or the Indian tusker will lead a placid pachyderm life for something like 140 years. There is evidence to show that some of them have lived to be 200. But the evidence fails to tell where or when one has died a natural death. Evidently they must die. Evidently they must have died long before the white man with his high-powered gun developed killing to a science which takes the lives of thousands—Dr. Kunz in 1916 estimated 50,000—every year. Yet of their deathbeds in half a century not a trace is found.

If you say that vultures and hyenas pick their bones, that answer is but half-way logical. There still exist on earth today the bones of elephants and their progenitors that have been dead ten thousand years and more. Vultures and hyenas do not eat the bones themselves. An elephant's skeleton would be a hard thing to overlook by men who penetrate the jungles. Where, then, do the dying elephants go, if not to the "Valley of Ivory"?

AS LONG ago as 1888 the Duc d'Orleans, then in the British Army in India, heard these elephant tales. The mahouts tell them there. Again, when he hunted in Central Africa three years ago the fable was repeated. The native trackers delight to tell the tale about their campfires.

And better evidence yet is that of the old-time elephant hunters, of white men who have spent their lives in the jungle, and whose testimony all tends to confirm the tale. There was G. P. Sanderson, chief elephant catcher for the Indian Government some years ago. He had never found an elephant that died a natural death, he declared, nor had he ever met with a professional native elephant hunter who had, except during an epidemic which raged among the animals in the Chittagong forest.

Sir Emerson Tennant, another authority, added his testimony thus: "The natives of Ceylon generally assert that the body of a dead elephant is seldom or never discovered in the woods, and certain it is that frequenters of the forest with whom I have conversed, whether European or Singhalese, alike are consistent in their assurances that they have never found the remains of an elephant that had died a natural death. One chief, the Wanyyah of the Trincomalie district, told a friend of mine that, once, after a severe epidemic which had swept the province, he had found the carcasses of elephants who had died of the disease. On the other hand, a European gentleman, who for 36 years without intermission had been living in the jungle, ascending the summits of the mountains on trigonometrical surveys and penetrating valleys in tracing roads—one, too, who has made the habits of the wild elephant a subject of constant study and observation—has often expressed to me his astonishment that after seeing many thousands of living elephants in all possible situations, he had never yet found the skeletons of dead ones except those which had fallen by the rifle."

Cripps, the famous elephant hunter, while in the forests of Anarajapoora, was told by the natives that he was then in the immediate vicinity of the spot "where the elephants come to die." Indian elephants, so Cripps was told, hide themselves in a valley near Adams Peak. It is reached, the natives said, by a hidden, narrow pass with high walls of rock on either side. So secret is the entrance no man has penetrated it.

Such were the tales the Duc d'Orleans heard in India. In Africa, three years ago, according to the Duke's statement, Sekweba, a native tracker, told him how he had found the "Ivory Valley." Sekweba was old and blind, bent with his years and very near to death. He was one of the Bonga tribe, and in his youth had been a mighty hunter.

"THEN," he said, "I was tall and straight as a spear. My blood raced with the spirit of the chase. In the brush, that day, I came upon the spoor of a solitary elephant. The track was warm. Through tangle and thicket, through deep grass and forest I followed him. I came upon him when he was asleep in the shade while the sun was high. Great were his tusks, greater than any I had ever seen. He was the grandfather, it seemed to me, of all the elephants in the world. I could tell of his age by his ears, which were jagged and torn. It would not have been difficult to kill him, but I waited, for I knew that he was on his way to die.

"All that afternoon I waited, until the sun was low. Then, rising to his feet, for he had knelt down to rest, he started on. I followed. All that night I followed, safely distant. And the next day and the next, five days in all. I followed him through the lowland towards the higher. I followed him into the mountains. I was near the journey's end. I was hungry, weary and footsore. Some food I had gathered along the trail. I drank when the elephant drank. But I followed him, always at a distance.

"We penetrated into the heart of the mountains, we followed where there were no signs of men. But the rocks of the mountains had been worn deep with the trails of countless thousands of elephants.

"Then we came to a narrow cleft in the hills. Great walls rose high on either hand. The rocky opening was hidden except for the beaten pathway of the elephants in which he followed on. Dark and gloomy was that canyon. High brush grew on either side of the pathway. Even I, though stout of heart, was afraid.

"Then suddenly the way opened before him, and before me, who was following as closely as I dared. It opened on either hand to a great valley whence came the smell of death. I saw the walls of the mountains rising as in a ring—steep, high walls, that were crowned with glittering peaks of snow. Vines clambered up the walls. At the foot of the mountains were shady forests.

"In that valley was a meadow of lush, green grass that would rise above the height of the elephants' bellies. There was a lake of blue water in that valley, fed by fountains plunging downward from the wall of rocks.

HERDING WILD ELEPHANTS into the inclosures. Some of these beasts live for a hundred years after capture. When they are about to die, the natives say, they try to escape to their "Valley of Death."

"I FOLLOWED him within. By the margin of the lake and dotting the green meadow I saw great piles of elephant bones and ivory; scattered everywhere were dead and dying elephants. There were heaps of ivory as far as the eye could reach.

"They were not all marked for death that were in that valley. Two huge tuskers, mighty and in their prime, were pacing back and forth within the entrance, perhaps 500 paces. They marched from side to side, meeting in front of the canyon mouth through which we entered. They marched as sentinels march.

"I had only a few minutes to see all this, for I halted behind some brush when the old elephant entered. The two sentinels came up to him, just as soldiers might to challenge an intruder in their camp.

"Just then the wind changed and the breeze which had been blowing from out the valley, fairly stifling me with its smell, blew now down the canyon from behind me and carried to the elephants my odor. They stopped to look, cocking their ears, with upraised trunks and sniffing the air with suspicion. Then slowly they ambled toward the gateway, stopping each moment to sway and smell.

"I was scared. It is no shame. I have faced charging tuskers many a time. Men know that I am brave. But now I was afraid. I did, then, in my folly of fear, what no hunter should do. I moved and ran. It was then the elephant sentinels saw me.

"With trunks upreared they trumpeted and charged. A chill of terror seized my heart. I broke from the undergrowth into the open path to flee. From the sound of the one who was foremost in pursuit I knew that he was gaining. It seemed to me I could feel at my back his breath. At any moment I expected that snaky trunk to wrap itself about me and batter me against the rocks.

"And then I fell—for the gods were good to me—fell into a crevasse I had carefully stepped over when entering the canyon. I dropped 10 feet in that narrow crevice, bruising and cutting myself upon the rocks. To the elephant I must have disappeared as if by magic. His great huge body sped over me. I lay in trembling down below.

"Then I could hear him coming back. He reached the crevice where I hid and sniffed suspiciously. His trunk, puffing and blowing, hung above me. I lay, too scared to breathe.

"After a while he went his way. It seemed like many moons. I managed to scramble to the path again. My leg pained me terribly. But I made my way out of that canyon and stole through the rocks and trees adown the mountain side. The pain hurt me much. I had a fever. I stumbled about and did not always know just where I went. After some time—two days, perhaps, or three—I came upon some natives. They nursed me and I found my way from them to my own tribe.

"But I did not know how I had come from the Valley of Ivory. I have looked often, Bwana (master), but have not found it since. Up there it is. I have spoken."

That was the story, as the interpreter repeated it, as it fell from the old man's lips that night before the campfire of the Duc d'Orleans. And the Duke said then: "I'll find that Valley of Ivory!"

"HEAPS of ivory so far as the eye could see"—what visions of wealth it conjures up, for ivory last year had an average market price for the soft, or better sort, of $560 a hundred pounds. The Duc d'Orleans doesn't need that wealth—as Duc d'Orleans. He lives in an English castle and he is immensely wealthy. He says he is to seek the famous elephant cemetery in the interests of science.

It is probable another truth lies back of that. Such a discovery would make him a popular hero in France. And the Duke wants to be popular as well as rich, in that land whence he now is barred. Perhaps he has dreams of sitting upon the throne of his ancestors at Versailles—Philippe VIII, he sometimes calls himself.

And, after all, there is nothing more bizarre about winning a kingdom by finding a secret valley in the mountains than by seeking it in the spin of an ivory roulette ball at Monte Carlo. Charles, late Emperor of Austria, sought his kingship back the latter way. Four of his followers played a system with funds supplied by the ex-Empress Zita, a few years ago. It didn't win.

Nor, thus far, have any of the schemes of Louis Philippe been successful. Exiled from France, he returned in disguise in 1890 and enlisted in the French army under another name. That won him a prison sentence and exile again. In the World War he offered his sword to France, to England, to Belgium, to Italy and finally to the United States, for which his father, the Comte de Paris, fought in the Civil War. He was refused. Just after he had announced his proposed search for the Valley of Ivory, Louis Philippe made an impassioned request of France for permission to return to his home land and end his days in peace. "God grant," he prayed, "that I may see France again before I die."

WHETHER he wins or loses wealth in his search for the Ivory Valley, the Duc d'Orleans will have won something if he can settle definitely the question of whether it exists. For, despite the testimony of the old-time hunters, modern sportsmen and scientists are inclined to put little faith in the tale. But is it really so remarkable for one to say that the elephants go to die in "Ivory Valley"? The same peewee, among our Missouri birds, returns from the pampas of Argentina each June to nest again in the valley of the Mississippi. The same yellow-billed cuckoo finds its way from the Amazon to the Missouri's banks to feed on caterpillars. The nightingale, from Africa, crosses desert and sea to build its home in the English hedgerow where it was hatched. Year after year swarms of clouded yellow butterflies fly up through France and flit across the English Channel because their ancestors came flying across what was then a meadowland connecting the British Isles with Europe, say, 20,000 years ago. Certainly birds and insects have a directional sense as much a mystery to men as our radio would be to them. The clouded yellow butterfly never sees England until he flies across the channel. Why, then, need the elephant have ever seen the "Ivory Valley," to which he is supposed to go to keep his rendezvous with death? Why should he, who is twice a septuagenarian, not know as much of the mysteries as the butterfly that was born but yesterday?

FAMED WIT POSES AS PRIME AUTHORITY ON INSANITY

Lardner Investigates Lunacy Trials, Etc.

"I MAY BE CRAZY, BUT I GET PAID FOR IT"

By RING LARDNER.

ONCE in a wile some lawyer or alienist in a murder trials gets up a new name for the form of insanity which the defendant is supposed to be blest with, like whatever it was Mr. Delmas said Harry had twenty years later, the special brand to which the doctors give a title in the case of Nathan and Dickie out in old Chi. The names genally always seem to fit and further and more are very catchy sounding so that for months and months afterwards the boys that write the columns and draw the comical strips on newspapers uses them over and over with a fair chance of them being a wow.

This is all fair and bright as far as it goes, but the said lawyers and doctors should ought to be forced to christen a whole lot more varieties of nuttiness which is all different than each other but which is still running around anonymous to the confusion of the popull (people). I would personly undertake this wholesale christening only for my lack of knowledge of the Latin language in gen. and medical turns in particular, so will content myself with merely giving a brief description of the various forms and asking whatever allenists and attorneys they may be amongst my readers to suggest official names for them.

ARE YOU ONE OF THESE?

1. All people and relatives of people who own or did own or want to own a police dog.

2. All people and relatives of people who take their cars out on popular public highways on hot Sunday afternoons for the purpose of getting cool. Some of these people plead that Sunday is the only day they can get off, but it is this writer's theory that they must be off all week.

ALL BOYS AND YOUNG MEN WHO STRIPS DOWN A FORD TILL ITS ALMOST NUDE

3. All people and relatives of people who say or think that Dempsey is afraid of Harry Wills.

4. All radio owners and their families who turn on their machines at 11 A. M. and keep them running till 2 the next A. M. for the fear they will miss something.

5. All race goers who takes field glasses to the track and looking through them at the horses 1-2 a mile away thinks they can tell who is 2d, 3d, 5th or any other position.

6. All people that pays $11.00 for a seat on the opening night of a revue when they know they can go a week later at 1-2 the price and see twice as good a show.

7. All motorists who uses their muffler cut out just to make a noise.

8. All people who constantly takes their brassey to get out of a huckleberry patch just because they read where Bobby Jones once done it.

9. All people who because they had a $2.00 ticket to the game, sets in the Yale Bowl all P. M. in a rain, hail and snow storm wile Yale is beating a team that never had a chance.

10. All boys and young men who strips a Ford down till it is almost nude, paints a big Figure 2 on the front and drives as fast as possible up and down the street in the hopes that innocent bystanders will notice them and exclaim that must be Ralph de Palma working out in a Peugeot.

11. All people that celebrates the 4 of July with fireworks.

12. All people that still thinks mah jongg is a game.

DO YOU KNOW ONE?

In gathering data for the above list one of the persons I consulted with was Mr. Marc Connelly who knows insanity from A to Z and not from no hear say neither and he give me some information in regards to certain forms of which I was in total ignorants which I will pass them on to my readers in the case they may not of heard of them no more than me.

The first of these is depomania, which is the opposite of kleptomania which as everybody knows is the mania for taking what don't belong to you a specially in dept. stores. In depomania the patient has a mania for putting things back where he thinks they come from whether they was stolen or bought outright.

ALL PEOPLE THAT CELEBRATES THE 4 OF JULY WITH FIREWORKS.

Like for inst. he will go into your home and if he sees a book that was published by Scribner's he will manage to sneak it out of the house with him, take it to his own home and wrap it up and send it back to Scribner's. Or if he sees that you have a Colt revolver laying on the table he will see that the Colt people gets it back even if he has to fire it at them.

They was a famous depomaniac in St. Louis a wile ago who I won't mention his name on acct. of his kiddies, but he was returning things by the wholesale and yet nobody could catch him at it till finely he took a Mason and Hamlin piano from a friend's home and the police catched him trying to box it up and send it back to the factory. He is now serving a sentence of from 2 to 5 yrs. in a piano box.

EVER SEE ONE?

Another form is colormania. A St. Louisan had that and all his friends knowed it and when they invited him to dine they always was careful not to serve nothing brown which was his nemesis color. But one night a friend who had a new cook asked this bird to stay to dinner and forgot to warn Helka as the cook was rightly named. Everything went all right till pretty near the finish of the dinner as the various viands was clear soup, crab meat, white meat of chicken and cucumber salad. But when the dessert come what was it but pumpkin pie and our friend had to be took to City Hospital.

HEARD OF THIS?

Last but not lease is a ailment called trainstare the victim of which can't help from looking out the window all the time he is on the train. The conductor has a terrible time getting his ticket out of his pocket but it is most inconvenient when he sets in a card game on board of a train. Recently doctors has discovered what they think is a effectual cure for trainstare, namely strap the patient in a upper berth of a car bound from Bangor to Tia Juana and keep him there till he becomes disheartened.

ICE AGE COMING

WHETHER or not it may cause any of us serious inconvenience, this world is going to be in the devastating grip of another ice age in about 20,000 years, according to the prediction of Dr. Ellsworth Huntington, well-known geographer, explorer and research associate of Yale University. Personally, I don't expect to be where I will suffer from frostbite 20,000 years from now, but with all these rejuvenation methods coming into vogue, one can never tell. It is best to be prepared for anything, and Dr. Huntington says prepare for ice. Here is how he arrived at his conclusion:

As a result of recent investigations, he determined that daily variations in the sun's output of energy are probably due in a large measure to the positions of the planets, which reflect back part of the sun's electrical radiations. Then it occurred to him that long-period variations in the sun's heat might be caused by the positions of the stars, which, being suns themselves, would influence our sun more than the planets do, because they would send out radiations of their own. Since scientists have agreed that one of the most likely causes of a glacial epoch would be a falling off in the energy radiated by the sun, it was then logical to assume that such a cold period might prevail if the sun were continually subjected to a bombardment of electrical rays from the nearest stars.

In line with this theory, Dr. Huntington asked two well-known astronomers to help him compute the courses of the nearest 38 stars for the last 70,000 years and for the coming 70,000. The calculations showed that five of these stars attained their nearest approach to the sun 25,000 years ago—the time of the last great ice age. They showed further that seven of the stars will make their nearest approach some time between 17,000 and 34,000 years in the future, and Dr. Huntington places the time of their greatest disturbance at about 20,000. So, don't say you weren't warned.

THE FIRST ROAD BOOK

IT WAS a matter of considerable interest to me to learn the other day that America's first road book was published in 1879. I had always nourished some curiosity about this point because of a suspicion that some of the maps of recent issue were copies of that first one, however vast its age. Now the suspicion is confirmed. That first road guide was called "Survey of the Roads of the United States of America," and was published by Christopher Colles while George Washington still was President.

For all its ambitious title, however, this pioneer of its species had its faults. One was that it dealt with only a few miles of roads in the Albany-New York-Philadelphia region and paid no attention to anything west of the Alleghenies. But Colles was a New Yorker and maybe that explains it. In justice it must be said that his work did have some merits. For instance, it apprised the traveler of the exact location of all the Presbyterian churches and Episcopal churches, told him where to find grist mills and blacksmith shops designated all the jails and town houses and even mentioned taverns. Colles didn't like taverns, though. He marked them with the drawing of a gibbet. The book contained 54 plates, each showing 12 miles of "highways" and along with all the other information made it possible for the tourist to know the names of the farmers whose chickens he killed along the road.

And Here We Show You Missouri

A town by any other name would be as nice to live in, but think how thrilling it must be to dwell in Rubber Neck, or Blue-Eye, or Hurricane or Dynamite—Yes, there are a lot of funny names among our post-offices.

By GUY FORSHEY.

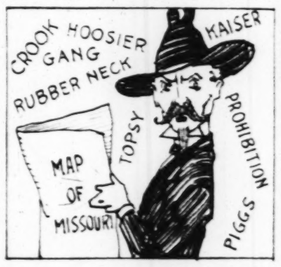
SOME day when you have nothing more exciting to read, try spending a couple of hours with a map of Missouri and see what you can see. It's a highly moral form of recreation, approved even for Sunday afternoon by the bluest of blue laws, and the best part of it is, it may really furnish some entertaining information. When you are touring you probably get a lot of kick out of making smart cracks at the expense of little country towns along the road which, like some of us, got started in life with the handicap—or maybe the advantage—of freakish names. Try it on the map. You may be surprised at the range of possibilities offered. Here are some facts that a few hours' study of the Atlas revealed.

In Missouri there are 1852 cities, towns and villages which have post-offices. The one with the longest name is South Branch Junction, in Audrain County, and honors for the shortest really ought to go to Short, but they are divided among a dozen or more three-letter burgs, such as Oto, Oby, Ike, Ira, Ebb and Ink. Boys' names were given to some 182 towns and villages and girls' names went to 120. One learns with interest that in this illustrious Commonwealth there is a Boss, a Hero, a Hoosier and a Crook. It has a Pippin, a Rubber Neck, a Gang, a Surprise, a Licking and some Arnica. It has an Arab, but no Sheik; a Cleopatra, but no Antony (although it has a Mark); but then one is gratified to find both Venus and Adonis, Adam and Eve, Noah and an Ark.

One might reasonably expect this State to exhibit a holier atmosphere than one usually observes, because it has no less than 17 saints besides the celebrated triumvirate of Louis, Joseph and Charles. It might be expected also to present an air of bustle and stir, for it has Enterprise, Competition, Commerce and Success. Farmers find it a land of plenty because it is Fertile and boasts a Harg and Piggs. Jewels and gold are abundant for Eldorado Springs up from an Eminence gilded with Pearl, Topaz and Diamond. Tallent it has, and Freedom, but withal, a Thorn in its side. It has Prohibition. Alas, it has Enough!

Of titles there is no dearth in Missouri. Look at the blue blood. Here are towns named King, Queen, Princess, Kaiser, Monarch, Czar, Duke, Earl, Noble and some Peers. Beauty also abounds, for down in Phelps County there is a Blooming Rose, and a Blue Eye sparkles from Stone. In its Forest Green of Pine, Spruce, Cypress, Birch Tree, Dogwood, Sycamore and Red Oak, a Deer and a Fawn follow the Doe Run over High Ridge toward Big Spring and leave in their wake a Buckhorn. A Birdsong rings from the Greenwood, while in the Grassy Field the Dove, the Sparrow, the Thursh and the Red Bird disport themselves in Joy and Bliss.

There is Romance, too, in Missouri. Under the Lone Elm, Clarence meets Clara just from School and declares there is Nonsuch. A great Kidder is Clarence. "Whynot Neck?" asks he. "In my Buick Sedan we can drive down Long Lane." There, he thinks, no Eye can see him Kissinger. But Clara replies: "It's Nogo, Kiddo."



There are Koons and Kuhns in Missouri, and, withal, a little Topsy growing up; there is Novelty and a Minimum of Value. There are hills and hills. Look at them—High Hill, Stone Hill, Cedar Hill, Flint Hill, Hickory Hill, Ash Hill—and there is a Sunny Slope. In Laclede County one finds a Sleeper, but there is plenty of Speed in Cooper. There is Charity in Dallas, Aid in Stoddard, Loyalty in Laclede and Amity in De Kalb. There is Tea in Gasconade, Coffey in Daviess and Reform in Callaway—the Highway Commission will tell you it's needed, too. In Maries County you have to Paydown, but they meet you Half Way in Knox, and in Stoddard they are still Kinder. In Osage there is something Useful to which visitors are always Welcome.

Down in Taney County, on the southern border, they must have figured on making a short stay of it when they founded Protem. In Franklin the trail blazers seem to have started a hamlet early in the week, because they called it Monday. Texas County has an Eveningshade—and in Shannon they named a village Alley. That may have been because it wasn't even a wide place in the road, or, possibly, because it was also the abiding place of a Rat. They are a little Flip in Shannon, anyway.

But it is not Fairdealing to be too hard on Shannon. It isn't so bad beside some of the others. We find they are Peculiar in Cass, Crisp in Dade, Mystic in Sullivan, Moody in Howell, all Braggadocio in Pemiscot, Radical in Stone and Redd in Stoddard. What, pray tell, will be the Fate of this fine commonwealth? What, indeed, with Defiance in St. Charles and Jasper full of Dynamite? One observes with alarm that a Hurricane rages in Bollinger, while in McDonald a Cyclone whirls along its way.

Tennessee looks on and says there ought to be a little more old-time religion in this land of ours— a little more Biblical atmosphere. Well, haven't we got it? The Biblical atmosphere, I mean. What is the matter with Job, Moab, Canaan, Nebo, Elijah, Sampson and Jerico? What about Boaz and Ruth and Naomi? We even have a Golden Rule, and a lot of other things of Worth as well. We have Faith in Miller (County), Hope in Osage and Wisdom in Benton, even if there is Anutt in Dent. We note with satisfaction that they are Wise in Barton. Witty in Douglas and Safe in Maries. What if they are a Little Blue in Jackson? They are on top of the world in Apex. In this great State of the two bears, be it known, there are real Folk; enough, in fact, for Three States.

So let us render our tribute to Missouri; to its Pioneer, its Nursery and its Freeman. The Liberty of Seventy-six endures. Across a Vernal Ozark Vista we gaze, aloft upon a Rocky Mount and descry Theron an Eagle. A Boomer is Missouri; it must Advance. We have only to Cull out the Lemons and then we'll have a right to Brag and make a lot of Racket.

RICHARD MILLER

RICHARD MILLER caricatures himself.

By HARRY R. BURKE.

THE words of the letter are lost, but a young American art student wrote from Paris something like this: "I have been here long enough to know the ropes. I know what I can do. None of the other fellows have displayed more ability. It's a pity I must come home now for lack of money. If I could stay on I'd show them something."

The painter was Richard L. Miller, who not long before had been an artist on the staff of the Post-Dispatch. The letter to a friend was productive of a generous gesture by three other friends. P. G. Anton, the 'cellist, the late Charles Kunkel, pianist, and Guido Parisi, violinist, offered a concert program the proceeds of which were forwarded to the struggling student in Paris. Never did art make a better investment. There are Richard Millers now in the Luxembourg and the Petit Palais, in Paris, in the Metropolitan in New York, in the Royal Museum at Christiana, in the King of Italy's private collection, in the Museum at Antwerp, in the Modern Gallery at Venice, in the Corcoran Gallery at Washington, in the City Art Museum here, and in other museums of importance throughout America. Their painter today is a member of the National Academy, and a knight of the Legion of Honor of France. Even as a student, then, Richard Miller knew what he could do. The boy who was broke in Paris has become an American Master.

There is a second story to complement the first. The Missouri Capitol Art Commission was in New York. The members invited Richard Miller to confer with them. He came—a sort of careless-seeming man with a rough and shabby suit that was none too modern in its cut. The hat he wore was a beloved antique.

They told him what they wanted and he named his price. For each of four panels $12,000. The honorable members of the Capitol Commission almost lost their breath. They talked it over after he had gone, and finally they sent Arthur Kocian, their secretary, down to Provincetown to see his friend Dick Miller. "Here's the lay-out," said Kocian. "We have just $12,000. If you can do two of those panels for that sum, go ahead and do them."

Dick Miller has a tongue. He found it then. But Mrs. Miller calmed the tempest. "Richard," she said, "it seems to me you owe something to the State in which you were born."

That settled the argument and when Kocian left it was with Miller's contract. The two panels were painted. Two more followed. And the paintings of Richard Miller in the Capitol at Jefferson City now do honor to his State.

The man is a draftsman and a colorist. He paints in a high key. His pictures are full of sunlight. Superficially one might conceivably mistake his work and that of his friend Frederick Carl Frieseke. Artists often ask each other which was the inspiration of the other. But don't think each is not an individual. A second look will show anyone the difference. Miller is a painter of sunlight and he loves the open. They have the very buoyancy of sunlight and the open air. You can feel the resistance of the body of his figures to the cooling summer zephyr or the windy day as case may be. They are not mere figures, they are not painted dolls, they are flesh and blood folk in easy and charming attitudes like that in "Afternoon," reproduced on the cover of this magazine. In that unstudied grace, as well as in the outdoor light and color which are his special province, are the secrets of Richard Miller—Master.

And he can draw. One has said he has a tongue. Once Albert Bloch, the American modernist, who was then doing some stunning caricatures for Reedy's Mirror and who had determined to continue his studies in Paris, approached Miller for advice.

"What would you advise me?" he asked. "How should I spend my time?"

"Learn to draw," was Miller's cryptic answer.

Miller is an out-of-doors man. No other kind could paint his pictures. That accounts for what more conventional friends term his shabby clothes. In winter he is clad in corduroys, in summer in khaki. The business suit he had made three or four years ago is almost unworn. Instead of buying another he wears it. There is a tradition that he started in life as a bridge builder and that a bridge across the Black River is an evidence of his skill before he turned to art.

He was favored of good fairies. There were hard struggles as he worked his way through Washington University School of Fine Arts. Came a time when R. A. Kissack, a fellow student, discovered a gold mine in St. Louis. Its name was the Williamson Advertising Co. The gold was minted from signboards. Miller visited Mr. Williamson. "Can you paint?" asked the latter.

"Anything," was the sturdy answer. So Miller was given copy and some buckets of paint and signboards testifying to the virtue of "Horseshoe Plug" were evidence of the truth of what he had told the boss.

After the St. Louis friends had forwarded the sum reaped by their benefit, Miller kept on and finally assembled an exhibition of his pictures which he consigned from Paris to Noonan-Kocian. He knew the value of the work. He could see himself now in easier circumstances. The pictures were shown. Some of them were praised. But brilliant color was a new note. Not one was sold.

Miller, in Paris, was desperate. He managed somehow to get to London and there his Post-Dispatch experience stood him in good stead. He got a job as illustrator on one of the big pictorial weeklies. After that it was "easy sailing." Shortly he was able to abandon that work for that which he wanted to do. High-keyed pictures became the fashion. The public taste in art is a fickle thing.

He was the first American to have a picture purchased by the City of Paris for its Art Gallery in the Petit Palais.

An outdoor man, he has one hobby—pistol shooting. At Provincetown, where he lives, they tell an amusing story of his target practice. A fellow painter and a friend had hung a bottle of oil out of his window to season in the sun. It was too tempting. Miller pulled his pistol and Provincetown resounded with a "Bang!" When the fellow-painter later went to get his oil only the neck of the bottle was hanging there. Richard Miller had hit the mark he aimed at just as he does in painting.

THE PROLOGUE

By Octavus Roy Cohen

"THE atmosphere of the big room was tense; it always was so when they were alone."

DINNER was over. The table had been cleared by the tall impassive butler. Donald Ryder stretched comfortably in the big chair before the living-room fireplace, his finely chiseled almost ascetic face limned sharply in the glow of a reading-lamp. His eyes—habitually a steel gray, but now softened to a humorous glint—rested amusedly upon his wife.

Doris was curled up on the lounge, her dainty little figure almost entirely lost in the heavy upholstery. Her vividly expressionful face was turned toward the dancing flames. She seemed comfortable, yet somehow she imparted an impression of restlessness. There was a petulant droop to the lips, a faint light of resentment in the big black eyes. Ryder looked upon her gem-like beauty with the impersonal eye of a connoisseur. He inspected her minutely and with approval, but he experienced no slightest surge of possessive interest. She appealed to him as an exquisite work of art—it had been a long long time since he had regarded her as a mate.

Her dinner dress was of silver cloth, with a robe of sapphire sequins; a sapphire and diamond bracelet gleamed from her arm. Doris Ryder knew how to dress—and spared no pains in the process. Beautiful clothes were a passion with her.

"Well?" Her voice cut coldly through the warmth of the big room.

"Well—what?" His tone was sardonic

"I have broken my theater engagement as you requested."

"That was very kind of you, Doris. I assure you——"

"Don't be sarcastic, Donald. What was it you wished?"

He lighted a cigar—performed the ritual with maddening deliberateness. "Perhaps the novelty of an evening with my wife. It is a novelty, my dear. For almost a year——"

Her foot tapped impatiently. "The prospect of an evening alone with you doesn't excite me in the slightest. Nor does it interest you."

"Quite true, my dear girl. Of late we have had little in common—very little that we cared to discuss. Tonight I believe I can promise to interest you."

"How?"

He puffed lazily, enjoying the situation to the utmost. There was something almost sinister in his relish of the drama which he proposed to enact. When he spoke again, it was as though to himself.

"WE have been married nearly four years. We have had everything in the world we could ask for—except happiness.

"We had that—once."

"And tossed it away. Lack of mutuality, my dear; diverse interests; freedom from necessity. All very sad"—— He was mocking. "Why do we remain married?"

And now the little foot ceased its tapping. The big black eyes clouded and rested upon the lean cameo face of the man in the easy chair. The faintest suggestion of a vertical line appeared on her forehead. She breathed deeply.

"Just why do you ask me?"

"Curiosity, Doris; stark staring curiosity. I wish to see just how much of your boasted honesty you will inject into your answer."

The atmosphere of the big room was tense; it was always so when they were alone—scrupulous politeness, mocking deference, constant rasping.

"We remain married," she answered softly, "because, I suppose, it is too troublesome to divorce."

"Right. Quite right. Divorce is rather a noxious thing, and we are so magnificently respectable, we two. But which, my dear, is the more unpleasant; a brief session in the divorce courts or a life of this veiled hostility?"

She shrugged. "Answer that for yourself, Donald."

"Then," he said quietly, "if the decision is to be mine, I suggest an immediate divorce."

THE little figure on the lounge grew taut, then relaxed with a visible effort. It seemed as though a strong unseen hand had reached out of the past and closed momentarily about her heart. Vague memories assailed her: memories of moonlight and sentiment and passion; of love and idealism and worship; of marriage and rapture of honeymoon. Then it all merged into the drab monotony which had somehow climaxed in this. She was amazed at the calmness of her voice—the icy indifference with which she freighted her words.

"Very well. Whenever you say."

The man stirred uneasily. For a second his expression softened and a slight flush stained his pallid cheeks. The cigar lay unnoticed on the stand.

"At once, of course, Doris. I fancied you would not be unwilling. Queer, isn't it, that the only subject we have found interesting in the past year should be that of separation. Things have changed so. Now that we have agreed to disagree there are a few things you should know; matters that I regret to discuss with you, but which, under the circumstances, are quite necessary."

"Yes?"

"I am speaking of finances"——

Her face flamed. "Please! At least spare me that."

"It is necessary that we discuss it. There are certain facts. My dear girl, I'm very much afraid that I cannot offer you a settlement which will mean financial independence. I"——

She rose abrupty. "I am not interested——"

"Stop! Sit down!" Their eyes clashed. She reseated herself.

"YOU know well enough that I don't relish this discussion any more than you do, Doris. Money has always seemed a very repulsively material thing to me—until recently. Until recently"—— His voice was softer now and she leaned forward. "The unfortunate facts are these, my dear: I have no money. None at all. The circumstances don't matter—facts are sufficient. Unfortunate speculation—and your good provider is virtually penniless. That, Doris, explains why I found it necessary to mar your perfectly good evening with such a material discussion. That is what I meant by saying that you must accept your freedom from me as a final gift; not so brilliant a gift as diamonds and sapphires, but certainly the greatest gift it is in my power to give."

She stared, then removed her gaze from the sardonic face of her husband. It irritated her that he should be enjoying the scene. It did not occur to her to question his statement of fact. She heard his voice as though from a great distance "—and so we will see our lawyers in the morning and complete arrangements. I understand that these affairs can be handled quite expediently where there is no contest."

"Donald"——

"Yes?"

"You have—nothing left?"

"No. Nothing that counts. But don't let that worry you."

"It does worry me. Oh! can't you see what this does? Can't you?" Her frigid reserve was gone. It was a woman speaking. "Don't you understand?"

"I'm afraid not."

"It means this, Donald—it means that I can not divorce you."

He arched his eyebrows in surprise. "Can not? Why?"

"Oh! you must understand. I had nothing when we married—you were wealthy. Our friends know that we have not been happy. If I were to divorce you now—when you have lost everything—can't you imagine what people would say? Don't you know they would say I remained with you only so long as you could indulge me, and that when things went wrong I quit? Can't you see it is an impossible situation from my standpoint? Can't you?"

"Mmm! I don't know that I care particularly what people say."

"Well, I do. And I shan't divorce you—not now."

He stared at her quizzically, and, as he watched, she did a very peculiar thing: something that was not at all in keeping with her aloofness and indifference of the past year. She sprang to her feet and ran from the room. He fancied, as she mounted the stairway, that her handkerchief was at her eyes.

LONG into the evening he sat before the fire, smoking innumerable cigars—thinking—thinking. At hand-grips with financial disaster he yet experienced an unaccountable lightening of spirit. The feeling defied analysis, yet it was undeniably there.

At length he rose and went to his rooms. He slipped out of his dinner jacket and donned a lounging-robe. There came a knock on the door. Surprised, he said: "Come in."

Doris was vivid in a brightly embroidered Japanese kimono; a dark-blue thing with embroidery of impossible birds and gleaming flowers. He eyed her curiously; this was the first time she had visited his rooms in months. He wondered; but she was grave now, and impassive. All trace of emotion had departed. Her voice was limpid and casually conversational.

"I want to talk with you, Donald."

"Very good."

"In a practical way. Tell me: just how embracing is this—reverse—you have suffered?"

Quite matter-of-factly he made his report. He was virtually bankrupt—barely enough money to pay off his creditors. "The home must be sold, and the cottage in Miami. Your jewelry—that's yours. No—don't offer. It really isn't needed: I have sufficient to pay my debts. I own, peculiarly enough, a business—or the possibility of one."

"You own a business?"

He grinned, but it was not a sardonic grin. "Yes. A year or more ago I accepted a mortgage on a first-class garage. The place failed—too much overhead. I foreclosed. It is now mine. But that is all I do own. Figures are horribly embarrassing, and close figuring on my own position indicates that I am as close to being broke as a man can be. And I don't understand, Doris, your attitude about the divorce. It seems unreasonable.

"It isn't. Oh! don't misunderstand — I want the divorce as much as you do. For us to continue living together is utterly senseless. We mean nothing to each other. If this thing—if things—hadn't occurred, I would have been anxious to go ahead. Now it's impossible."

"I see. And what do you propose?"

"Just this." She leaned forward, tense and earnest. "We wish to divorce each other. We can't do it now because it wouldn't be fair to me. People would say that I left you because you lost your money. All right—I refuse to give them that ammunition to use against me But that doesn't change my feelings—our feelings. And I have a proposition to make."

SHE was silent for a moment. Her face was lighted with interest; Donald found himself regarding her through new eyes. 'What is it, Doris?"

"I shall earn my divorce!"

"You will what?"

"Earn my divorce."

"I'm afraid I don't understand."

"Let me explain." She spoke quickly, the words fairly tumbling over one another. "Beneath all your austerity I've never doubted that a man lurked. I don't believe you're the type to sit back and let fate hit you with never an effort to hit back. I believe that you are a fighter."

"Thank you, Doris." An hour before that remark would have been freighted with bitter sarcasm: now it was simply spoken, meaning no more and no less than it said.

"I don't believe that you will accept a position from one of your friends; you've too much pride for that, haven't you?"

"Quite."

"And you must work. Now, why not this: the idea clarifies as I speak. For two years you've had a hobby—automobiles. You've also had a pet topic of conversation: personal guaranteed high-class service. You tell me that you own a garage, that it will still be yours after your debts are paid. Donald, why don't you give the public high-class auto service, double service, double speed—and double prices?"

She paused. The air of the room was surcharged with the magnetism of her own intense personality. It galvanized the man.

"By George! That's an idea. I say! A garage—high-class work on high-class cars—personal supervision. I'd do that myself, and I'm an expert on internal-combustion motors. A play for the high-class custom, and perfect service guaranteed. Double wages to my men and double prices from my customers—advertising slogan: 'Is it worth double money to secure perfect service?' By jingo! Doris—it's wonderful. I haven't been so eager in years!"

"And you'll do it?"

"Do it?" His face was radiant—boyish even. "Why, you couldn't keep me from it. It's a knockout. I'm talking like a mechanic already. I'll start right away."

Her eyes were shining. "I'm so glad, Donald; so very, very glad. And I'll help. We'll get a little two-room-and-kitchenette apartment, and when the housework is done I'll come to the office and keep your books—and files—and whatever else it is that garage offices have. And we'll make a success of it. And when we've done that I can divorce you, feeling that I have earned my freedom."

Divorce! The word filled the room, stifling the camaraderie of a moment since. The man stopped as though he had been struck physically. A hurt look came into his eyes and a bit of his habitual grimness returned.

"I see. I forgot that this is to be a prison sentence for you: a term at hard labor in anticipation of freedom. Yes. I forgot that for a moment. I apologize."

But she was unruffled. "Tomorrow, Donald, we'll get together as business partners. We'll wind up your affairs and lay plans for the future. I am anxious to start. It means so much to me"——

"I haven't a doubt. And of course we'll be successful: any undertaking which has so worthy an end must succeed. We are striving for more than mere money—we're working shoulder to shoulder for freedom—from each other."

She gazed at him level-eyed, imperturbable. "Precisely, Donald. "Don't you believe it is worth the effort?"

"That," he answered shortly, "is for you to decide."

THE launching of the business involved a mass of detail work; irksome, irritating, unforeseen details which were doubly difficult to him because of his unfamiliarity with business. But slowly and surely order was brought out of chaos.

The garage which was left to him after his creditors had been paid proved to be unusually well fitted to the project. It was roomy and furnished with the most modern of equipment. There was a glassed-in office which Doris insisted on beautifying.

Donald's first direct move was to engage the man whom he considered, as the result of long experience, the finest automobile mechanic in the city, and he also employed an electrical expert.

With this force in hand, Donald launched a campaign of advertising. He selected The Motor Service Corporation as his name, and his slogan was "Double Service at Double Prices." His campaign was directed at the owners of fine cars—men who wanted results and were willing to pay the price. His ex-intimates were amused and tolerant. They very cheerfully patronized him at first and later became enthusiastic customers because the service was more than merely excellent.

From the moment The Motor Service Corporation was launched the Doris whom Donald had known since marriage ceased to exist. Without complaint or harking back to the days of greater affluence, she buckled to her self-appointed task. And she worked as hard as he did—or harder.

She found a dainty little two-room-and-kitchenette apartment in a starkly new and amazingly gaunt apartment house. He was amazed to learn that Doris could cook well. She disdained a servant, save once a week for heavy cleaning. The washing, of course, was given out. It was at her insistence that he resigned memberships in the Country Club and the City Club; although she forced him to retain his card at the Athletic. Within a month they had settled into a domestic groove.

And after the apartment was straightened in the mornings Doris would appear in the office and busy herself with the books. She proved to be an excellent office woman. She evolved a card-index system for supplies needed, attended to the reordering, sent out the bills, handled the bank deposits, chatted with patrons—until recently her intimate friends—and her manner was so bright and cheerful and optimistic that many who came to condole went away a trifle envious. Society shook its head doubtfully.

"It just shows that you never can tell," was its sage comment. "I would have taken oath that the Ryders were on the verge of divorce. And now, well, it's simply wonderful."

"AND she worked as hard as he did—or harder."

THEIR domestic relations were anomalous, and not entirely lacking in zest. One of their two rooms contained a large closet, behind the door of which was concealed a swinging bed. This served as Doris' bedroom; the other was Donald's. She invariably left the shop in time to market for dinner, prepare it, and greet him with the calm air of the woman who has been at home all day preparing for her husband's return. He marveled more and more, and wondered how long it would last. Perhaps, he thought at first, it was the novelty which interested her; but as the months whirled by and the novelty wore away, her absorption in this new life did not appear to diminish; instead she took greater pride in her work at the shop and exhibited more and more enthusiasm over her task as housekeeper.

The business grew slowly, but it grew healthily. Among the owners of fine cars in the city there developed a stereotyped comment: "If there's anything wrong with your car take it to Don Ryder. He charges, but he gives service."

Eight months after starting in business, Donald made his first step in a carefully meditated program of expansion; he leased a small building adjoining his garage and laid in, part on cash and part on credit, a large stock of accessories and parts.

He and Doris held a little tete-a-tete celebration when this was decided upon. They were more like a pair of children than they had ever been during their husband-and-wife days.

"I believe I'm going to put it over, Doris."

"I know you are. Right now"——

"Precisely. The big money in the automobile game lies in the sale of parts. It is my ideal to be able, eventually, to pay cash for parts and to stock them for all makes of cars. I want to handle the finest line of accessories in the city. 'If you want it, Ryder can give it to you!' Some line like that, see? Do you know, the more I see of the service I give, the sorrier I get that I'm not wealthy so that I could have the pleasure of patronizing us."

She laughed. "Perhaps some day"——

The smile died from her lips. His eyes were bent to her. "No, I didn't mean that, Doris. I hope I never get that wealthy—again."

They finished their meal in silence. She was conscious of his scrutiny, knew well the thoughts which were agitating him, but neither by word nor sign did she give any indication that she understood.

SHE was not unmindful of the change that had occurred in their lives, and she realized, too, that it was not transitory. Certain fundamentals of their nature had been altered. She know that she was a different person, just as she knew that he was a different man. They were shoulder to shoulder, salvaging happiness; striving as partners to earn their freedom.

The stock of parts and accessories increased the efficiency of The Motor Service Corporation and slowly builded its bank balance. In the year which followed the business passed from the category of "solid" to the classification of "successful." One by one, hand-picking his men, Donald Ryder hired additional mechanics until he had under him a force of factory-trained experts, each a master of a certain type of fine car. The machine-shop equipment was augmented and modernized; two carmine roadsters were bought and equipped as wreckers for road service; another building was leased, furnished as a retail store and devoted exclusively to the sale of accessories. In the office now there were two stenographers and a trained bookkeeper; Doris had become office manager.

So far the corporation had invested its profits in itself. At the end of the third year it possessed very little cash, but boasted a great capital worth. Success had bred success. It was doing capacity business and never faltering in the quality of its service.

Crashing With the Shenandoah

controls.) We were still a little ahead of our schedule and still thought we would make Zanesville on time. We were due there at 5:40. After going to 2100 feet we began to advance a little. The Captain was looking through the window on the port side at a cloud in the northwest. The cloud didn't look serious. Lieutenant Anderson, the aerologist, was watching it, too. None of us thought it amounted to anything.

"We continued to buck the wind, making a little ground speed. Then we began to rise suddenly. I noticed by my watch that it was 5:35 o'clock. The elevator man nosed her down but she kept rising vertically. 'Captain,' he said, 'she's rising two meters a second. I've got her nose down but I can't stop her.' Captain Lansdowne ordered the speed of the engine increased. We had a good descending angle but she kept going up, rising very rapidly, and the Captain ordered Houghton to valve gas with the hand valves. (Lieutenant A. R. Houghton, who was killed.) He valved while I clocked him with a stop watch. The Captain had already sent Anderson up to see that the automatic valves were working.

"When we had lost a great deal of gas the rise was materially checked. We knew we had lost so much buoyancy and when she started down she would crash sure unless we slipped ballast mighty fast; so the Captain ordered water valved. We were still rising just a little but we knew we couldn't keep going up forever. Some time soon we were bound to start down—and we knew it would be a fast trip. So Captain Lansdowne told me to go up and be sure the men were standing by ready to slip the fuel tanks and water bags.

EXPLANATION OF THE LETTERED PHOTOGRAPH:
(A)—Control and radio car. (B)—Point at which the ship broke in two. (C)—Forward power cars. (D)—Center power cars. (E)—After power car. (F)—to—(B)—Portion of the tail section which was smashed when that section crashed on the hilltop.

"AS I stepped on the ladder the ship banked. It is all right for an airplane to bank but it means trouble for a dirigible. I heard a crackling sound just as I climbed out on the catwalk. It sounded to me as if some of the wooden struts supporting the control car had gone. We were nosing up at a very steep angle. I had noticed as I climbed the ladder that the car seemed to lag a little. Its supports were supposed to hold it at an almost rigid angle to the ship. When we nosed up so steeply I supposed that the weight of the car exercised so much leverage on the struts that they gave way.

"I went on toward the rear, passing Lieutenant Mayer on the catwalk. I wanted to reach the fuel tanks quickly, for I felt sure we would have to slip them. It was just a few seconds after I climbed into the keel and started back that there was a crash—and about 20 feet ahead of me I saw the whole after part of the ship leave.

"I just stood there and looked at it. I couldn't believe my eyes for a minute. I thought it must be my imagination. But there she went, sailing away and down. Almost immediately I heard a terrible thud on the ground. I think that was the control car. I just stood watching the tail section through the open end of the ship. A minute or two later I saw, or at least I think I saw, it hit the ground."

What Lieutenant-Commander Rosendahl saw was probably the first crash of the tail section when it hit the hilltop and bounded away. For the description of what was happening in that section, we again pick up the narrative of Lieutenant Richardson.

"When I felt the ship breaking in two," he said, "my first thought was that we had crashed into a peak. I still had the mistaken impression that we were crossing the mountains. When the crash came the ship was in an almost vertical position with her nose up. Then the nose began to fall and it went down at least four times as fast as it had gone up. There was a continuous rending and clanging of metal girders. As the forward part of the section went down there was a tremendous rush of wind toward the tail. There in the dark I didn't know what had happened but I realize now that we were falling, and naturally the air was rushing in through the open end where she had broken.

"I will never forget the weird rushing whistling sound it made. It was uncanny. I scrambled back toward the tail, holding onto girders and wires and anything else I could get my hands on. Seven or eight men around me were doing the same thing. Ordinarily we would have gone forward, but as that end was pointing downward we instinctively climbed back to the other way. It's a good thing we did, for some of the men who happened to be down near the break were killed when we hit the hill.

"Our section changed angles several times. Sometimes it would be going forward with the open end down, then it would pitch back the other way and fall with the tail down. I remember thinking once of the fact that I had lost my coat and that my automobile keys were in the pocket. I guess the souvenir fiends have them now," he added with a grimace.

"We all kept scrambling toward the tail," Richardson continued. "Finally, through an open hatch below my feet I saw trees flitting past. We were about 200 feet over them, so we already had fallen more than 2000 feet. All this happened much faster than it takes me to tell it. It was only a matter of seconds. I saw that the section was not only falling but was sailing over the ground at a very high speed—50 or 60 miles an hour.

"THE ground kept getting closer to us. Suddenly there was a most horrible crash. The shock threw me completely off my feet, and left me swinging from a girder by my hands. It felt as if every joint in my body had been jarred loose. I can't understand yet how we all held on, but we did. Think of hitting the ground at a speed of 50 miles an hour! That was when we crashed into the hill. Of course we struck at an angle, or the section would have been smashed all to pieces and more of us killed. As it was, the three poor fellows in one of the forward power cars got it and so did two who were in that end of the keel. The remarkable thing is that three who were in that end of the keel were not killed, although one was badly hurt.

"Immediately after the crash I felt the ship rising again and once more I saw trees under me. The crash had torn off a lot of fabric from the under side and I could see everything below me. We were going down over the other side of the hill. She began to brush the tree tops and the limbs were ripping fabric from her. I saw two big trees right ahead, one dead and one green, and I wondered whether the limbs would come up through the bottom and impale us or whether the framework would collapse and cut us to pieces.

"We were still sliding along at a speed of 35 or 40 miles an hour and there was a continuous sound of ripping and tearing as we bumped along over the tree tops. I had got as far back as the after engine car. I saw a big limb catch it and tear it off right under my feet, and when it hit the ground down among the trees there was a flash. I waited for the explosion, because I had been wondering all the time if the fuel tanks would explode. I discovered later that the flash was caused by a pocket flashlight in the car.

"We fell right down through the edge of the trees just above a little valley. The section veered, slowed up, and started to settle. When we were 15 or 20 feet above the ground somebody said: 'We'd better get out of here.' We didn't want to be inside when she hit because she might crumple up or she might rise again.

"Right at our feet was the little ladder which had led down to the after engine car. A couple of men climbed down it and swung off. I followed. It was a patent folding ladder and when I clamped my legs around it to slide down it folded together and caught my hands."

Richardson exhibited his lacerated fingers and palms.

"I knew I had to get out because there were other men waiting to come down and, besides, the ship was likely to crash at any second and crush me under it. So I simply tore my hands out and fell. But of all the long distance telephone at Washington and tell her we had crashed but that I was all right."

THE CRASH. As the mighty Shenandoah looked after she had met her fate.

Far up in that nose section, serenely floating among the clouds, was Lieutenant-Commander Rosendahl with six officers and men. Let him conclude the story of what was happening up there—more than a mile from the ground.

"As I watched the tail section float away from me," he continued, "my section began to rise rapidly. I realized at once that it was a question of free ballooning it. So far as I knew then, I was alone. My first thought was that I would have a hell of a time valving gas and slipping ballast all by myself. I decided I would climb up as high as I could and slash the gas bags with my knife and then slide down and start getting rid of ballast. But first I sang out to see if there was anybody with me, and Mayer answered from up forward, and Halliburton from the other side. It was lighter at the open end and I saw Halliburton and Shevlowitz between me and the break. Mayer called back that Col. Hall, Lieut. Anderson and Chief Rigger MacCarthy were up there with him."

At this point a dramatic episode which had just transpired may be related. At the moment when the control car broke away, Lieut. Anderson was climbing the ladder to the keel. He had just pulled himself up and was sitting on the catwalk when the control car fell from underneath him tearing out much of the framework to which it had been attached. Anderson found himself with his legs hanging in space, with nothing between his feet and the earth but 2500 feet of air, and the flimsy walkway likely to give way at any time. Mayer, standing near, saw the predicament and passed a wire to Anderson who looped it around his body, then Mayer and Col. Hall pulled him back to comparative safety. But whether anybody in that ship could judge himself safe yet may be seen from the continuation of Rosendahl's description of their plight.

"I ASKED Mayer if he could reach any of the gas valves. He said he had his hands on one. Fuel tanks and water ballast were near Halliburton and Shevlowitz and there was a fuel tank near me. Being between them I passed the word to Mayer and the men forward to valve gas and when it became necessary I told Halliburton and Shevlowitz, on the other end, to slip ballast. We were maintaining a fairly even keel, rocking some, but not badly. I could see that we were moving in a circle at a speed of about 30 miles an hour. We were out on the edge of the twister which had cracked up the ship.

"Mayer kept valving gas and finally we began to descend. When we began to fall too rapidly Halliburton and Shevlowitz slipped ballast. We fell rather rapidly at times, but it wasn't long before we saw that our method was succeeding and that we had fairly good control of her. I don't know how long we were drifting, but it must have been about an hour. We looked for trees to land in, to break our fall, and finally saw that we were going to hit one. We crashed into it, but it didn't stop us.

"I asked Mayer if anybody was hurt and a minute later he called back and said MacCarthy must have got it, because he didn't answer. The others were all right. We learned later that the tree had knocked MacCarthy out of the ship and that he had fallen down through the tree. He has some broken bones but will recover.

"Before this, we had let down two trail ropes and a couple of mooring wires, hoping they would catch on trees. After bumping into the tree we rose again to about 200 feet. The wires and ropes were attached to the nose and as they dragged the ground and momentarily caught on trees and fences, the effect was to turn the section around, so that the nose was behind and a little lower than the open end.

"Several automobiles had been following us as closely as the roads would allow and one fellow had got pretty close. Finally I saw that we were drifting straight toward a farmhouse on a little knoll and I expected the section to wipe it right off the hill. We bumped into a shed and took the roof off. Then, fortunately, one of our ropes caught on something and checked us. We were right in the yard. A couple of men were standing there and we bellowed at them to grab the ropes and give them a turn around trees. They stood there a minute with their mouths open; then one did grab a rope and wrap it around a stump.

"I climbed up as high as I could and slashed a couple of the gas bags with my knife. Her nose settled to the ground. Anderson, Mayer and Col. Hall jumped out. They ran around to the open end and threw a rope up. Halliburton, Shevlowitz and I slid down.

"I was still afraid that she might yaw around and make kindling wood of the farmer's house, so we got two revolvers and a shotgun and shot the gas bags full of holes. Then I went to a telephone, called the telegraph office at Caldwell and gave them a message for the Navy Department. When I finished the clerk said there was somebody there I might want to talk to and Capt. Bauch came to the phone. He told me what had happened to the tail section."

WHAT followed—the arrival of help, the search for and identification of the dead, the ghoulish pillaging of the wreck by local souvenir hunters—has been fully told. But certain facts and explanations should be added to round out the complete picture of the disaster.

Among the eight who died in the control car's dreadful plunge were Commander Lansdowne, Lieutenant-Commander Hancock and Lieut. Houghton. Five more lives were dashed out when the open end of the tail section crashed against the hilltop—three in one of the power cars and two in the keel. That leaves one death to be accounted for. The fourteenth fatality was Lieutenant E. W. Sheppard. The manner of his death is not definitely known, but the mute evidence of his body indicated an isolated tragedy.

It is supposed that Sheppard was either over the control car when its supports pulled out or was at the exact place where the ship broke in two. There was no wreckage near the spot where he fell, but tightly grasped in one of his hands was a rope and in the other a wire. In a desperate effort to save himself he had grabbed them—but they had pulled out. He may have swung from them for some time before they gave way.

Three in the keel survived the crash on the hilltop, although one was seriously injured. Those, added to the 19 who rode down the tail section, and the

It was reliable to the ultimate degree and stood four-square behind every job it did and every sale it made.

And yet, with it all, Donald Ryder felt that there was something lacking; a baffling sensation of incompleteness persisted. He tried unsuccessfully to analyze it. He took stock of himself; harked back three years and found it very difficult to believe that he was the same man or Doris the same woman. Financial disaster, their queer compact had developed unsuspected traits in both. Yet he wondered whether they had been changed basically. Or, at least, whether she had. Her actions were different. She was more alive, more vitally interested in things, but toward him she maintained her attitude of scrupulous impersonality. He set his teeth grimly; somehow he wished that she was not so steadfast.

It was less than six months later that he received an appointment request from Gardner J. Hanrahan, a retired capitalist. Hanrahan had been from the first one of his best patrons. The grizzled old man looked out at him from under bushy brows and growled a greeting.

"Sit down. I've got something to say."

Donald sat. "Yes, sir?"

"This business of yours—it is very successful. I've been investigating. Your wife has shown me the books. Now, I don't believe in beating around the bush. I'm not a dickerer. I think you ought to expand—open up elsewhere. Your idea is sound, your methods are excellent. You need capital. I have plenty. I want to buy a half interest in your business for $50,000!"

Donald Ryder stared. In a moment it came to him—the astounding fact that within three and one-half years he had built a business which, on this conservative man's cold-blooded estimate, was worth not less than $100,000. That was his first thought. His second had nothing whatever to do with business. With eyes half closed, his mind conjured a picture of Doris. The big voice boomed through the room.

"Well, what's the matter? Have you gone to sleep? Why don't you answer?"

"Mr. Hanrahan—really, I"——

"Oh! to thunder with that. — or no?"

"I'm afraid it's no, sir."

"Good. Fine. I thought you had the right stuff. I hoped for your own sake you would turn me down. It's cheap at $50,000, but that's my best offer. I'm hard-boiled."

"Yes, sir."

"Be hard-boiled yourself: that's the road to success. Now, I'm busy. Get out."

But Donald did not immediately get out. He was thinking, and thinking hard. Finally, he spoke. "Mr. Hanrahan, you just hinted that you were looking for a gilt-edged investment."

"Yes—always."

"You put a minimum appraisal on my business of $100,000. I should like to borrow $50,000 from you on that business, giving you as security a five-year mortgage, payable $5000 a year for four years and the balance on the fifth, the loan to yield 7 per cent, payable semiannually."

The brows beetled. "Why?"

"I want $50,000."

"None of my business, eh? Come back tomorrow. I'll let you know."

Two days later, after an audit of the company's books, the business was mortgaged to Hanrahan and the $50,000 paid to Ryder. He deposited the money to the firm's credit, and then wrote another check. When he rose from his desk, Doris was donning hat and cape. She looked very pretty and tiny and efficient as she stood before him.

"I want to ask a favor, Doris?"

"Yes?"

"Please splurge tonight. Get a big dinner—lots of fancy things—you know. We'll eat late. Let Martha go after the cooking is done. I want to talk to you."

If she caught the serious nuance in his tone, she gave no sign. She set the dinner hour at 7:30 and waved him good-by. He did very little work for the balance of the afternoon. The immediate future seemed fraught with great potentialities.

At 7 he entered the tiny apartment; they had three rooms now—his room and hers and a real dining room. From the kitchenette drifted appetizing odors; and when she summoned him he came forth in dinner clothes. But the impression he expected to create was somewhat negatived by his amazement. Doris smiled at him from a gown of sapphire and silver. They then both fell silent and there was a peculiarly constrained air in the room.

Martha served dinner and left. It was a very wonderful dinner, gauged by the standards to which they had accustomed themselves during the past three years; there was cocktail of fresh lobster and hors d'ouvres and filet of sole and succulent lamb chops and creamed potatoes and dainty ramekins filled with French peas and hearts of lettuce with Thousand Island dressing and ice cream served with little chocolate squares which Doris herself had made; then coffee and cheese and tiny toasted crackers.

He tried to appear at ease, but knew that his conversation was forced and unnatural. It was almost as though he were dining with a stranger. No, not that; he felt like a man at dinner with the girl whom he hopes some day to marry.

They cleared the table together, but dispensed with dishwashing. And then with the big center light extinguished, they seated themselves side by side on the lounge which had been brought with them from the other home. There was no light in the room save the piano lamp which shed its soft radiance over her little face.

She waited patiently for him to speak, and somehow he found that speech came with difficulty. There was so much he desired to say and so little that he could say and it never occurred to him that in all this three and a half years she might have believed that he had never swerved from his desire for a divorce. And yet there had been times when she had looked closely at his lean, finely featured face and wondered and wondered.

"Doris, where did you get that dinner dress?"

She blushed. "I've had this for more than three and a half years."

"It is the one you wore—that night?"

"Yes."

"I see. Queer: the same dress. This dinner suit of mine. We haven't had much chance for dressing up in the last three years, have we?"

"Have you missed it?"

"Yes. Delightfully."

Silence—which she broke. "I just let down the skirt a little and changed the waistline."

"It is the same dress. I wonder if you guessed"——

"That you were thinking about—us? Perhaps."

He leaned back and clasped his hands behind his head. Abruptly he questioned: "Have you been happy this past three years?"

"Happy?" She looked at him curiously. "We—we didn't do this—for happiness, did we?"

"Ye-es, in a way. The happiness of separation."

"And you, Donald?"

"I—I—I felt—different. It is difficult to analyze just how I have felt. I have enjoyed it."

There was a hint of bitterness in her voice: "Like camping out?"

And a touch of the old sardonic humor in his answer: "Perhaps."

Then for a while they said nothing. This was not at all as he had expected. He was afraid to trust himself. Now he took from the pocket of his dinner jacket an envelope which he handed to her. She looked at him and then at the envelope.

"For me?"

"Yes, Doris."

She took from the envelope a check. Her eyes widened. "To my order—for $50,000! What does it mean?"

He sketched briefly the details of his conference with Hanrahan. "That is the estimated value of a half-interest in the business, Doris. For three and a half years you have worked shoulder to shoulder with me—for your freedom. I believe that amount will prove sufficient."

She tried to appear calm, but the effort was not entirely successful, and he—blind as he was—could not discern the emotional stir within her. She heard his voice: "I appreciate all you've done, Doris; without you this measure of success would have been impossible. You have done your part and more. If ever a woman earned her independence you have. There it is. I am glad—for your sake."

His lips were tight set. She looked at him steadily, and suddenly her eyes filled with tears. She tried futilely to control herself—then rose without a word and crossed the room. The door of her bedroom closed behind her and he fancied that from beyond the door he heard a sob.

One hour passed; two. The man had not moved. And then the door to Doris' room opened and she came to him and stood before him; dainty and exquisite in the silver and sapphire dinner gown. Her hand was extended and in it he saw his check—the check which was to buy her freedom.

It had been torn across and then across again.

"Donald"——

"Yes, Doris?"

"Ever since we were first married we have been honest with each other. It was a trust each placed in the other, and I do not believe that either of us has been false to that trust. Sometimes our honesty has amounted to brutality."

She paused, then went on rapidly: "You asked me if I have been happy during this three and a half years. I evaded your question. I shall answer it now. I have been happy—happier than ever before in my life; happier, perhaps, than I shall ever be again. And I have been miserable too. No; stay where you are. Let me finish. It is hard to say what I am going to say.

"Tomorrow, Donald, I shall leave this apartment. We will go through with the divorce. You have worked for three years—faithfully and hard—for that. I made the conditions, and I shall carry them through. But I cannot take the money from you. It seems too sacred a thing to use—for such a purpose. I have destroyed the check."

He rose and put his hands on her shoulders, looked down into her eyes.

"Why—why is it too sacred?"

She did not evade. She met his gaze with glorious directness.

"Let us not put into our parting, Donald, a lack of honesty which is foreign to our natures. When I leave you in the morning, I want you to know one thing—one thing"——

"And that is?"

"I love you."

His hands tightened until the fingers dug deep into the soft white flesh. It was hard to understand—difficult to grasp in a second the significance of her words.

And then his hungry arms were about her and she was crushed against him—held in a clasp which she could not doubt, and he was talking to her—talking foolishly and sentimentally—talking as he had talked on that other wondrous night, when she had promised to be his wife.

Slowly her arms crept about his neck. The fingers of her right hand opened.

The torn bits of the check floated to the floor and lay there—forgotten.

Crashing With the Shenandoah

seven men who were in the nose section, complete the roster of the rescued.

Before we close, however, Lieut Anderson's description of the events immediately preceding the accident is worth telling, because it covers some points not noted by other survivors.

"I had turned in, but was called at 3 a. m.," he said. "The wind was rising and I found that we were not making more than five miles an hour ground speed; although the motors were wide open. That was not particularly alarming. When we made the transcontinental flight last year we passed one town three times while going full speed ahead. That is, we passed it, were blown backwards over it, and then passed over it again—all the time going full speed ahead.

"Captain Lansdowne sent me up to see that the automatic valves were working, because we had begun to rise despite the fact that she was being held down. I found the bags not fully inflated and I saw that the valves were in working order. I returned to the control car and learned that we were still rising and had reached 4000 feet, although Houghton had opened all the hand valves. She kept rising and got to 5000 feet notwithstanding that we had heavy water and fuel ballast aboard. I realized by this time that we were in bad condition, but I had no idea that the ship would crack up. The chief danger in my mind and, I think, in everyone's mind, was that she might crash when she eventually stopped rising and started down. We had lost a lot of gas.

"I went to the keel again, found the bags full and all automatic and hand valves working. I knew that when she stopped rising she would fall damned fast. It was while I was up there that I felt this terrifying blast of cold air through the ship. I noticed that the gas bags were getting very flabby. I returned to the control car and found that we were falling very rapidly. It is rather curious that during both the ascent and descent we had been able to control the angle of the ship with the elevators while unable to control the altitude.

"We valved water, then, to check our fall. I cannot say whether we stopped falling or not. At any rate, the ship suddenly nosed down very sharply. It was the first time we had lost control of the angle. Lieutenant Mayer and Colonel Hall had just gone up and I started up the ladder to see about slipping the fuel tanks. I had just reached the catwalk when the ship cracked up and the control car went out."

He was asked to tell of his narrow escape, but he merely smiled. "Just say," he remarked, "that I was sitting on the catwalk and that it was some time later before I succeeded, with the assistance of Mayer, in getting to a position of greater safety." There was no false modesty in this simple statement: this was exactly the attitude of every survivor with whom the writer talked.

Chief Machinist Halliburton probably had a better view of the actual breaking of the ship than anybody who lived to describe it. "We were rising fast," he said, "although the Captain had her nose down and was driving her toward the ground at an air speed of 60 miles an hour. I was sent up to be ready to slip the fuel tanks when we began to fall. She started down and fell to about 3000 feet. I reached for the nippers to cut the tanks loose when she nosed up suddenly and I heard her crack behind me. It was a rending crashing sound, very metallic. It happened as quick as you could snap your fingers. I grabbed a girder and turned around and saw the whole end of the ship wide open about ten feet from me. Just a few seconds later I saw the rest of the ship on the ground.

"Shevlowitz was with me. I heard Commander Rosendahl sing out and saw him sitting up in the girders about 20 feet forward. He said: 'We'll have to free balloon it down, men,' and began giving orders to Lieutenant Mayer up forward to valve gas. He told me and Shevlowitz to stand by ready to slip ballast. After that it was just a question of free ballooning, with Commander Rosendahl giving orders."

That is the story of the wreck of the Shenandoah.

"Make America Musical"

The Hohner Harmonica is endorsed by musical and educational authorities as the logical instrument with which to encourage children to learn music by playing it.

"The Harmonica was the first instrument I ever knew" says Irving Berlin, nationally known composer and music publisher. "It is natural that a healthy youngster should take to the Harmonica, and from the Harmonica it is but a step to another musical instrument and a musical education. It will not surprise me if the Harmonica becomes a most important factor in making America a more musical nation."

Anyone can quickly learn to play a Hohner Harmonica with the aid of the Free Instruction Book, procurable at all dealers. If your dealer is out of copies, write M. Hohner, Inc., Dept. 427 New York City.

CAROL LEE, 505 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

Any man or woman who accepts my proposition can be sure of a fair, square deal. Our record of 18 years of honest dealings and our resources of over a million dollars stand back of every promise we make.

This Is Your Chance to Make $100 a Week

A Splendid Proposition Now Offered To Men And Women That Brings Amazing Profits For Delightful Work

Yes, if you want to make $100 a week clear, net, cash profit, this is your chance to do it.

I want to tell you how, without any training or experience, you can immediately begin to make money—how you can establish yourself in a big, profitable business, without investment, training or experience. I want to tell you how you can make at least $50 a week in spare time—how you can have a business of your own that will get bigger and more profitable day by day, how you can have hundreds of customers, an automobile of your own and tremendous profits.

Anyone, Anywhere, Can Do It

I don't care what your experience has been. I don't care what kind of work you are doing now, nor how much you are making, how old you are, or whether you are a man or woman. My proposition is so simple, so easy, so square and so clean-cut that you are bound to make a success of it.

$750—One Month's Profit

You can do as well as H. T. Pearl, of Oklahoma, whose earnings quickly reached $750 a month. You can start at once. Within a week your profits will be pouring in.

Think! R. L. Marshall, of New Jersey, cleared $80 in five hours. Jacob Myron, of Connecticut, made $13 his first afternoon. C. Vaughn, of Ohio, has earned as high as $125 a week. Mrs. K. R. Roof, of South Carolina—a married woman with two children—made a clear profit of $50 the first week in her spare time. Eugene Ducat, of Illinois, was formerly a mechanic on a salary of $30 a week, yet on taking up my proposition he cleared $45 the first two days. You can do as well as any of these people, because they were no better qualified to make a success of this business than you are right now.

Amazing Profits Without Investment

If you write at once we will give you free all the facts about this great business. We will tell you how without investment, without training, you can immediately become our Authorized Representative in your territory and start making money.

We are the originators and manufacturers of "Zanol" Products. We make delicious Food Products that are wanted and needed in every home. We make Toilet Preparations, Soaps, Household and Laundry Necessities. We sell millions of products every year direct from factory to customer.

ZANOL THE BETTER WAY TO BUY

By this means we give greater values, fresher goods and lower prices than could be secured in stores. We have thousands of customers in every section of the United States. And now we want a Representative in your territory through whom our customers can send us their orders.

Accept This Offer

Never before have you been offered such a proposition as this. You can't fail. Our instructions are so clear and distinct, our proposition is so clean-cut and fair, that you are bound to make a success of it at once. Men and women who were formerly salesmen, bookkeepers, farmers, merchants, skilled and unskilled workmen, teachers, preachers—people with all sorts of training and experience—have found it an easy matter to make a big success as "Zanol" Representatives.

Send No Money

Just send me your name and I will tell you how to get started. I will give you all the facts. You do not need to risk a penny. You do not need to agree to do anything, nor pay anything. You owe it to yourself to find out about this great proposition before it is too late. So write now. Just put your name and address on the coupon and mail it to me at once.

Beauty that Lasts
All Day!

One—two—three—happy moments before your mirror and you need give no thought to your complexion! The perfectly natural color of your cheeks and lips lasts through the day—lasts all evening long. Never again will you be content with one rouge on cheeks and another on lips!

How does this happen? The new MOIST rouge, JARNAC! A brilliant, but true blood-red—one shade for any complexion, any lips—and with such perfect spread and blend it may not be detected a few inches away.

You must JARNAC cheeks and lips to realize what is wrong with your most careful attempts with crayon-like rouge. JARNAC, of pure solidified oils and pure color, is really waterproof and its youthful film of color does last.

JARNAC is really excellent for the skin, not to be compared with old-fashioned dry rouge compacts, the dust from which is rubbed into the helpless pores countless times daily—and, oh, how the soiled rouge puff revolts dainty femininity.

If you "want what you want" remember there is no "same thing" as JARNAC. Most druggists cheerfully sell it—on the red counter card—fifty cents. Or, direct of JARNAC, 540 W. Randolph St., Chicago.

Hop! Skip! through your pocketbook

But here are shoes made for hard wear and to reduce your children's shoe bills

MOST mothers have to think ahead constantly. It requires careful planning to keep boys and girls neatly dressed—and do it economically. They need so many things. Shoes, especially.

How they do destroy shoes! Scraping soles on pavements. Scratching uppers on trees and brambles. Scuffing toes on bricks. Grinding heels in gravel. Your pocketbook groans as you're off to the shoe store again and again.

But it really isn't necessary to go so often.

Thousands of mothers have discovered that a very substantial saving can be made in the shoe budget—without sacrificing their children's comfort or appearance in the least.

They've found shoes that really wear longer and actually cost less. Handsome, sturdy shoes that reflect quality. Shoes that have durability built into them. Endicott-Johnson shoes.

Of course there are very definite reasons why these shoes are better shoes. One is that they are tested shoes. Shoes built upon direct observation of the punishment robust boys and girls inflict on them.

Here's what we did: We put shoes on hundreds of boys and girls—the children of our E-J Workers. "Do your worst," we said, "but come back once a week and let us see those shoes."

We studied shoes as they were never studied before. We learned just where children were hardest on shoes. We tanned leather in a special way to give longer wear. We used heavier thread. We built stronger toes and heels. We were careful that these shoes were shaped correctly. Balanced right. So they'd wear right; so they could be readily resoled and again be mighty good shoes.

But we weren't satisfied with only strong shoes. Children do like good-looking shoes. We felt it was important to make them stylish and attractive. Altogether, we built shoes that had not only some, but all the qualities mothers look for in children's shoes.

And then, the price. Much lower, you'll probably find, than you've been used to paying! Why? Because huge manufacturing volume always makes possible lower price. We build millions and millions of pairs of shoes annually. We employ every modern method of making shoes, not only well, but economically. And by sharing with our 17,000 E-J Workers the rewards of our business, we secure workmanship of the highest order. You reap the benefit—better shoes; lower price.

Isn't this the answer to one of your biggest household worries?

Go to one of the 50,000 stores selling Endicott-Johnson shoes. If you don't know where there's one nearby, write to us. We'll tell you, gladly. See for yourself how little they cost. Boys' and girls' shoes as low as $2.50 to $3.50 (smaller sizes $1.50 to $2), according to size and grade. None more than $5.

Examine them. Look for the E-J trade-mark on the sole. Note the leather in these shoes. The honest shoemaking. The neat, sensible shapes. The fine styles. There are scores from which to choose — for school, dress and play. Take home a pair for each of the children and—

Mark the day you buy them

Watch these shoes wear. Compare them with other shoes you've bought. You'll save money, both in the wear and in the price, on Endicott-Johnson shoes.

C. M. DOLPH LEFT $1,000,000 ESTATE TO PHILANTHROPIES

Sheeda Institution of St. Louis and Parkville, Mo., College Share in the Bequests.

ANNUITY OF $5000 FOR HIS SISTER

Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. Named With Seamen's Institute in Late Man's Will.

The $1,000,000 estate of Clifford M. Dolph, late head of the Judge & Dolph Drug Co., was left chiefly to charitable and religious objects, by his will, filed today.

After providing an annuity of $5000 for his sister, Frances C. Dolph, and making other bequests amounting to $9000, the residue is left to be divided equally among the Seamen's Church Institute of New York, Park College of Parkville, Mo.; the Young Women's Christian Association of Cincinnati, the Young Men's Christian Association of the same city and the Sheeda Institution, 3459 Vista avenue, St. Louis, for the care of infirmables.

The gift to the Cincinnati Y. W. C. A. is to be used for a room to be a memorial to his mother, Eliza Dolph, and the bequest to the Y. M. C. A. is similarly for a memorial to his brother, Alex M. Dolph.

$5000 a Year for Sister.

As originally drawn, the will bequeathed the building at 615 Locust street, to the sister, Frances Dolph, to whom his furniture, household effects and pictures are also bequeathed. The will was changed, by a codicil, so as to provide a trust fund to yield the sister $5000 a year, and this sum is to be taken from other sources than the 615 Locust building, if necessary to guarantee it.

A bequest of $5000 is made to a niece, Mrs. Grace Smith, wife of Ordsell Smith of Pasadena, Cal., four bequests of $1000 Liberty bonds each are made, to Ohmer Briggle of Brookville, Ind.; Clarence Cordes of 826 West End avenue, New York; Patrick Haffey of 900 West Twenty-ninth avenue, Denver, and Bert D. W. Pollard of Brownsville, Tex. If the estate has not enough Liberty bonds, such bonds are to be purchased.

The executors, Frank K. Ryan of the National Bank of Commerce are directed to sell publicly or privately any or all the residue of the estate, converting it into cash and paying charitable bequests in cash.

As vice executors to Ryan, Walter Boehmer and E. G. H. Kessler are named. Another name appears in one codicil, which is superseded by a later one.

Dolph was unmarried, and resided with his sister. He was 67 years old. His holdings included the Dolph Building at Seventh and Olive streets. The will was made originally in March, 1920, and codicils were added up to last May.

EGGS 45 CENTS, BUTTER 59 CENTS, AFTER STEADY RISE

Usual Fall Season Increase in Retail and Wholesale Prices Has Been Under Way a Month.

The usual Fall season rise in the price of butter and eggs has been developing the last month, and today eggs are selling for 40 cents a dozen wholesale and 45 cents retail, while butter is selling for 54 cents a pound wholesale and 59 cents retail. A month ago eggs were five cents a dozen cheaper, and there has been a slow but steady rise in price. Butter also, since then, has increased five cents a pound on the price quoted a month ago. However, eggs are still eight cents lower this year than they were at the same time last year.

The quotations on the eggs were given by George Broaders, secretary of the St. Louis Butter, Egg & Poultry Exchange, who says he expects no further rise in their price, while H. M. Bohnlenartz, a Belleden merchant at 714 North Fourth street, the authority for the butter prices, declared butter would remain at nearly the present price for a time.
